PREFACE

IN bringing together for the first time the songs of Robert Burns with the melodies for which they were written I do not propose to criticize either. So far as the verses are concerned they have remained famous for more than a century, and are likely to continue famous independent of any literary criticism. So far as the airs are concerned—airs which go to make up the folk-music of Scotland, that particular form of unconscious art of which the vehemence, pathos, and often eccentric progressions have been known outside the limits of the country for the last 250 years—want of space forbids any criticism. A merely verbal description of music cannot convey any real impression to the general reader, and an imperfect technical account of Scottish music would be unsatisfactory to the expert. Both will doubtless prefer to read the music for themselves and form their own opinions. For this reason the Preface will be confined to an explanation of (1) Burns's own theory as a song-writer, (2) how he carried it into practice, and (3) what his qualifications were for writing and adapting his verses to pre-existing music.

To begin with, then, the term song as it is now used admits of more than one meaning. Originally it meant—and was invariably—a combination of poetry and music, something to be sung. It did not mean, as it often means nowadays, verse with or without tune; nor was it, like the songs of most modern poets, purely literary verse to which music might accidentally be attached. For Burns's songs, peculiarly, this latter meaning is insufficient, and I designate Burns a tone-poet because he wrote for music, and his songs with their airs are a study in tone-poetry.

His Commonplace Book (recording his experience about the age of twenty-three, and before he was known to the world) makes this evident, and shows beyond all doubt that he always associated music with his songs. Speaking, for example, of a forgotten old song of which he remembered that the verse and the tune were 'in fine unison with one another,' he says that when one would compose to these Scottish airs 'to sough [hum] the tune over and over is the readiest way to catch the inspiration and raise the Bard into that glorious enthusiasm so strongly characteristic of our old Scotch poetry'.¹ Again, late in life, when he declined to write for an unfamiliar air, he explains that until he was master of a tune in his own singing he never could compose for it, adding that his invariable way was to consider the expression of the music and choose his theme, 'humming every now and then the air with the verses I have framed'.² So invariable with him was this way of writing that his first song was made for the favourite reel of the girl he loved, and his last for the 'difficult measure' of a 'beautiful strathspey'; and (though it may be that he was elevating the music he wrote for at the expense of his own reputation as a poet) when he said that some of his songs were often mere rhymes to express airs, he spoke a literal truth.

Nevertheless, though he knew more of the popular music of his country than any man of his time, and he is unique³ among distinguished poets in writing for pre-existing music, this side of him has been rarely noticed, if at all. His achievement in the reconstruction of old poetry seems to have blinded his critics' eyes to his knowledge of its sister art, Scottish music, of which he was the apostle. Perhaps his very uniqueness in this respect has caused it to escape notice. Old melodies as a vehicle for song have been despised or ignored by literary poets themselves, from Corneille, who execrated the commands of his royal master to write for them, saying that a hundred verses cost him less than two words of a song⁴ (que deux mots de chanson), to Lord Byron, who, after trial, flatly refused to be harnessed in music⁵. And though the exquisite songs of the Elizabethan poets were made to be sung, and many of them are to be found only in contemporary music books, there is this difference between their work and Burns, that the music was composed to fit their words, but his words were written for music¹. Burns adopted what other poets rejected—popular airs—and he adopted them consciously. Just as when he was taunted with ‘the ignominy of the Excise,’ he replied that he would rather be thought to do credit to his profession than borrow credit from it; so when Thomson implied a censure on his musical taste, he said that although many cultured persons found no merit in his favourite tunes, that was no reason why being cheaply pleased ‘I should deny myself that pleasure².’ He did not deny himself that pleasure, and as the result his songs are an epitome of Scottish music still known and still admired.

Considering this it is the more remarkable that Burns’s biographers should with one accord have ignored or omitted a description of his musical perception and his treatment of music. One would have thought that, apart from his peculiar method of writing always to airs—a method which probably goes a long way towards explaining why his songs have outlived and made of no account the songs of so many other poets—his mere musical-editorial talent must have attracted notice. If he communicated to Johnson’s Museum only one-half of the forty-five traditional airs which Stenhouse assigns to him, the record is remarkable enough for an amateur musician. But his biographers have not allowed him any musical standing whatever. Currie obviously accepted without comment Murdoch’s opinion, who said of him that he was a remarkably dull boy and his voice untunable, and that it was long before he learned to distinguish one tune from another³. A verdict of tune-deafness seems to have been considered proven against Burns, and little or nothing said to counteract the belief. So that we find Tom Moore in 1841 expressing surprise that 'the rare art of adapting words successfully to notes' should have been exercised by Burns, 'who was wholly unskilled in music'¹, and Robert Chambers, in his garrulous Life of Burns, ineptly remarking on the subject that Burns thought himself a kind of musician. Thus widely may biographers miss the point.

³ As John Murdoch, the only schoolmaster of Burns, at the same time said that he was the most unlikely boy to be a poet, his observations—from what was but an immature and dormant intellect—may be disregarded in the light of what came after. Here follows what Murdoch said of Burns and his brother Gilbert:—‘I attempted to teach them a little church music. Here they were left far behind by all the rest of the school. Robert’s ear, in particular, was remarkably dull, and his voice untunable. It was long before I could get

From the writings of Burns, and particularly from the Thomson letters and MSS. in the British Museum, it is possible to describe with some accuracy his musical knowledge and acquirements. It may be granted at once that about the higher forms of the musical art he knew little and cared less. He never heard a symphony or a string quartette², and though at the houses of some of his friends he listened to sonatas on the harpsichord, they raised in him neither emotion nor interest. His knowledge of music was in fact elemental; his taste lay entirely in melody, without ever reaching an appreciation of contrapuntal or harmonious music. Nor, though in his youth he had learned the grammar of music and become acquainted with clefs, keys, and notes at the rehearsals of church music, which were in his day a practical part of the education of the Scottish peasantry³, did he ever arrive at them to distinguish one tune from another . . . and certainly, if any person who knew the two boys had been asked, which of them was the most likely to court the muses, he would surely never have guessed that Robert had a propensity of that kind' (Currie's Works of Robert Burns, Liverpool, 1800, i. 91).

² At a performance of The Messiah of Händel he remarked on the infinite pathos of the air 'He was despised.'

composition, except in the case of one melody which he composed for a song of his own at the age of about twenty-three, and this melody displeased him so much that he destroyed it and never attempted another¹. In the same way, although he practised the violin, he did not attain to excellence in execution, his playing being confined to strathspeys and other slow airs of the pathetic kind². On the other hand, his perception and his love of music are undeniable. For example, he possessed copies of the principal collections of Scottish vocal and instrumental music of the eighteenth century, and repeatedly refers to them in the Museum MS. and in his letters. His copy of the Caledonian Pocket Companion (the largest collection of Scottish music), which copy still exists with pencil notes in his handwriting, proves that he was familiar with the whole contents. At intervals in his writings he names at least a dozen different collections to which he refers and from which he quotes with a personal knowledge. Also he knew several hundred different airs; not vaguely and in a misty way, but accurately as regards tune, time, and rhythm, so that he could distinguish one from another, and describe minute variations in the several copies of any tune which passed through his hands. The Thomson letters (and particularly one about September, 1793, only published in part by Currie) contain a description or criticism of over one hundred melodies. Many of the airs he studied and selected for his verses were either pure instrumental tunes, never before set to words, or the airs (from dance books) of lost songs, with the first lines as titles. That he sometimes esteemed the air of a song more than the words is clear from his saying, 'Better to have mediocre verses to a favourite air than none at all³.' It is hard to believe that a poet with such preferences should have been considered tone-deaf. Of his practical acquaintance with music, his letters to his publishers, wherein he details how he wrote for airs, where the best sets of them are to be found, and how he wished them printed with his verses, show the truth. Concerning Song No. 126, for example, he gives instructions that 'the chorus is the first or lower part of the tune, and each verse must be repeated to go through the high or second part.' For another song (No. 152) he refers the printer to the book where the music is to be found. With all the knowledge of an antiquarian he tells Thomson how the notation of the humorous tune When she cam ben she bobbit should be printed¹, and for another² he technically describes the music as it appears in the collection where he found it, with the alterations that are necessary to make it fit his verses.

³ Note 91. Compare his statement made in requesting permission to insert a song of the Duke of Gordon's in the Museum—that he was assisting in collecting old poetry and for a fine air making a stanza when it had no words (Works, iv. 293). Also his apology for many trifling songs, which, as he explains, are due to the fact that many beautiful airs wanted words, and he was obliged to pass in a hurry what he had written (Note 19).

Such instances go to show the critical interest Burns took in music. But besides this it was his practice to spend considerable time in listening to the playing of tunes, that he might become familiar with the correct swing and cadence of the melodies and form an impression of their meaning. Professor Walker relates how he was calling on Burns in Edinburgh for some particular purpose, and found him so engrossed in correcting his songs, while the tunes were being played on the harpsichord, that he would listen to nothing else. Burns himself tells Clarinda, 'I have just been composing to different tunes³;' and tells Cunningham that The Suter's Tochter 'is a first-rate favourite of mine, and I have written what I reckon one of my best songs to it⁴.' And it was this practice of listening to airs and studying their meaning that made of him not merely an enthusiastic collector of traditional airs, but also the means of getting them printed. At home, during the Highland tours, and in his excursions through the South of Scotland, he collected unknown and rare melodies as if it were his business. As he writes to Thomson, 'I have still several MS. Scots airs which I picked up mostly from the singing of country girls⁵.' The book in which he copied these traditional airs, if it still exists, is not known (though, as I have said, Stenhouse assigns to him about forty-five of those in the *Museum*¹); and it has been doubted whether Burns was capable of writing the notation of viva voce airs. It is true that Clarke, the musical editor of the Museum, often did this for him; but it is equally true that Clarke could not always be present when wanted, and it is more than probable that Burns in many cases did it alone with the aid of his violin. For, gifted as he was with a retentive memory, and—as has been shown—with an acute ear for musical sound, combined with a passionate love of Scottish melody, his genius would enable him to do readily what would be laborious for an ordinary amateur, nor can I see any reason why his remark, ‘I took down the tune from the voice of a girl,’ or some other unconditional statement, should not be accepted literally. In fact he obtained many of the fugitive airs from his wife, who was a good natural singer, and from Kirsty Flint, among others, a masculine woman who took pleasure in showing off her vocal powers to him². Two of the best airs discovered by Burns were obtained in the same manner; one, *Ca’ the Yowes*³, from the voice of a friendly minister of the Kirk, and *Craigieburn Wood*⁴ (for which he wrote two sets of verses) from the singing of a girl. He first heard the Gaelic air of Song No. 25, The Banks of the Devon, from a lady in Inverness, and ‘got the notes taken down’ for the Museum, and obtained for Johnson a better set of the tune of No. 197 than that supplied by Dr. Blacklock⁵.

So much for Burns’s musical experience, about which there is little more to say, except that he was himself a mediocre vocalist with a rough but not an untunable voice. He was constrained in company sometimes to sing, but he was conscious of his defect, and avoided any exhibition of the kind as much as possible⁶. But though his musical training and practice may have been no more than that of any ordinary amateur, his attachment to melody and wide knowledge of Scottish music, together with his genius, fully equipped him for writing verse to illustrate the anonymous airs of his country.

² Professor Gillespie, from personal observation, related how Burns was in the habit of tying his horse outside her cottage door and sitting by her fireside while she sang ‘with a pipe of the most overpowering pitch.’

It was in the year 1787 that Burns's opportunity came, and he was able to get his verses published with music. From that time forwards he wrote scarcely anything else but songs. For the mere love of the thing, and without fee or reward, ungrudgingly he worked day and night for the last nine years of his life to illustrate the airs of Scotland, and he died with the pen in his hand. His farming brought him no riches, his business of gauger only weariness, his songs nothing at all—then. But it is by his songs that he is best known and will be longest remembered. This he forecast himself: yet, curiously enough, only sixteen songs are in the last authorized edition of his *Works*¹, though by this time he had probably contributed upwards of two hundred to both Johnson's Museum and Thomson's Scottish Airs. These he never publicly claimed, only disclosing himself as the author of some of them in private letters to intimate friends². So that besides working voluntarily and simultaneously for these two collectors—neither of whom would have succeeded without his constant help—he even denied himself the name of author³.

A few words about the general musical rage of this time, and about these two music books in particular, may be useful at this place. It must be borne in mind that when Burns began to write for the Museum he had comparatively only a small number of vocal airs to choose from. In all the various collections published up to 1787 there were not two hundred different Scottish airs printed with verses, and of these Johnson had utilized a good proportion in the first volume of the Museum—that is, before Burns became connected with it. The greater number, therefore, of the airs for which Burns wrote were only to be found in instrumental or dance books, and consisted of pure reels and strathspeys, which had never before had words, or of the tunes of lost and forgotten songs ¹.

² It is important to remember, as a consequence of this, that all his songs in modern editions of his Works (except a fraction) have been accumulated by degrees, and are the insertions of a succession of editors. When Burns resolved in 1796 to publish a musical selection of his songs, death prevented him from carrying the resolution into effect (Works, vi. 255).

In these numerous instrumental collections of the eighteenth century, and particularly those of the latter half, when Burns flourished, is stored the most characteristic Scottish music in peculiar scales and with eccentric intervals. Never before had there been such a plentiful crop of Scottish dance and other music, and never has there been since. Dancing in Scotland ² had reached its climax. In Edinburgh every coterie had ‘Assemblies,’ and each of the resident dancing-masters followed suit. Captain Topham ³, on a visit to Edinburgh, was amazed at the vigorous dancing practised in the Northern Capital. Every class indulged in it—duchess and housemaid and grave professor alike—and danced for dancing’s sake. And it was to find appropriate words for some of these dance tunes that Burns set himself. Before he could do this he was obliged to study their accent and rhythm. This was no difficult task for him as long as he was free to choose or reject; but when the egregious Thomson not only selected airs for him, but tried even to dictate the orthography of his text, it became hard enough. ‘These English verses gravel me to death,’ he groans; or, when criticized, declines to alter his words, and says with regard to a disliked air, ‘the stuff won’t bear mending.’ And, as a result of his compliance in other cases, the Thomson series contain—among a number of brilliant songs—many no better than the average artificial product of the eighteenth-century song books, and quite beneath the standard of the genius of Burns¹.

¹ In some cases Burns utilized the whole tune, in others he selected particular movements or measures of the air for the verses he proposed to write.

Nevertheless it was from his intimate connexion with this publication and with the Scots Musical Museum that Burns became an extensive writer of songs. To Scotish Airs he contributed verses, partly at his own discretion, partly at the request of the proprietor—though in neither case had he power to decide what should be published². Of the Museum he was the real though concealed editor from a little after the time when, being engaged then in correcting the proofs of the Edinburgh edition of his Works, he made Johnson's acquaintance. James Johnson was a practical engraver in Edinburgh. In February, 1787, with the assistance of two gentlemen interested in the anthology of Scotland, he had projected and advertised a 'Collection of Scots, English, and Irish Songs in two neat 8vo volumes. . . .' The first volume was nearly ready when Johnson met Burns, and it is surmised that Burns suggested the title of Scots Musical Museum, under which title the volume—despite the more accurate description given of it in the advertisement—appeared in May. Burns eagerly grasped the opportunity of associating himself with a work which eventually he remodelled and extended into six volumes. His position of author, editor, and contributor of verse became more and more established as the original advisers of the publication fell into the rear. His sole assistant was a professional musician, Stephen Clarke, who corrected technical errors in the music and fitted the tunes for presentation to the public in the prescribed form. Johnson was unfitted to conduct any work of the kind. He was of a simple confiding nature, entirely illiterate, and as poor as Burns himself. However, like Burns also, he was an enthusiast for the Songs of Scotland. He undertook the cost of printing and publishing the work. Burns neither expected nor received reward, and the tacit understanding between the two continued, and the connexion remained unbroken, up to the death of Burns in 1796. Burns always knew Johnson as an 'honest worthy fellow,' and in his first extant letter said that he had 'met with few whose sentiments were so congenial with his own.' Johnson seems to have belonged to the social Crochallan Club, and must have had some qualifications to be admitted as one of its members, considering that among them were 'rantin roarin Willy' Dunbar, the President; the grisly philosopher—printer Smellie; the irascible Latinist Nicol, the writer Cunningham, 'auld Tennant' of Glenconner, Masterton the composer of Willy brew'd a peck o' mauf, and probably Henry Erskine, the most brilliant member of the Scottish bar. This was the society in which Burns recreated himself after dining with more formal company in the then New Town.

It was after the inspiring Highland tours, in which Burns had laid in a good stock of new poetic ideas, that he set to work in Edinburgh to reorganize the Museum. The venerable author of Tullochgorum, and other friends, were put under contribution, so much so that about this time Burns informed a correspondent that he had 'collected, begged, borrowed, and stolen all the songs' he could find¹. An accident which confined him to the house for a considerable time enabled him within ten months from the publication of the first volume to issue the second volume of a hundred songs, of which forty were his own, all bright and merry and flashing with wit and humour. In the buoyant and aggressive preface he remarks that 'ignorance and prejudice may perhaps affect to sneer at the simplicity of the poetry or music of some of these pieces, but their having been for ages the favourites of Nature's judges—the common people—was to the Editor a sufficient test of their merit.' Here we have partly exposed the reason why Burns concealed himself, and the meaning of the phrase put against many of his songs, 'Mr. Burns's old words.'

The third volume, containing a 'flaming preface,' took nearly two years to complete and publish. During the interval he was partly in Mauchline and partly at Ellisland—a period which included many sorrows, ending in a prudent marriage and a solitary residence on the banks of the Nith preparing a home for his wife. Such was his life while he wrote the Honeymoon and other songs¹ for the Museum.

More than fifty songs in this third volume are his own, and during the process of preparation for the press he was constantly informed of the progress of the volume and exhibited the greatest interest in it. He asks Johnson 'to send any tunes or anything to correct,' and afterwards tells him that when he comes to Edinburgh he will overhaul the whole collection.

Immediately after the publication of the fourth volume, in August, 1792, the attention of Burns was diverted from the Museum by the intervention of George Thomson, and four years elapsed between the appearance of the fourth and the posthumous fifth volume, which, however, was all sketched and nearly ready for publication at the poet's death. Thus, about the end of 1793, Burns informed Johnson that he was laying out materials for the fifth volume; a few months later he sent 'forty-one songs,' and still later he requests that 'those tunes and verses that Clarke and you cannot make out' should be sent to him. In June, 1794, Johnson intimated that the fifth volume was actually begun. In March, 1795, Burns returned a packet of songs, and a year afterwards had proofs sent him to correct. In this way Burns knew the contents of the posthumous volume, which was indeed far advanced in the press when he died. The surplus songs left over from this and the previous volumes constitute nearly one-third of the last and sixth volume, yet it took Johnson seven years to complete and publish it.

The Scots Musical Museum remains the standard collection of Scottish Song, and as a work of reference cannot be superseded. Considerably more than one-half of the pieces in the following pages were originally published there, and next to the authorized editions it is the most important authority on the works of Burns. It contains, moreover, his most happy and spontaneous effusions, published with their melodies, as he wrote them, free from outside interference. Johnson without remark acted upon instructions, accepted what was sent to him, and printed the verses with the tunes selected. And Burns, by portraying in that collection the morals and manners of his country with a rare fidelity and sympathetic humour, became famous.

But in the meanwhile Burns had become associated with another publication. Immediately after the appearance of the fourth volume of Johnson's Museum, George Thomson, a government clerk and amateur musician (who, by the way, always despised the Museum), applied to Burns to assist him with verses for a collection of twenty-five Scottish airs which he would select. He said he wanted the poetry improved for 'some charming melodies,' and he would 'spare neither pains nor expense in the publication.' He declared himself in favour of 'English' verses, which English 'becomes more and more the language of Scotland'; and he said elsewhere, but not to Burns, that the vernacular was to be avoided as much as possible, 'because young people are taught to consider it vulgar,' and, with an eye to business, 'we must accommodate our tastes to our readers.' How the partnership with this opportunist in art was maintained is set out in the long series of letters now in Brechin Castle. It is amusing to remember that Thomson, who engaged Burns to destroy the Scottish vernacular, should have been the unconscious instrument of its preservation. Burns, although fully occupied with Johnson, promptly accepted the invitation conveyed to him, but with conditions. He would accept no wages, fee, or hire, he would alter no songs unless he could amend them, and his own would be 'either above or below price,' and, if not approved, they could be rejected without offence. 'I have long ago,' he says, 'made up my mind as to my reputation of authorship, and have nothing to be pleased or offended at your adoption or rejection of my verses.'

The conventional clerk, who was very early impressed with the genius, enthusiasm, and industry of his correspondent, rapidly extended his aim, and resolved to include in his collection 'every Scotch air and song worth singing.' All through the long correspondence he tenaciously held his original opinion of 'English' verses and his choice of airs. So far he had the best of the arrangement, for Burns wrote many pieces which he disapproved, and for airs which he disliked. Only five songs written for Scottish Airs were published in Burns's lifetime, and these are more or less incorrectly printed. For the rest, Thomson was under no control, and without compunction altered the text when it suited him, added stanzas, and adapted them for unauthorized airs. There was, as I have said, little sympathy between the two men. Thomson cared nothing for a human lyric, and preferred the insipid compositions then current. Burns told him 'exotic rural imagery is always comparatively flat,' and, in another place, 'You are apt to sacrifice simplicity in a ballad for pathos, sentiment, and point.' Again, he tries to console Thomson by saying that the English singer will find no difficulty in the sprinkling of the Scottish language in his songs¹; or refuses pointblank to change the orthography of a piece with the remark, 'I'll rather write a new song altogether than make this English².' But Thomson meddled and muddled on without regarding him. Airs and verses alike had to submit to his editorial jurisdiction. Burns had to complain that the accent of his The-lea rig had been altered, and advised him to 'let our natural airs preserve their native features.' But Thomson preferred his own way; and when Burns refused to rewrite some disputed lines, he altered them for him. The story of Scots wha hae (which I have told in Note 255) illustrates particularly the fashion in which Burns was constrained to change metre in order to have his ode fitted to a melody which he had not contemplated. And though most of the songs written for Thomson were spontaneous, and sent to him for approval, he would never return those he considered unsuitable, but retained them in the manner described. Nevertheless, shortly before Burns died, he assigned to Thomson without consideration the absolute copyright of the songs he had sent to him.

Thus Scottish Airs, in five sumptuous folio volumes completed in 1818, came to contain much of the text of Burns in an untrustworthy form. Its airs, too, with their many editorial improvements, are to be disregarded as too artificial. When it is known that

Thomson had the audacity to suggest alterations in the compositions of the great Beethoven¹, who told him that his music was not written for schoolgirls, no one need wonder that the songs of the amiable Burns were altered and excised. The most that can be said for the collection is that it is interesting in so far as it contains accompaniments by some eminent composers, who failed in what they attempted; and for Thomson the most that can be said is that in selecting the famous air for the verses of Auld Lang Syne, he achieved a success which covers a multitude of sins.

Since I am resolved, for want of space, not to enter in this Preface upon any criticism, nor yet to insist (further than is necessary for an explanation of the purposes of this book) on the musical aspect of Burns's songs so uniquely made to melodies, nothing really remains to be said except a few words about the TEXT. This, which is unexpurgated, has been drawn from original MSS. and the authorized editions, and from the Scots Musical Museum, and it is collated with the two modern standard editions of the Works of Burns. I have left unnoticed, with a few exceptions, readings in the various writings of the poet other than those here selected. Every song and ballad which could be published is entire, and the collection is so complete that it includes many pieces now printed for the first time as Burns's work. The greater number of these pieces appeared originally in the Scots Musical Museum from Burns's MSS., most of which are still available for reference. More or less all have been reprinted as anonymous in miscellaneous publications. The chief authority for inserting many of them is Law's MS. List. This list confirms many statements of Stenhouse, who had the Museum MSS. through his hands early in the nineteenth century. As regards those pieces which Burns himself has designated 'Mr. Burns's old words,' the evidence is for the most part negative, and further investigation may reveal that the original publication was earlier than Burns. The presumption is that some of the narrative or historical ballads previously existed in some form; but how little or how much Burns altered or amended is unknown to me except in so far as is recorded in the Notes, which are the result of an examination of several hundred song books of the seventeenth and eighteenth centuries. Until positive evidence is produced they, with many others, may remain at least as editorial originals of Burns. Among the original authorities which I have consulted it is necessary to name the interleaved Scots Musical Museum, in which Burns wrote a large number of 'Strictures' or Notes on Scottish Song. By a singular fatality these four important volumes have not been publicly examined until now for nearly a century. They contain an unsuspected holograph copy of Auld Lang Syne, which is printed on page 208. In the Notes the numerous wilful and negligent errors in Cromek's Reliques of Robert Burns (1808) are now pointed out for the first time and corrected, and an abstract of Cromek's misdeeds will be found in the Bibliography following.

For the 303 AIRS the AUTHORITIES are the poet's writings and — occasionally—Johnson's Museum. The tunes in that collection, in a few cases, are not those selected by Burns, for the reason that the latter had previously appeared in the first volume of the collection with other verses. Certain of Burns's songs have not until now been printed with any air. Such, for example, are the best set of verses of The Banks o' Doon ('Ye flowery banks o' Bonie Doon'), and the powerful invective, The Kirk's Alarm ('Orthodox, orthodox! wha believe in John Knox'), which few realize is a song at all; and 'Amang the trees where humming bees' to the curious air The King o' France he rade a race. On the other hand, many songs are nearly always published with wrong airs. Among others Rantin rovin Robin and 'The gloomy night is gathering fast,' which belongs to the beautiful air Roslin Castle.

The TUNES have been drawn from early MSS. and from the numerous vocal and instrumental collections of the eighteenth century, including the Museum. Two are from the MSS. of Burns and therefore interesting, and a few are rare examples. If there has been any system in selecting any particular set of the tune, it has been to form a representative collection of examples from the earliest sources to the close of the eighteenth century, sometimes even at the expense of the verses. Some of the airs are at least three hundred years old, and obviously none are less than a hundred. Excluding the exceptional English and Irish airs, they form an epitome of Scottish music which probably would have been more attractive to the general reader with pianoforte accompaniments. But this is not a music book in the modern sense, only a quarry for the constructive composer and for the student of folk-songs. Most of the airs are anonymous. They floated in the air for an indefinite time until caught and chained by the printing-press. Of a few alone are the composers known, those by the friends of the poet, too amiably adopted, being among the worst in the collection, with the brilliant exception of Willie brèw'd a peck o' maut.

I have only to add that, although great care has been taken in revising and correcting the NOTES, it would be vain to expect that all the references are complete. To discover the historical origin of the airs, much time has been spent in the examination of a large number of musical collections, and those who have experience of research among undated books will most readily forgive editorial imperfections and errors which have escaped notice in revision.

My thanks are due for much valuable assistance in the compilation of this volume. Among others I am indebted to the late Thomas Law, of Littleborough, for permission to insert a facsimile of the original MS. of Burns, which is referred to under the title Law's MS. List, and also for the loan of the copy of the Caledonian Pocket Companion, which belonged to Burns; to the Scottish Text Society for permission to reprint the verses of Welcum Fortoun, on p. xxix, from The Gude and Godlie Ballatis, 1897; to Mr. George Gray, of the County Buildings, Glasgow, for the use of the detached sheets which are referred to in the Notes as Gray's MS. Lists, and for the use of some rare song books; to Mr. John Glen, of Edinburgh, for the dates of publication of some scarce musical collections, and for the loan of old music books and assistance in tracing airs; to Miss Oakshott, of Arundel Square, Barnsbury, London, who permitted me to copy for insertion the Notes of Burns in the Interleaved Museum; and, though last not least, to Professor Joseph Wright, of Oxford, the editor of the colossal Dialect Dictionary, for valuable suggestions in compiling the Glossary.

I. WORKS OF BURNS.

[Burns was born January 25, 1759; he wrote his first song in the autumn of 1773 or 1774; published the first edition of his Works in 1786, and the last in 1794. His connexion with Johnson's Scots Musical Museum began in the spring or summer of 1787, and with Thomson's Scotish Airs in September, 1792, and he continued to contribute to both collections until his death on July 21, 1796. The Bibliography of Burns in the 'Memorial Catalogue of the Burns Exhibition, 1896. Glasgow: Hodge, 1898,' describes 696 editions of the Works of Burns published in the United Kingdom.]

Hastie MSS., in the British Museum (No. 22,307), include 162 songs, mostly in the handwriting of Burns, which he contributed to the Scots Musical Museum.

Dalhousie MS., in Brechin Castle, consists of Letters to George Thomson, and songs intended for publication in Scotish Airs.

Gray's MS. Lists, belonging to George Gray, Esq., of the County Buildings, Glasgow, are a number of detached sheets containing the titles of songs proposed for insertion in the second and subsequent volumes of the Scots Musical Museum. The lists are partly in the handwriting of Burns and partly in that of James Johnson.

Law's MS. List, lately in the possession of William Law, Littleborough, is a holograph of Burns, entitled 'List of Songs for 3rd Volume of the Scots Musical Museum,' which he sent to Johnson in a letter dated April 24, 1789. This MS., now referred to for the first time, definitely settles the authorship of many songs, some of which in the following pages are printed for the first time as the work of Burns. See facsimile following.

Glenriddell MSS., in the Athenæum Library, Liverpool, consist of Poems and Letters of Burns, presented to Robert Riddell of Glenriddell.

Interleaved Museum is a copy of the first four volumes of the Scots Musical Museum which belonged to Robert Riddell of Glenriddell, and in which Burns wrote numerous Notes (or Strictures as he called them) on Songs, many of them his own. R. H. Cromek was permitted to examine the volumes by the owner, Eliza Bayley, and pages 187 to 306 of his Reliques of Robert Burns, 1808, contain a transcript of the Notes, which are the most interesting part of the work. Every editor of Burns has relied implicitly on the accuracy of Cromek. Upon the recent discovery of the Interleaved Museum after a sequestration of nearly a century, I have been permitted to collate it with the Reliques with the following result: Out of 173 Notes printed by Cromek only 127 are verbatim copies; eighteen are garbled or imperfect, of which four differ entirely from the MS., and another four are written partly by Burns and partly by Riddell; fourteen are written entirely by Riddell or other than Burns; lastly, fourteen are not in the MS. at all, and the leaves of four of these have been cut out and are now missing. On the other hand seven short

Notes by Burns are not printed, and in place of that on Auld Lang Syne in Reliques, 282, which is a pure invention, there is a complete and hitherto unsuspected holograph copy of the verses of Auld Lang Syne, for which see page 208 infra.

Numerous references and quotations in the following pages from the Reliques were set up in type before discovery. These have been since corrected from the MS., and so far as they go can be compared with Cromek's work. The four volumes of the Interleaved Museum, with the autograph of Robert Riddell, were left by Mrs. Riddell to her niece Eliza Bayley, of Manchester. A London bookseller acquired them for 'an old song,' and, with other Burns's rarities, sold them in 1870 out of his catalogue to A. F. Nichols, who bought them on the express condition that neither his name nor address should be disclosed. After his death in Feb., 1902, the volumes passed into the possession of Miss Oakshott, who permitted me to examine them.

'Poems, chiefly in the Scottish Dialect. By Robert Burns. Kilmarnock: Printed by John Wilson, MDCCCLXXXVI.' 8vo. The Kilmarnock edition consisted of 600 copies at a subscription price of three shillings each.

'Poems, chiefly in the Scottish Dialect. By Robert Burns. Edinburgh: Printed for the Author, and sold by William Creech, M,DCC,LXXXVII.' 8vo. Two separate issues, the skinking and the stinking, so called from a printer's error on p. 263. The text of the latter generally agrees with that of the first Kilmarnock edition, so far as it goes.

'Poems, chiefly in the Scottish Dialect. By Robert Burns. In two volumes. The second edition, considerably enlarged. Edinburgh: Printed for T. Cadell, London, and William Creech, Edinburgh, M,DCC,XCIII.' Sm. 8vo. Contains twenty additional pieces.

'Poems, chiefly in the Scottish Dialect. By Robert Burns. In two volumes. A new edition considerably enlarged. Edinburgh: Printed for T. Cadell, London, and William Creech, Edinburgh. MDCCXCIV.' 8vo. This is a reprint of the 1793 edition with a few alterations. It is the last edition of the author.

'The Works of Robert Burns; with an account of his life, and a criticism on his writings. To which are prefixed, some observations on the character and condition of the Scottish peasantry. In four volumes. [By Dr. Currie.] Liverpool, printed by J. M^cCreery, Houghton Street; for T. Cadell, Jun., and W. Davies, Strand, London; and W. Creech, Edinburgh . . . 1800.' 8vo. 4 vols.

'Poems ascribed to Robert Burns, the Ayrshire Bard, not contained in any edition of his works hitherto published. Glasgow, printed by Chapman & Lang, for Thomas Stewart . . . 1801.' 8vo. pp. vi and 94.

'Reliques of Robert Burns; consisting chiefly of original letters, poems, and critical observations on Scottish Songs. Collected and published by R. H. Cromek. London: Printed by J. M^cCreery, for T. Cadell, and W. Davies, Strand. 1808.' 8vo.

This is the volume referred to in the preceding note on the Interleaved Museum.

'Life of Robert Burns. By J. G. Lockhart, LL.B. Edinburgh: Constable & Co. 1828.' 8vo. The second edition in 1829.

'The Works of Robert Burns. Edited by the Ettrick Shepherd and William Motherwell. Glasgow: A. Fullarton & Co.' 1834-6. 12mo. 5 vols.

'Kilmarnock Edition. In two volumes, revised and extended. The Complete Poetical Works of Robert Burns, arranged in the order of their earliest publication. Volume First. Pieces published by the author, with new annotations, biographical notices, &c. Edited by William Scott-Douglas. Kilmarnock: M^oKie & Drennan. MDCCCLXXVI.' Cr. 8vo. Volume Second. 'Pieces published posthumously.'

'Robert Burns' Commonplace Book. Printed from the original manuscript in the possession of John Adam, Esq., Greenock. Edinburgh: privately printed. 1872.' 8vo.

'The Works of Robert Burns. [By W. Scott-Douglas.] Edinburgh: William Paterson. 1877-9.' Imp. 8vo. 6 vols.

'Centenary Edition.' 'The Poetry of Robert Burns. Edited by William Ernest Henley and Thomas F. Henderson.' Edinburgh: T. C. & E. C. Jack, Causewayside. 1896-7. 8vo. 4 vols.

Together, the Scott-Douglas and the Centenary are the modern standard editions of the complete Works of Burns.

'Robert Burns. [Vol. i.] La Vie. [Vol. ii.] Les Œuvres. Auguste Angellier. Paris: Hachette & C^{ie}. 1893.' Large 8vo. pp. 1038. Remarkable as containing the most comprehensive life of Burns yet published, and a lengthy description and criticism of Scottish poetry prior to Burns. Angellier does not claim Burns as a Frenchman, but he thinks that he is more French than English.

'Poésies Complètes de Robert Burns. Traduites de l'écoissais par M. León de Wailly, avec une Introduction du même. Paris: Adolphe Delahays, Libraire. 1843.' 12mo.

'Gedichte von Robert Burns. Übersetzt von Philipp Kaufmann. Stuttgart und Tübingen: Verlag der J. G. Cotta'schen Buchhandlung. 1839.' 8vo.

'Poesie di Roberto Burns. Prima versione italiana di Ulisse Ortensi. Parte prima. Modena: E. Sarasino. 1893.'

'Vijftig uitgesogte Afrikaanse Gedigte, versameld door F. W. Reitz, Hoofregter in d'Oranje Vrijstaat. 1888.' Contains translations into the Taal of The Cottar's Saturday Night, Tam o' Shanter, and Duncan Gray, which are curious as being the work of the Secretary of State of the Transvaal, who wrote the Ultimatum which precipitated the war in South Africa.

Other published translations of Burns exist in Welsh, Gaelic, Bohemian, Danish, Dutch, Flemish, French, Frisian, German, Swiss-German, Hungarian, Italian, Norwegian, Russian, Swedish, and Latin.

The Merry Muses of Caledonia. A collection of favourite Scotch Songs ancient and modern, selected for the use of the Crochallan Fencibles. c. 1800.

A small surreptitious 18mo volume of 127 pages without imprint or date, containing about ninety songs assumed to be copied from a private manuscript volume which Burns intended to destroy, and which it is believed does not now exist. The references in our Notes are from a genuine copy which belonged to the late W. Scott-Douglas.

II. SONGS AND SONG LITERATURE WITHOUT MUSIC.

Cowkelbie Sow. A poem of the fifteenth century in the Bannatyne MS. and printed in Laing's 'Select Remains of the Ancient Popular Poetry of Scotland.' Edinburgh, 1822. A large number of airs, songs, and dances are named in the poem, all of which are otherwise unknown.

Asloan MS., of about the beginning of the sixteenth century, is a collection of early poetry. The MS. is imperfect; and of sixty pieces named in the contents thirty-four are missing. It has never been properly examined, and the present owner declines access to it.

'The Complaynt of Scotland, written in 1548, with a preliminary Dissertation and Glossary. Edinburgh: Archibald Constable, 1801.' [By John Leyden.] 8vo. Of the airs, dances, songs, and tales named in the work the greater number are unknown.

Maitland MS., in the Pepysian Library, Cambridge, was compiled by Sir Richard Maitland, of Lethington (1496-1586). It was bought at the Lauderdale sale in 1692 by the diarist, Pepys, who bequeathed it to Magdalen College in 1703. It consists of two volumes of poetry written from about 1420 to 1585. Vol. i., folio, pp. 366, contains 176 pieces. Vol. ii., quarto, 138 leaves, contains 96 pieces. See Pinkerton's Ancient Scottish Poems, London, 1786; and Poems, Maitland Club, Glasgow, 1830.

'Ane compendious buik of godlie Psalmes and spirituall Sangis collectit furthe of sindrie partis of the Scripture, with diueris Vtheris Ballatis changeit out of prophane Sangis in godlie Sangis for auoyding of sin and harlatrie. With augmentation of sindrie gude and godlie Ballatis not contenit in the first editioun. Imprintit at Edinburgh be Johne Ros for Henrie Charteris. MDLxxviii. Cum priuilegio Regali.' 16mo, pp. 16 and 207. [A literal reprint was issued by David Laing, Edinburgh, 1868; and the Scottish Text Society has since reprinted an earlier edition of 1567. The contents are metrical versions of some of the Psalmes, a selection of hymns, chiefly translations, from the German, and (for our purpose) a number of imitations or religious parodies of popular secular songs then current. This kind of poetry was written for the use of the Reformers in England, Holland, Germany, France, and Italy prior to the Scottish collection. The two last-named countries suppressed it. Coverdale wrote a 'godlie' song which would be impossible to print in a hymnary of the present day. The 'psalmes' of a noble lord of Holland, Nievelte by name, were published in 1540, and sung in the families and private assemblies of the Protestants, 'ut homines ab amatoriiis, haud raro obscenis, aliisque vanis canticis, quibus omnia in urbibus et vicis personabant, avocaret,' &c. The spiritual songs of Colletet published in France as late as 1660 are scandalously bad. The subject is sketched in M^cCrie's Life of John Knox, Edinburgh, 1840, 399. See also Douen's Le Psautier Huguenot, Paris, 1878, 2 vols. 8vo. In connexion with this subject a sang which had been sought in vain for many years has just come to light. In 1568 the General Assembly of the Kirk unanimously ordered Thomas Bassandine to call in all the copies of a psalm buik which he had published without licence, and to keep 'the rest unsauld' until he deleted 'a baudie song out of the end of the psalm booke.' Now that a copy of Welcum Fortoun has been discovered it is difficult to understand why it should have been singled out for opprobrium and the printer so severely punished. The decorum of the verses as compared with some lively sangis in the Godlie ballads is presumptive evidence that the Assembly wanted an excuse to punish the unlicensed printer. By permission of the Scottish Text Society I reprint the verses as follows from the Gude and Godlie Ballatis, Edinburgh, 1897, 222.

‘ Welcum Fortoun, welcum againe,
The day and hour I may weill blis
Thow hes exilit all my paine,
Quhilk to my hart greit plesour is.
For I may say that few men may,
Seing of paine I am drest,

The love of hir that I lufe best.
I knaw nae sic as scho is one,
Sa trew, sa kynde, sa luifandlie,

Quhat suld I do, an scho war gone?
Allace! zit I had leuer die.
To me scho is baith trew and kynde,
Worthie it war scho had the praise;
For na disdaine in hir I find,
I pray to God I may hir pleis.

Bannatyne MS. 1568. In the Advocates’ Library, Edinburgh. Compiled in 1568 by George Bannatyne (1545-c. 1606) in a folio containing about 340 pieces and other additional poems by later hands. A complete catalogue is in Memorials of George Bannatyne, Edinburgh, 1829. The whole has been reprinted for the Hunterian Club. Selections are in Ancient Scottish Poems, Edinburgh, 1770; and Sibbald’s Chronicle of Scottish Poetry, Edinburgh, 1802.

‘ A handefull of pleasant delites, containing Sundrie new Sonets and delectable Histories, in diuers Kindes of meeter. The Principal Collections of Scottish Ballads are: Jamieson's Popular Ballads and Songs, Edinburgh, 1806; Finlay's Scottish Historical and Romantic Ballads, Edinburgh, 1808; Illustrations of Northern Antiquities, Edinburgh, 1814; Gilchrist's Ancient and Modern Scottish Ballads, Edinburgh, 1815; Struther's British Minstrel, Glasgow, 1821; Laing's Ancient Popular Poetry of Scotland, Edinburgh, 1824; Laing's The Thistle of Scotland, Aberdeen, 1823; Sharpe's A Ballad Book, Edinburgh, 1823; Maidment's A North Country Garland, Edinburgh, 1824; Motherwell's Minstrelsy, Ancient and Modern, Glasgow, 1827; Kinloch's Ancient Scottish Ballads, London, 1827; Kinloch's The Ballad Book, Edinburgh, 1827; and Maidment's A New Book of Old Ballads, Edinburgh, 1844.

'Select Scottish Songs, Ancient and Modern. With critical observations and biographical notices, by Robert Burns. Edited by R. H. Cromek. London: Printed for T. Cadell and W. Davies, Strand, by J. McCreery. 1810.' 2 vols. Cr. 8vo. The Notes quoted from Burns in these volumes must be received with caution.

'Illustrations of the Lyric Poetry and Music of Scotland. By the late William Stenhouse. Originally compiled to accompany the Scots Musical Museum, and now published separately, with additional Notes and Illustrations. William Blackwood & Sons: Edinburgh and London. 1853.' Svo. About 900 pages. Contains a facsimile Letter of Robert Burns. This important work on Scottish verse and air was begun prior to the year 1817, was printed at the close of 1820, was delayed and ultimately laid aside until 1839, when it was first published with additional Illustrations and a copious Bibliography of Scottish Music to accompany a new issue of the Scots Musical Museum. Stenhouse had the use of the MSS. of Burns's songs which were printed in the Museum, and he is more to be depended upon as a commentator of Burns than as an historical annotator on music. Although his work is defaced by numberless erroneous dates and quotations which have to be verified, it must be admitted that he was the first investigator of Scottish music; and all who undertake the subject are obliged to refer to his work as a starting-point. His volume contains numerous melodies dispersed in the text.

'The Poems of the Sempills of Beltrees. Now first collected, with Notes and Biographical Notices of their lives. By James Paterson. . . . Edinburgh: Stevenson, 1849.' 12mo.

Rosina. A Comic Opera as performed at the Theatre Royal, Covent Garden (a new edition). Composed and selected by W. Shield. London: Printed by Goulding, &c., n. d. Folio. Rosina was performed for the first time in 1783.

The Musical Miscellany. A select collection of the most approved Scots, English, and Irish Songs, set to music. Perth: Printed by J. Brown, MDCCLXXXVI. 12mo. pp. 347. Inscribed to the Provost, Baillies, and Town Council of Perth. The first handbook of songs with music printed in Scotland. All preceding collections were 4to or folio size.

'The Scots Musical Museum, humbly dedicated to the Catch Club, instituted at Edin^r., June, 1771. By James Johnson. Vol. i. Price 6s. [vignette without border]. Edinburgh: Sold and subscriptions taken in by and for the publisher, N. Stewart, R. Bremner, Corri and Sutherland, R. Ross, Edin^r., and all the music sellers in London.' Preface dated May 22, 1787. In the text Burns is named once.

Vol. ii. has the same title-page as that of vol. i. so far as the address at foot, which is altered to 'Edinburgh: Printed and sold by James Johnson, Engraver, Bells Wynd. Sold also by N. Stewart, R. Bremner, Corri and Sutherland, R. Ross, C. Elliot, W. Creech, J. Sibbald, Edin^r.; A. McGowan and W. Gould, Glasgow; Boyd, Dumfries; More, Dundee; Sherriffs, Aberdeen; Fisher and Atkinson, Newcastle; Massey, Manchester; C. Elliot, T. Kay & Co., No. 332 Strand; Longman and Broadrip, No. 26 Cheapside, London.' Preface dated March 1, 1788. Burns is named once, and that in the Index.

Vol. iii. Same title-page as vol. ii, except that the vignette has an ornamental border surmounted by a thistle, and the address at foot is enlarged, ending with 'J. Preston, No. 97 Strand, London.' Preface dated February 2, 1790, ends with 'materials for the 4th and in all probability the last volume are in great forwardness.' In the Index Burns is marked as the author of six songs.

Vol. iiiii. has the same title-page as vol. iii, with the ornamental vignette as above described, but with a changed address, which is 'Edin^r. Printed and sold by Johnson & Co., Music Sellers, head of Lady Stair's Close, Lawnmarket, where may be had variety of music and musical instruments lent out, Tun'd and Repaired.' Preface is dated August 13, 1792. In the Index Burns is named as the author of six songs.

Vol. v. The title-page is throughout identical with that of vol. iiiii, as follows: 'The Scots Musical Museum humbly dedicated to the Catch Club instituted at Edinburgh, June 1771. By James Johnson. Vol. v. Price 6s. [Vignette with an ornamented border surmounted by a thistle.] Edin^r. Printed and sold by Johnson & Co., Music Sellers, head of Lady Stair's Close, Lawnmarket, where may be had variety of music and musical instruments lent out, Tun'd and Repaired.' Undated [Dec. 1796]. Preface undated. In the Index only Burns is named as the author of fifteen songs, one of which, however, is not his.

Vol. vi. and last is titled as follows: 'The Scots Musical Museum in six volumes consisting of six hundred Scots Songs with proper Bases for the pianoforte, &c. Humbly dedicated to the Society of Antiquaries of Scotland. By James Johnson. In this publication the original simplicity of our ancient national airs is retained unincumbered with useless accompaniments and graces depriving the hearers of the sweet simplicity of their native melodies. Vol. vi. 7s. Printed and sold by Johnson, music seller, Edinburgh, to be had at T. Preston, 97 Strand, London; MacFadyen, Glasgow, and at all the principal music sellers.' Preface is dated June 4, 1803, and in the Index and Text Burns is marked as the author of twenty-six songs. Each volume contains one hundred songs. On the completion of the work in 1803 the title-pages of the preceding volumes were altered and made uniform with that of the sixth; the Prefaces were revised and corrected; and under the titles in the Text of many of the songs of vols. ii. to v. were added: 'Written for this work by Robert Burns.' During his lifetime all the songs of Burns in Johnson's Museum were published anonymously, except those marked in the Indexes referred to above. A complete set of the original issues is very rare, and hitherto difficult to recognize. During the long course of publication the title-pages of some of the early volumes were altered more than once.

Calliope; or the Musical Miscellany. A select collection of the most approved English, Scots, and Irish Songs, set to music. London: Printed for C. Elliot and T. Kay. . . . and C. Elliot, Edinburgh, 1788. 8vo. pp. 472.

A Select Collection of Original Scottish Airs for the voice. To each of which are added introductory and concluding symphonies and accompaniments for the violin and pianoforte by Pleyel, with select and characteristic verses by the most admired Scottish Poets, adapted to each air; many of them entirely new. Also suitable English verses in addition to each of the songs as written in the Scotch dialect, price 10s. 6d. First set. London: printed and sold by Preston & Son . . . Strand, for the proprietor, (signed) G. Thomson, n. d. Folio. Contains twenty-five airs, pp. 1-25. Preface dated May 1, 1793.

Second set, with varied title: 'accompaniments' by Kozeluch and the 'greater number' of the songs 'written for this work by Burns,' n. d. [1798]. Twenty-five airs, pp. 26-50.

Third set same title as second set [1799], pp. 51-75.

Fourth set: ends vol. ii., accompts. 'chiefly by Kozeluch and partly by Pleyel,' otherwise same as third set [1799], pp. 76-100. Vol. iii. pub. in 1801; vol. iv. 'Printed by J. Moir, 1805,' containing fifty airs each, harmonized by Haydn; and vol. v., preface dated June, 1818, containing thirty airs harmonized by Beethoven, and a mutilated version of The Jolly Beggars by Burns, set to music by Henry R. Bishop. The editor expresses 'the satisfaction he felt when he saw the practicability of excluding those passages without depriving the Poem of its unity, its raciness of humour, or its interest'!

The above describes the original edition of George Thomson's collection, to which Burns contributed so largely. The title is rarely quoted correctly and the original volumes are difficult to recognize, as Thomson made numerous alterations in all the volumes during the many years of issue.

The Vocal Magazine, containing a selection of the most esteemed English, Scots, and Irish songs, ancient and modern: adapted for the harpsichord or violin. Edinburgh . . . C. Stewart & Co., 1797. 8vo. Vol. ii. in 1798; vol. iii. in 1799.

The Jacobite Relics of Scotland: being the songs, airs, and legends of the adherents to the house of Stuart. Collected and illustrated by James Hogg. Edinburgh, 1819 and 1821. 2 vols. 8vo.

The Select Melodies of Scotland, interspersed with those of Ireland and Wales, united to the songs of Robert Burns, Sir Walter Scott, and other distinguished poets: with symphonies and accompaniments for the pianoforte by Pleyel, Kozeluch, Haydn, and Beethoven. The whole composed for and arranged by George Thomson in five vols. London: Preston, n. d. 8vo. [1822-3] with a sixth volume in 1825.

The Ballad Literature and Popular Music of the Olden Time, a history of the ancient songs, ballads, and of the dance tunes of England with numerous anecdotes and entire ballads . . . by W. Chappell, F. S. A. The whole of the airs harmonized by G. A. Macfarren. London: Chappell & Co., n. d. [1859]. 2 vols. 8vo. Continuous pages 823. Under a somewhat different title the work was issued to subscribers in 1855, and to the public in 1859. Although the author found it very inconvenient and troublesome to ascertain the date of publication of many of the airs, he nevertheless perpetuated the trade custom. His own work bears no date of publication either on the title or introduction.

Traditional Ballad Airs, arranged and harmonized for the pianoforte and harmonium from copies procured in the counties of Aberdeen, Banff, and Moray. By W. A. Christie & Co. Edinburgh, 1876. 4to. 2 vols.

IV. INSTRUMENTAL MUSIC

'Orchesographie, metode et teorie en forme de discours et tablature pour apprendre à dancier, battre le tambour en toute sorte et diversité de batteries, jouer du fife et arigot, tirer des armes et escrimer, avec autres honnestes exercices fort convenables à la jeunesse, affin d'estre bien venue et toute joyeuse compagnie et y montrer sa dexterité et agileté de corps. Par Thoinet Arbeau, demeurant à Lengres. A Lengres, par Jehan des Preyz, imprimeur et libraire tenant sa boutique en la rue des Merciers dicte les Pilliers. MDLXXXIX. Avec privilège du Roi.' This is the full title of a rare volume in the Bibliothèque Nationale written by a priest, Jean Tabouret, Canon of Lengres, whose anagram is Thoinet Arbeau. On pages 80 and 81 are the music and description of a Scottish dance entitled Branle d'Escosse, as opposite.

Brantome records that he accompanied in Scotland the young Duc d'Angoulême, the son of Henri II by Lady Fleming the governess of Mary, Queen of Scots, and mother of Mary Fleming, one of the Queen's Maries. The Duc is described as one of the best dancers of his time and as having introduced many Scottish dances to the Court of France. Tabouret, in his introduction to the Branles d'Escosse, says that they were in vogue in 1568, and refers his learners to the instrumentalists for a knowledge of the movements of the different Branles which were then popular. Contemporary evidence of dancing in Scotland in the middle of the sixteenth century is in the Complaynt of Scotland, where Branles and Brangles are named as among the other 'licht dances' then indulged in; but there is no example of music in Scotland so early as the preceding Scottish Brangle from the Orchesographie (reprint, Paris, 1888).

Rowallan MS. c. 1620. A tablature lute book of fifty pages in the Edinburgh University Library which formerly belonged to Sir William Muir of Rowallan (1594-1657). It contains a few Scottish melodies.

Straloch MS. 1627-9. 'An playing book for the lute. Wherein ar contained many currents and other musical things. Musica mentis medicina maestae. At Abirdeen. Notted and collected by Robert Gordon. In the yeere of our Lord 1627, in Februarie' . . . Colophon. 'Finis huic libro impositus. Anno D. 1629. Ad finem Decem 6. In Stra—Loth.' A small oblong 8vo volume containing the original of a number of Scottish melodies, a few of which are known. The MS. was sold by auction in March, 1842, to an unknown buyer, still undiscovered. Extracts from the MS. were made by G. F. Graham, who presented them in 1847 to the Advocates' Library.

Skene MS. c. 1615-30. A small volume in the Advocates' Library containing 114 tunes, some of which are repetitions. A translation in modern notation of a portion of the MS. is in Dauneys' Ancient Scottish Melodies, 1838.

Airs and Sonnets, in Trinity College Library, Dublin, marked F. 5. 13, is part of the imperfect fifth volume of Woods MSS. of Psalms and Canticles with music, written in 1569, pp. 112. From p. 34 and onwards some one of later date has written verses and airs of a number of Secular Songs, 'which are all notted heir with the Tennor or common pairt they ar sung with.'

Dalhousie MS., of about the beginning of the seventeenth century, is in the Panmure Library. Contains about 160 airs.

Fitzwilliam Virginal Book [c. 1650], edited by J. A. Fuller Maitland and W. Barclay Squire. London, 1894. Folio. A MS. of English music in the Fitzwilliam collection, Cambridge.

Guthrie MS. c. 1670. In the University Library, Edinburgh. Contains about forty tunes in tablature which have not yet been deciphered. The manuscript was discovered by David Laing in a bound volume of sermons by James Guthrie, a Covenanted minister, who was executed in 1661 for writing a pamphlet and disowning the king's authority. Most of the titles of the tunes are Scottish.

Blaikie MS. 1692. In tablature for the Viol da Gamba, containing upwards of one hundred and ten tunes. This and another MS. of 1683 with nearly the same music have disappeared, but a copy of a portion of the 1683 MS. is in the Dundee Public Library.

Leyden MS. c. 1692. Contains about eighty tunes in tablature for the Lyra Viol and a few in modern musical notation. The present owner of the MS. is not known, but a copy is in the Advocates' Library.

Atkinson MS., 1694-5, is a small volume in the Library of the Society of Antiquaries, Newcastle-upon-Tyne. It bears the name 'Henry Atkinson his book 1693,' with a note by W. A. Chappell to the effect that Atkinson was a native of Northumberland and lived in the neighbourhood of Hartburn. It contains English and numerous Scottish tunes.

Hume MS. 1704. In the Advocates' Library.

Laing MS. 1706.

Crockatt MS. 1709. Belonged to William Stenhouse (who annotated the Scots Musical Museum), and after his death became the property of C. Kirkpatrick Sharpe, of Hoddam. It has since disappeared, and there is no known copy of it. Stenhouse often quotes it in his Illustrations.

Sinkler's MS. 1710. Bears the docket 'Margaret Sinkler aught this music book written by Andrew Adam at Glasgow October the 31 day 1710.' It is the property of Mr. John Glen, of Edinburgh, and contains over one hundred tunes partly noted on a six-line stave.

Waterston MS. c. 1715.

McFarlan MSS. 1740. Three volumes with the title 'A Collection of Scotch airs with the latest variations written for the use of Walter McFarlan of that ilk by David Young W. M. in Edinburgh. 1740.' The second and third volumes belong to the Society of Antiquaries, Edinburgh. The first has been lost.

Before the printing of music in Scotland the originals of many Scottish airs are found in English publications, such as Playford's English Dancing Master, 1651 (in the reprint of 1652 the title was altered to the Dancing Master, &c., and so remained to the last edition, c. 1628); in Apollo's Banquet, 1663, in many editions; the fifth in 1687; Musick's Delight, 1666; and Musick's Recreation, 1652.

TONE-POETRY OF ROBERT BURNS

I. LOVE—PERSONAL

No. 1. O, once I lov'd a bonie lass.

Tune: I am a man unmarried. (Unknown.)

O, ONCE I lov'd a bonie lass,
Ay, and I love her still,
And whilst that virtue warms my breast
I'll love my handsome Nell.

As bonie lasses I hae seen,
And monie full as braw;
But for a modest, gracefu' mien,
The like I never saw.

A bonie lass, I will confess,
Is pleasant to the e'e;
But without some better qualities
She's no a lass for me.

But Nelly's looks are blythe and sweet;
And, what is best of a',
Her reputation is compleat,
And fair without a flaw.

She dresses ay sae clean and neat,
Both decent and genteel;
And then there's something in her gate,
Gars ony dress look weel.

A gaudy dress and gentle air
May slightly touch the heart;
But it's innocence and modesty
That polishes the dart.

'Tis this in Nelly pleases me;
'Tis this enchants my soul,
For absolutely in my breast
She reigns without controul.

No. 2. In Tarbolton, ye ken.

(Tune unknown.)

IN Tarbolton, ye ken, there are proper young men,
And proper young lasses and a', man;
But ken ye the Ronalds that live in the Bennals?
They carry the gree frae them a', man.

Their father's a laird, and weel he can spare't,
Braid money to tocher them a', man;
To proper young men, he'll clink in the hand
Gowd guineas a hunder or twa, man.

There's ane they ca' Jean, I'll warrant ye've seen
 As bonie a lass or as braw, man ;
 But for sense and guid taste she'll vie wi' the best,
 And a conduct that beautifies a', man.

The charms o' the min', the langer they shine
 The mair admiration they draw, man ;
 While peaches and cherries, and roses and lilies,
 They fade and they wither awa, man.

If ye be for Miss Jean, tak this frae a frien',
 A hint o' a rival or twa, man ;
 The Laird o' Blackbyre wad gang through the fire,
 If that wad entice her awa, man.

The Laird o' Braehead has been on his speed
 For mair than a towmond or twa, man ;
 The Laird o' the Ford will straught on a board,
 If he canna get her at a', man.

Then Anna comes in, the pride o' her kin,
 The boast of our bachelors a', man ;
 Sae sonsy and sweet, sae fully complete,
 She steals our affections awa, man.

If I should detail the pick and the wale
 O' lasses that live here awa, man,
 The faut wad be mine, if they didna shine
 The sweetest and best o' them a', man.

I lo'e her mysel, but darena weel tell,
 My poverty keeps me in awe, man,
 For making o' rhymes, and working at times,
 Does little or naething at a', man.

Yet I wadna choose to let her refuse,
 Nor hae't in her power to say na, man ;
 For though I be poor, unnoticed, obscure,
 My stomach's as proud as them a', man.

Though I canna ride in weel-booted pride,
 And flee o'er the hills like a craw, man,
 I can haud up my head wi' the best o' the breed,
 Though fluttering ever so braw, man.

My coat and my vest, they are Scotch o' the best ;
 O' pairs o' guid breeks I hae twa, man,
 And stockings and pumps to put on my stumps,
 And ne'er a wrang steek in them a', man.

My sarks they are few, but five o' them new,
 Twal' hundred, as white as the snaw, man;
 A ten-shillings hat, a Holland cravat;
 There are no mony poets sae braw, man.

I never had friens weel stockit in means,
 To leave me a hundred or twa, man;
 Nae weel-tocher'd aunts, to wait on their drants,
 And wish them in hell for it a', man.

I never was cannie for hoarding o' money,
 Or claughtin't together at a', man,
 I've little to spend and naething to lend,
 But deevil a shilling I awe, man.

No. 3. Altho' my bed were in yon muir.

Tune : Galla Water. Scots Musical Museum, 1788, No. 125.

Andante

Al - tho' my bed were in yon muir,
 A - - mang the hea - ther, in my plaidie,
 Yet hap - py, hap - py would I be,
 Had I my dear Mont - gom - erie's Peg - gy.

ALTHO' my bed were in yon muir,
 Among the heather, in my plaidie,
 Yet happy, happy would I be,
 Had I my dear Montgomerie's Peggy.

When o'er the hill beat surly storms,
 And winter nights were dark and rainy,
 I'd seek some dell, and in my arms
 I'd shelter dear Montgomerie's Peggy.

Were I a Baron proud and high,
 And horse and servants waiting ready,
 Then a' 'twad gie o' joy to me—
 The shairin't with Montgomerie's Peggy.

No. 4. *Yestreen I met you on the moor.*Tune: Invercauld's Reel. Stewart's Reels, 1762, p. 31.

Lively

CHORUS. O Tib-bie, I hae seen the day, Ye wad-na been sae shy;
 For laik o' gear ye light-ly me, But, trowth, I care na by.
 Yestr-een I met you on the moor, Ye spak na but gaed by like stoure:
 Ye geck at me be-cause I'm poor, But fient a hair care I.

CHORUS. O Tibbie, I hae seen the day,
 Ye wadna been sae shy;
 For laik o' gear ye lightly me,
 But, trowth, I care na by.

YESTREEN I met you on the moor,
 Ye spak na but gaed by like stoure:
 Ye geck at me because I'm poor,
 But fient a hair care I.

When comin hame on Sunday last,
 Upon the road as I cam past,
 Ye snufft an' gae your head a cast—
 But, trowth, I care't na by.

I doubt na, lass, but ye may think,
 Because ye hae the name o' clink,
 That ye can please me at a wink,
 Whene'er ye like to try.

But sorrow tak him that's sae mean,
 Altho' his pouch o' coin were clean,
 Wha follows ony saucy quean,
 That looks sae proud and high!

Altho' a lad were e'er sae smart,
 If that he want the yellow dirt,
 Ye'll cast your head anither airt,
 And answer him fu' dry.

But if he hae the name o' gear,
 Ye'll fasten to him like a brier,
 Tho' hardly he, for sense or lear
 Be better than the kye.

But, Tibbie, lass, tak my advice,
 Your daddie's gear maks you sae nice;
 The deil a ane wad speir your price,
 Were ye as poor as I.

There lives a lass beside yon park,
 I'd rather hae her in her sark
 Than you, wi' a' your thousand mark
 That gars you look sae high.

No. 5. If ye gae up to yon hill-tap.

(Tune unknown.)

IF ye gae up to yon hill-tap, Ye'll there see bonie Peggy ; She kens her father is a laird, And she forsooth's a leddy. There's Sophy tight, a lassie bright, Besides a handsome fortune ; Wha canna win her in a night Has little art in courtin. Gae down by Faile, and taste the ale, And tak a look o' Mysie ; She's dour and din, a deil within, But aiblins she may please ye.	If she be shy, her sister try, Ye'll maybe fancy Jenny ; If ye'll dispense wi' want o' sense— She kens hersel she's bonie. As ye gae up by yon hillside, Speir in for bonie Bessy ; She'll gie ye a beck, and bid ye light, And handsomely address ye. There's few sae bonie, nane sae guid In a' King George' dominion ; If ye should doubt the truth of this— It's Bessy's ain opin'ion!

No. 6. Her flowing locks, the raven's wing.

(Tune unknown.)

HER flowing locks, the raven's wing,
Adown her neck and bosom hing ;
How sweet unto that breast to cling,
And round that neck entwine her !

Her lips are roses wat wi' dew ;
O, what a feast, her bonie mou' !
Her cheeks a mair celestial hue,
A crimson still diviner !

No. 7. *Had I a cave.*Tune : Robin Adair or Aileen a roon (see No. 45).

HAD I a cave on some wild distant shore, Where the winds howl to the wave's dashing roar, There would I weep my woes, There seek my lost repose, Till grief my eyes should close, Ne'er to wake more !	Falsest of womankind, canst thou declare All thy fond, plighted vows fleeting as air ? To thy new lover lie, Laugh o'er thy perjury, Then in thy bosom try What peace is there !

No. 8. *'It was upon a Lammas night.*Tune : Corn rigs. Craig's Scots Tunes, 1730, p. 42.

Lively

It was up - on a Lammas night, When corn rigs are bon - ie, Be - neath the moon's un - cloud - ed light, I held a - wa to An - nie: The time flew by, wi' tent - less heed, Till 'tween the late and ear - - ly,
 Wi' sma' per - sua - sion she a - greed
 To see me thro' the bar - - ley.

CHORUS.

Corn rigs, an' bar-ley rigs, An' corn rigs are bon - ie:
 I'll ne'er for - get that hap - py night,
 A - mang the rigs, wi' An - - nie.

It was upon a Lammas night,
 When corn rigs are bonie,
 Beneath the moon's unclouded light,
 I held awa to Annie:
 The time flew by, wi' tentless heed*,
 Till, 'tween the late and early,
 Wi' sma' persuasion she agreed
 To see me thro' the barley.

CHORUS. *Corn rigs, an' barley rigs,
 An' corn rigs are bonie:
 I'll ne'er forget that happy night,
 Amang the rigs wi' Annie.*

The sky was blue, the wind was still,
 The moon was shining clearly;
 I set her down, wi' right good will,
 Amang the rigs o' barley:
 I kent her heart was a' my ain;
 I lov'd her most sincerely;
 I kiss'd her owre and owre again,
 Amang the rigs o' barley.

I lock'd her in my fond embrace;
 Her heart was beating rarely:
 My blessings on that happy place,
 Amang the rigs o' barley!
 But by the moon and stars so bright,
 That shone that hour so clearly!
 She ay shall bless that happy night
 Amang the rigs o' barley.

I hae been blythe wi' comrades dear;
 I hae been merry drinking;
 I hae been joyfu' gath'rin gear;
 I hae been happy thinking:
 But a' the pleasures e'er I saw,
 Tho' three times doubled fairly,
 That happy night was worth them a',
 Amang the rigs o' barley.

No. 9. *O, leave novéls, ye Mauchline belles.*Tune: Ye Mauchline belles. Scots Musical Museum, 1803, No. 573.Lively

The musical score is written on five staves of a single treble clef in common time (C). The melody is marked 'Lively'. There are two asterisks (*) above the notes on the first and fourth staves, indicating a specific performance instruction. The lyrics are printed below the notes, with hyphens indicating syllables that span across notes.

O, leave no - véls, ye Mauch-line belles, Ye're sa - fer at your spin - ning wheel! Such witch - ing books are bait - ed hooks For rak - ish rooks like Rob Moss-giel, Your fine Tom Jones and Gran - di - sons They make your youth - ful fan - cies reel; They heat your brains, and fire your veins, And then you're prey for Rob Mossgiel.

O, LEAVE novéls, ye Mauchline belles,
 Ye're safer at your spinning-wheel!
 Such witching books are baited hooks
 For rakish rooks like Rob Mossgiel.

Your fine Tom Jones and Grandisons
 They make your youthful fancies reel;
 They heat your brains, and fire your veins,
 And then you're prey for Rob Mossgiel.

Beware a tongue that's smoothly hung,
 A heart that warmly seems to feel;
 That feeling heart but acts a part—
 'Tis rakish art in Rob Mossgiel.

The frank address, the soft caress,
 Are worse than poisoned darts of steel;
 The frank address, and politesse,
 Are all finesse in Rob Mossgiel.

O, WHA my babie-clouts will buy?
 Wha will tent me when I cry?
 Wha will kiss me where I lie?—
 The rantin dog, the daddie o't.

Wha will own he did the faut?
 Wha will buy the groanin maut?
 Wha will tell me how to ca't?—
 The rantin dog, the daddie o't.

When I mount the creepie-chair,
 Wha will sit beside me there?
 Gie me Rob, I'll seek nae mair,—
 The rantin dog, the daddie o't.

Wha will crack to me my lane?
 Wha will mak me fidgin fain?
 Wha will kiss me o'er again?—
 The rantin dog, the daddie o't.

No. 11. *Now westlin winds and slaught'ring guns.*Tune: Port Gordon. Cal. Pocket Companion, c. 1756, viii, p. 25.Slow

Now west-lin winds and slaught'ring guns Bring Autumn's plea-sant wea-ther; And the moor-cock springs, on whirr-ing wings, A - mang the bloom-ing hea-ther: Now wav-ing grain, wide o'er the plain,
De - lights the wea - ry far - mer; And the moon shines bright, when I rove at night, To muse up - on my charm - er.

Now westlin winds and slaught'ring guns
Bring autumn's pleasant weather;
And the moorcock springs, on whirring wings,
Among the blooming heather:
Now waving grain, wide o'er the plain,
Delights the weary farmer;
And the moon shines bright, when I rove at night,
To muse upon my charmer.

The partridge loves the fruitful fells;
The plover loves the mountains;
The woodcock haunts the lonely dells,
The soaring hern the fountains;
Thro' lofty groves the cushat roves,
The path of man to shun it;
The hazel bush o'erhangs the thrush,
The spreading thorn the linnet.

Thus ev'ry kind their pleasure find,
 The savage and the tender ;
 Some social join, and leagues combine ;
 Some solitary wander :
 Avaunt, away ! the cruel sway,
 Tyrannic man's dominion ;
 The sportsman's joy, the murd'ring cry,
 The fluttering, gory pinion !

But Peggy dear, the evening's clear,
 Thick flies the skimming swallow ;
 The sky is blue, the fields in view,
 All fading green and yellow :
 Come let us stray our gladsome way,
 And view the charms of Nature ;
 The rustling corn, the fruited thorn,
 And ev'ry happy creature.

We'll gently walk, and sweetly talk,
 Till the silent moon shine clearly ;
 I'll grasp thy waist, and fondly prest,
 Swear how I love thee dearly :
 Not vernal show'rs to budding flow'rs,
 Not autumn to the farmer,
 So dear can be, as thou to me,
 My fair, my lovely charmer !

No. 12. Full well thou know'st I love thee, dear.

Tune : Rothiemurchie's rant.

CHORUS. *Fairest maid on Devon banks,
 Crystal Devon, winding Devon,
 Wilt thou lay that frown aside,
 And smile as thou wert wont to do ?*

FULL well thou know'st I love thee, dear,
 Couldst thou to malice lend an ear ?
 O, did not love exclaim :—'Forbear,
 Nor use a faithful lover so !'

Then come, thou fairest of the fair,
 Those wonted smiles, O let me share ;
 And by thy beauteous self I swear
 No love but thine my heart shall know.

No. 13. *Behind yon hills where Lugar flows.*Tune : My Nanie, O. Orpheus Caledonius, 1725, No. 38.Slowly

Be - hind yon hills where Lu - gar flows
 'Mang moors an' moss - es ma - ny, O,
 The win - try sun the day has clos'd,
 And I'll a - wa to Nan - ie, O.
 The west - lin wind blows loud an' shill;
 The night's baith mirk and rai - ny, O;
 But I'll get my plaid, an' out I'll steal,
 An' owre the hill to Nan - ie, O.

BEHIND yon hills where Lugar flows
 'Mang moors an' mosses many, O,
 The wintry sun the day has clos'd,
 And I'll awa to Nanie, O.
 The westlin wind blows loud an' shill;
 The night's baith mirk and rainy, O;
 But I'll get my plaid, an' out I'll steal,
 An' owre the hill to Nanie, O.

My Nanie's charming, sweet an' young ;
 Nae artfu' wiles to win ye, O ;
 May ill befa' the flattering tongue
 That wad beguile my Nanie, O.
 Her face is fair, her heart is true ;
 As spotless as she's bonie, O ;
 The op'ning gowan, wat wi' dew,
 Nae purer is than Nanie, O.
 A country lad is my degree,
 An' few there be that ken me, O ;
 But what care I how few they be,
 I'm welcome ay to Nanie, O.
 My riches a's my penny-fee,
 An' I maun guide it cannie, O ;
 But warl's gear ne'er troubles me,
 My thoughts are a', my Nanie, O.
 Our auld guidman delights to view
 His sheep an' kye thrive bonie, O ;
 But I'm as blythe that hauds his pleugh,
 An' has nae care but Nanie, O.
 Come weel, come woe, I care na by,
 I'll tak what Heav'n will sen' me, O ;
 Nae ither care in life have I,
 But live, an' love my Nanie, O !

No. 14. *True-hearted was he, the sad swain
o' the Yarrow.*

Tune : Bonie Dundee.

TRUE-HEARTED was he, the sad swain o' the Yarrow,
 And fair are the maids on the banks of the Ayr ;
 But by the sweet side o' the Nith's winding river
 Are lovers as faithful and maidens as fair :
 To equal young Jessie seek Scotia all over :
 To equal young Jessie you seek it in vain ;
 Grace, beauty, and elegance fetter her lover,
 And maidenly modesty fixes the chain.
 Fresh is the rose in the gay, dewy morning,
 And sweet is the lily at evening close ;
 But in the fair presence o' lovely young Jessie
 Unseen is the lily, unheeded the rose.
 Love sits in her smile, a wizard ensnaring ;
 Enthron'd in her een he delivers his law ;
 And still to her charms she alone is a stranger—
 Her modest demeanour's the jewel of a' !

No. 15. *Young Peggy blooms our boniest lass.*Tune: Loch Eroch Side. Scots Musical Museum, 1787, No. 78.

Andante

Young Peg - gy blooms our bon - iest lass,
 Her blush is like the morn - ing,
 The ro - sy dawn, the spring - ing grass,
 With ear - ly gems a - dorn - ing;
 Her eyes out - shine the ra - diant beams
 That gild the pass - ing show - er,
 And glit - ter o'er the chrys - tal streams,
 And chear each fresh' - ning flow - er.

YOUNG Peggy blooms our boniest lass,
 Her blush is like the morning,
 The rosy dawn, the springing grass,
 With early gems adorning;
 Her eyes outshine the radiant beams
 That gild the passing shower,
 And glitter o'er the chrystal streams,
 And chear each fresh'ning flower.

Her lips, more than the cherries bright—
 A richer dye has graced them—
 They charm th' admiring gazer's sight,
 And sweetly tempt to taste them ;
 Her smile is as the ev'ning mild,
 When feather'd pairs are courting,
 And little lambkins wanton wild,
 In playful bands disporting.
 Were Fortune lovely Peggy's foe,
 Such sweetness would relent her :
 As blooming Spring unbends the brow
 Of surly, savage Winter.
 Detraction's eye no aim can gain
 Her winning powers to lessen,
 And fretful envy grins in vain
 The poison'd tooth to fasten.
 Ye Powers of Honor, Love, and Truth,
 From ev'ry ill defend her !
 Inspire the highly-favour'd youth
 The destinies intend her !
 Still fan the sweet connubial flame
 Responsive in each bosom ;
 And bless the dear parental name
 With many a filial blossom.

No. 16. Altho' thou maun never be mine.

Tune: Here's a health to them that's awa.

CHORUS. *Here's a health to aye I lo'e dear,
 Here's a health to aye I lo'e dear ;
 Thou art sweet as the smile when fond lovers meet,
 And soft as their parting tear—Jessy.*

ALTHO' thou maun never be mine,
 Altho' even hope is denied ;
 'Tis sweeter for thee despairing
 Than ought in the world beside—Jessy.
 I mourn thro' the gay, gaudy day,
 As hopeless I muse on thy charms ;
 But welcome the dream o' sweet slumber,
 For then I am lockt in thine arms—Jessy.
 I guess by the dear angel smile,
 I guess by the love-rolling e'e ;
 But why urge the tender confession,
 'Gainst Fortune's fell cruel decree?—Jessy.

No. 17. *The Catrine woods were yellow seen.*Tune: The braes o' Ballochmyle. Scots Musical Museum, 1790, No. 276.Slow

The musical score is written on a single treble clef staff in the key of D major (two sharps) and common time (C). The tempo is marked 'Slow'. The melody consists of eight lines of music, each with a corresponding line of lyrics underneath. The lyrics are: 'The Ca - trine woods were yel - low seen, The flowers de - cay'd on Ca - trine lea; Nae lav' - rock sang on hil - lock green, But Na - ture sick - en'd on the e'e; Thro' fa - ded groves Ma - ri - a sang, Her - sel' in beau - ty's bloom the while; And ay the wild - wood e - - choes rang; - 'Fare - weel the braes o' Bal - loch - myle!'

The Catrine woods were yel - low seen,
 The flowers de - cay'd on Ca - trine lea;
 Nae lav' - rock sang on hil - lock green,
 But Na - ture sick - en'd on the e'e;
 Thro' fa - ded groves Ma - ri - a sang,
 Her - sel' in beau - ty's bloom the while;
 And ay the wild - wood e - - choes rang; -
 'Fare - weel the braes o' Bal - loch - myle!'

THE Catrine woods were yellow seen,
 The flowers decay'd on Catrine lea;
 Nae lav'rock sang on hillock green,
 But Nature sicken'd on the e'e;
 Thro' faded groves Maria sang,
 Hersel' in beauty's bloom the while;
 And ay the wild-wood echoes rang;—
 'Fareweel the braes o' Ballochmyle!'

‘Low in your wintry beds, ye flowers,
 Again ye’ll flourish fresh and fair ;
 Ye birdies, dumb in with’ring bowers,
 Again ye’ll charm the vocal air ;
 But here, alas! for me nae mair
 Shall birdie charm, or floweret smile ;
 Fareweel the bonie banks of Ayr,
 Fareweel! fareweel sweet Ballochmyle!’

No. 18. Stay, my charmer, can you leave me?

Tune : An gille dubh ciar dubh. Scots Musical Museum, 1788, No. 129.

Slow

The musical score is written in treble clef with a common time signature (C). It consists of four staves of music. The lyrics are written below the notes. The first staff begins with the tempo marking 'Slow'. The second staff has a 'tr' (trill) marking above the first note. The third staff has a 'tr' marking above the first note. The fourth staff has 'tr' markings above the first and second notes. The lyrics are: 'Stay, my charm - er, can you leave me? Cru - el, cru - el to de - ceive me! Well you know how much you grieve me: Cru - el charm - er, can you go? Cru - el charm - er, can you go?'.

Stay, my charm - er, can you leave me? Cru - el, cru - el to de - ceive me! Well you know how much you grieve me: Cru - el charm - er, can you go? Cru - el charm - er, can you go?

STAY, my charmer, can you leave me?
 Cruel, cruel to deceive me!
 Well you know how much you grieve me:
 Cruel charmer, can you go?
 Cruel charmer, can you go?

By my love so ill requited,
 By the faith you fondly plighted,
 By the pangs of lovers slighted,
 Do not, do not leave me so!
 Do not, do not leave me so!

No. 19. *My heart was ance as blythe and free.*Tune : To the weaver's gin ye go. Scots Musical Museum, 1788, No. 103.

Slowly

My heart was ance as blythe and free as sim-mer days were lang; But a bonie, west - lin weaver lad Has gart me change my sang.

CHORUS.

To the weaver's gin ye go, fair maids, To the weaver's gin ye go, I rede you right, gang ne'er at night, To the weaver's gin ye go.

My heart was ance as blythe and free
 As simmer days were lang;
 But a bonie, westlin weaver lad
 Has gart me change my sang.

CHORUS. *To the weaver's gin ye go, fair maids,
 To the weaver's gin ye go,
 I rede you right, gang ne'er at night,
 To the weaver's gin ye go.*

My mither sent me to the town,
 To warp a plaiden wab;
 But the weary, weary warpin o't
 Has gart me sigh and sab.

A bonie, westlin weaver lad
 Sat working at his loom;
 He took my heart, as wi' a net,
 In every knot and thrum.

I sat beside my warpin-wheel,
 And ay I ca'd it roun';
 But every shot and every knock,
 My heart it gae a stoun.

The moon was sinking in the west
 Wi' visage pale and wan,
 As my bonie, westlin weaver lad
 Convoy'd me through the glen.

But what was said, or what was done,
 Shame fa' me gin I tell ;
 But O! I fear the kintra soon
 Will ken as weel's mysel!

No. 20. How long and dreary is the night.

Tune : A Gaelic air. Scots Musical Museum, 1788, No. 175.

Slow

How long and dreary is the night, When I am frae my dear - ie! I sleep - less lye frae e'en to morn, Tho'
 I were ne'er sae wear - y. I sleep - less lye frae e'en to morn, Tho' I were ne'er sae wear - y!

How long and dreary is the night,
 When I am frae my dearie!
 I sleepless lye frae e'en to morn, } bis
 Tho' I were ne'er sae weary. }

When I think on the happy days
 I spent wi' you, my dearie:
 And now what lands between us lye, } bis
 How can I be but cherie! }

How slow ye move, ye heavy hours,
 As ye were wae and weary!
 It wasna sae ye glinted by, } bis
 When I was wi' my dearie. }

NO. 21. *Yon wild mossy mountains.*Tune : Phoebe. Cal. Pocket Companion, 1752, iv. p. 19.

Slow

Yon wild mos - sy mount - ains sae lof - ty and wide,
 That nurse in their ho - som the youth o' the Clyde,
 Where the grouse lead their cov - eys thro' the heath - er to feed,
 And the shep - herd tents his flock as he pipes on his reed.
 Where the grouse lead their cov - eys thro' the heath - er to feed,
 And the shep - herd tents his flock as he pipes on his reed.

Yon wild mossy mountains sae lofty and wide,

 Where the grouse lead their coveys thro' the heather to feed, } bis
 And the shepherd tents his flock as he pipes on his reed.

Not Gowrie's rich valley nor Forth's sunny shores,
 To me hae the charms o' yon wild mossy moors;
 For there, by a lanely, sequesterèd stream, } bis
 Resides a sweet lassie, my thought and my dream.

Amang thae wild mountains shall still be my path,
 Ilk stream foaming down its ain green, narrow strath;
 For there wi' my lassie the day-lang I rove, } bis
 While o'er us unheeded flie the swift hours o' love.

She is not the fairest, altho' she is fair;
 O' nice education but sma' is her share;
 Her parentage humble as humble can be; } bis
 But I lo'e the dear lassie because she lo'es me.

To Beauty what man but maun yield him a prize,
 In her armour of glances, and blushes, and sighs?
 And when wit and refinement hae polish'd her darts, } bis
 They dazzle our een, as they flie to our hearts.

But kindness, sweet kindness, in the fond sparkling e'e
 Has lustre outshining the diamond to me,
 And the heart-beating love as I'm clasp'd in her arms, } bis
 O, these are my lassie's all-conquering charms!

No. 22. Anna, thy charms my bosom fire.

Tune: Bonny Mary. Cal. Pocket Companion, 1743, i. p. 24.

Slow

The musical score is written in a single system with six staves. The key signature has two flats (B-flat and E-flat), and the time signature is common time (C). The melody is in a descending sequence of eighth and sixteenth notes. Trills (tr) are indicated above the notes for 'low', 'Fair', 'im-pious', and 'Hea-ven'. The lyrics are printed below the notes.

Ann - a, thy charms my bo - som fire. And waste my soul with care; But ah! low boot - less to ad - mire When fa - ted to des - pair!
 Yet in thy pre - sence, love - ly Fair, To hope may be for - given; For sure 'twere im - pious to des - pair so much in sight of Hea - ven.

ANNA, thy charms my bosom fire,
 And waste my soul with care;
 But ah! how bootless to admire
 When fated to despair!
 Yet in thy presence, lovely Fair,
 To hope may be forgiven;
 For sure 'twere impious to despair
 So much in sight of Heaven.

No. 23. 'Twas even—the dewy fields were green.

Tune: Eltrick Banks. Orpheus Caledonius, 1733, No. 45.Moderate

The musical score is written on a single treble clef staff in the key of D major (two sharps) and common time (C). The tempo is marked 'Moderate'. The melody consists of six lines of music. The lyrics are printed below the notes, with hyphens indicating syllables that span across multiple notes. The final line of music ends with a double bar line.

'Twas even—the dew - y fields were green, On ev - ery blade the pearls hang, The Ze - phyr wan - ton'd round the bean, And bore its fra - grant sweets a - lang; In ev' - ry glen the ma - vis sang, All Na - ture list' - ning seem'd the while, Ex - cept where green - wood e - choes rang A - mang the braes . o' Bal - loch - myle.

'Twas even—the dewy fields were green,
 On every blade the pearls hang,
 The zephyr wanton'd round the bean,
 And bore its fragrant sweets along;
 In ev'ry glen the mavis sang,
 All Nature list'ning seem'd the while,
 Except where greenwood echoes rang
 Among the braes o' Ballochmyle.

With careless step I onward stray'd,
 My heart rejoic'd in Nature's joy,
 When, musing in a lonely glade,
 A maiden fair I chanced to spy;
 Her look was like the morning's eye,
 Her air like Nature's vernal smile;
 Perfection whisper'd, passing by:—
 'Behold the lass o' Ballochmyle!'

Fair is the morn in flowery May,
 And sweet is night in autumn mild,
 When roving thro' the garden gay,
 Or wand'ring in the lonely wild:
 But woman, Nature's darling child—
 There all her charms she does compile ;
 Even there her other works are foil'd
 By the bonie lass o' Ballochmyle.

O, had she been a country maid,
 And I the happy country swain,
 Tho' shelter'd in the lowest shed
 That ever rose on Scotia's plain!
 Thro' weary winter's wind and rain
 With joy, with rapture, I would toil,
 And nightly to my bosom strain
 The bonie lass o' Ballochmyle!

Then pride might climb the slipp'ry steep,
 Where fame and honours lofty shine ;
 And thirst of gold might tempt the deep,
 Or downward seek the Indian mine:
 Give me the cot below the pine,
 To tend the flocks or till the soil,
 And ev'ry day have joys divine
 With the bonie lass o' Ballochmyle.

No. 24. As I gaed up by yon gate-end.

(Tune unknown.)

As I gaed up by yon gate-end,
 When day was waxin weary,
 Wha did I meet come down the street
 But pretty Peg, my dearie ?

Her air sae sweet, her shape complete,
 Wi' nae proportion wanting,
 The Queen of Love did never move
 Wi' motion mair enchanting !

Wi' linkèd hands we took the sands
 Adoun yon winding river ;
 O, that sweet hour and shady bower
 Forget it shall I never.

No. 25. *How pleasant the banks.*Tune: Bhannerach dhon na chrie. Scots Musical Museum, 1788, No. 157.

Slow

How pleas-ant the banks of the clear wind-ing De - von,
 With green spread-ing bush - es and flow'rs bloom-ing fair!
 But the bo - ni - est flow'r on the banks of the De - von
 Was once a sweet bud on the braes of the Ayr.
 Mild be the sun on this sweet blush-ing flow - er,
 In the gay ro - sy morn, as it bathes in the dew!
 And gen - tle the fall of the soft ver - nal show - er,
 That steals on the even - ing each leaf to re - new!

How pleasant the banks of the clear winding Devon,
 With green spreading bushes and flow'rs blooming fair!
 But the boniest flow'r on the banks of the Devon
 Was once a sweet bud on the braes of the Ayr.
 Mild be the sun on this sweet blushing flower,
 In the gay rosy morn, as it bathes in the dew!
 And gentle the fall of the soft vernal shower,
 That steals on the evening each leaf to renew!

O, spare the dear blossom, ye orient breezes,
 With chill, hoary wing as ye usher the dawn!
 And far be thou distant, thou reptile that seizes
 The verdure and pride of the garden or lawn!
 Let Bourbon exult in his gay gilded lilies,
 And England triumphant display her proud rose!
 A fairer than either adorns the green vallies,
 Where Devon, sweet Devon, meandering flows.

CHORUS. O lovely Polly Stewart,
O charming Polly Stewart,
There's ne'er a flower that blooms in May,
That's half so fair as thou art!

THE flower it blows, it fades, it fa's,
 And art can ne'er renew it;
 But worth and truth eternal youth
 Will gie to Polly Stewart!
 May he whase arms shall fauld thy charms
 Possess a leal and true heart!
 To him be given to ken the heaven
 He grasps in Polly Stewart!

FROM thee Eliza, I must go,
 And from my native shore:
 The cruel fates between us throw
 A boundless ocean's roar;
 But boundless oceans, roaring wide
 Between my love and me,
 They never, never can divide
 My heart and soul from thee.

Farewell, farewell, Eliza dear,
 The maid that I adore!
 A boding voice is in mine ear,
 We part to meet no more!
 But the latest throb that leaves my heart,
 While Death stands victor by,
 That throb, Eliza, is thy part,
 And thine that latest sigh!

chils rise, Far in their shade my Peg - gy's charms First blest my wonder - ing eyes ; As one who by some sav - age stream A lone - ly gem sur - veys, A - ston - ish'd doub - ly, marks it beam With art's most pol - ish'd blaze.

WHERE, braving angry winter's storms,
 The lofty Ochils rise,
 Far in their shade my Peggy's charms
 First blest my wondering eyes ;
 As one who by some savage stream
 A lonely gem surveys,
 Astonish'd doubly, marks it beam
 With art's most polish'd blaze.

Blest be the wild sequester'd shade,
 And blest the day and hour,
 Where Peggy's charms I first survey'd,
 When first I felt their pow'r !
 The tyrant Death with grim control
 May seize my fleeting breath ;
 But tearing Peggy from my soul
 Must be a stronger death.

No. 29. *My Peggy's face, my Peggy's form.*Tune: My Peggy's face. Scots Musical Museum, 1803, No. 501.Slowly

My Peg-gy's face, my Peg - gy's form The frost of her - mit age might warm, My Peg - gy's worth, my Peg - gy's mind Might charm the first of hu - man kind. I love my Peg - gy's an - gel air, Her face so tru - ly heav - en - ly fair, Her na - tive grace so void of art; But I a - dore my Peg-gy's heart.

My Peggy's face, my Peggy's form
 The frost of hermit age might warm;
 My Peggy's worth, my Peggy's mind
 Might charm the first of human kind.
 I love my Peggy's angel air,
 Her face so truly heavenly fair,
 Her native grace so void of art;
 But I adore my Peggy's heart.

The lily's hue, the rose's dye,
 The kindling lustre of an eye—
 Who but owns their magic sway?
 Who but knows they all decay?
 The tender thrill, the pitying tear,
 The generous purpose nobly dear,
 The gentle look that rage disarms—
 These are all immortal charms.

By Oughtertyre grows the aik,
On Yarrow banks the birken shaw;
But Phemie was a bonier lass
Than braes o' Yarrow ever saw.

Her looks were like a flow'r in May,
Her smile was like a simmer morn:
She trippèd by the banks o' Earn
As light's a bird upon a thorn.

Her bonie face it was as meek
As ony lamb upon a lea:
The evening sun was ne'er sae sweet
As was the blink o' Phemie's e'e.

The Highland hills I've wander'd wide,
As o'er the Lawlands I hae been,
But Phemie was the blithest lass
That ever trode the dewy green.

No. 31. *A rosebud, by my early walk.*Tune : A rosebud. Scots Musical Museum, 1788, No. 189.

Slow

A rose-bud, by my ear-ly walk A-down a corn-in-clos-èd bawk, Sae gent-ly bent its thor-ny stalk, All on a dew-y morn-ing. Ere twice the shades o' dawn are fled, In a' its crim-son glo-ry spread, And droop-ing rich the dew-y head, It scents the, ear-ly morn-ing.

A ROSEBUD, by my early walk
 A-down a corn-inclosèd bawk,
 Sae gently bent its thorny stalk,
 All on a dewy morning.
 Ere twice the shades o' dawn are fled,
 In a' its crimson glory spread,
 And drooping rich the dewy head,
 It scents the early morning.

Within the bush, her covert nest
 A little linnet fondly prest,
 The dew sat chilly on her breast,
 Sae early in the morning.
 She soon shall see her tender brood,
 The pride, the pleasure o' the wood,
 Among the fresh green leaves bedew'd,
 Awake the early morning.

So thou, dear bird, young Jeany fair,
 On trembling string or vocal air
 Shall sweetly pay the tender care
 That tents thy early morning!
 So thou, sweet Rosebud, young and gay,
 Shalt beauteous blaze upon the day,
 And bless the parent's evening ray
 That watch'd thy early morning.

MUSING on the roaring ocean,
 Which divides my love and me,
 Wearing Heav'n in warm devotion
 For his weal where'er he be.

Hope and fear's alternate billow
 Yielding late to Nature's law,
 Whisp'ring spirits round my pillow,
 Talk of him that's far awa.

Ye whom sorrow never wounded,
 Ye who never shed a tear,
 Care-untroubled, joy-surrounded,
 Gaudy Day to you is dear.

Gentle Night, do thou befriend me;
 Downy Sleep, the curtain draw:
 Spirits kind, again attend me,
 Talk of him that's far awa!

No. 34. Now Spring has clad the grove in green.

(Tune unknown.)

Now Spring has clad the grove in green,
 And strew'd the lea wi' flowers ;
 The furrow'd, waving corn is seen
 Rejoice in fostering showers ;
 While ilka thing in Nature join
 Their sorrows to forego,
 O, why thus all alone are mine
 The weary steps o' woe!

The trout within yon wimpling burn
 That glides, a silver dart,
 And, safe beneath the shady thorn,
 Defies the angler's art—
 My life was ance that careless stream,
 That wanton trout was I,
 But love wi' unrelenting beam
 Has scorch'd my fountains dry.

The little floweret's peaceful lot,
 In yonder cliff that grows,
 Which, save the linnet's flight, I wot,
 Nae ruder visit knows,
 Was mine, till love has o'er me past,
 And blighted a' my bloom ;
 And now beneath the withering blast
 My youth and joy consume.

The waken'd laverock warbling springs,
 And climbs the early sky,
 Wincrowing blythe his dewy wings
 In morning's rosy eye ;
 As little reck't I sorrow's power
 Until the flowery snare
 O' witching love in luckless hour
 Made me the thrall o' care!

O, had my fate been Greenland snows
 Or Afric's burning zone,
 Wi' man and Nature leagu'd my foes,
 So Peggy ne'er I'd known!
 The wretch whase doom is, 'Hope nae mair,'
 What tongue his woes can tell,
 Within whase bosom, save despair,
 Nae kinder spirits dwell.

FATE gave the word—the arrow sped,
 And pierc'd my darling's heart;
 And with him all the joys are fled
 Life can to me impart.
 By cruel hands the sapling drops,
 In dust dishonour'd laid:
 So fell the pride of all my hopes,
 My age's future shade.

The mother-linnet in the brake
 Bewails her ravish'd young;
 So I for my lost darling's sake
 Lament the live-day long.
 Death, oft I've fear'd thy fatal blow,
 Now fond I bare my breast!
 O, do thou kindly lay me low
 With him I love at rest!

 Heav'n gave me more—it made thee mine!

While day and night can bring delight,
 Or Nature aught of pleasure give;
 While joys above my mind can move,
 For thee, and thee alone, I live!
 When that grim foe of life below
 Comes in between to make us part,
 The iron hand that breaks our band,
 It breaks my bliss, it breaks my heart!

No. 38. *Ye gallants bright, I rede you right.*Tune: Bonie Ann. Scots Musical Museum, 1790, No. 215.Slowly

The musical score is written in a single system with six staves. It is in the key of B-flat major (two flats) and common time (C). The tempo is marked 'Slowly'. The lyrics are written below the notes. There are trills (tr) indicated above the notes for 'ly' in the second line and 'span.' in the sixth line.

Ye gal - lants bright, I rede you right, Be -

 Her een sae bright like stars by night,
 Her skin is like the swan;
 Sae jimply lac'd her genty waist,
 That sweetly ye might span.

Youth, Grace, and Love attendant move,
 And Pleasure leads the van:
 In a' their charms, and conquering arms,
 They wait on bonie Ann.
 The captive bands may chain the hands,
 But love enslaves the man:
 Ye gallants braw, I rede you a',
 Beware o' bonie Ann!

 'Twas not her golden ringlets bright,
 Her lips like roses wat wi' dew,
 Her heaving bosom lily-white—
 It was her een sae bonie blue.

She talk'd, she smil'd, my heart she wyl'd,
 She charm'd my soul I wist na how;
 And aye the stound, the deadly wound,

 But 'spare to speak, and spare to speed'—
 She'll aiblins listen to my vow :
 Should she refuse, I'll lay my dead
 To her twa een sae bonie blue.

 Care and anguish seize me.

Heavy, heavy is the task,
 Hopeless love declaring;
 Trembling, I dow nocht but glow'r,
 Sighing, dumb despairing!
 If she winna ease the throaws
 In my bosom swelling,
 Underneath the grass-green sod
 Soon maun be my dwelling.

Ye monarchs take the east and

Frae Indus to Savannah;
Gie me within my straining grasp
The melting form of Anna:
There I'll despise imperial charms,
An Empress or Sultana,
While dying raptures in her arms
I give and take wi' Anna!

Awa, thou flaunting god of day!
Awa, thou pale Diana!
Ilk star, gae hide thy twinkling ray.
When I'm to meet my Anna!
Come, in thy raven plumage, Night!

O, how shall I, unskilfu' try
 The poet's occupation?
 The tunefu' powers, in happy hours
 That whisper inspiration;
 Even they maun dare an effort mair
 Than aught they ever gave us,
 Ere they rehearse in equal verse
 The charms o' lovely Davies.
 Each eye, it cheers, when she appears,
 Like Phœbus in the morning,
 When past the shower, and every flower
 The garden is adorning!
 As the wretch looks o'er Siberia's shore,
 When winter-bound the wave is,
 Sae droops our heart when we maun part
 Frae charming, lovely Davies.

Her smile's a gift frae 'boon the lift,
 That maks us mair than princes;
 A sceptred hand, a king's command,
 Is in her darting glances:
 The man in arms 'gainst female charms,
 Even he her willing slave is:
 He hugs his chain, and owns the reign
 Of conquering lovely Davies.
 My Muse to dream of such a theme
 Her feeble powers surrenders;
 The eagle's gaze alone surveys
 The sun's meridian splendours:
 I wad in vain essay the strain:
 The deed too daring brave is!
 I'll drap the lyre, and, mute, admire
 The charms o' lovely Davies.

No. 44. *O, saw ye bonie Lesley?*Tune! The Collier's bon'e lassie. Thomson's Scottish Airs, 1798, No. 33.

O, saw ye bon-ie Les-ley, As she gaed o'er the Bor-der? She's gane like A-lex-an-der, To spread her con-quests far-ther! To see her is to love her, and love but her for ev-er; For Na-ture made her what she is, And nev-er made a-ni-ther!

O, saw ye bonie Lesley,
 As she gaed o'er the Border?
 She's gane, like Alexander,
 To spread her conquests farther!
 To see her is to love her,
 And love but her for ever;
 For Nature made her what she is,
 And never made anither!

That art a queen, fair Lesley—
 Thy subjects, we before thee;
 Thou art divine, fair Lesley—
 The hearts o' men adore thee.
 The deil he couldna skaith thee,
 Or aught that wad belang thee;
 He'd look into thy bonie face,
 And say:—'I canna wrang thee!'

The Powers aboon will tent thee,
 Misfortune sha' na steer thee :
 Thou'rt like themsel', sae lovely,
 That ill they'll ne'er let near thee.
 Return again, fair Lesley,
 Return to Caledonie!
 That we may brag we hae a lass
 There's nane again sae bonie.

 View - ing the breath - ing spring, Forth I did fare :
 Gay, the sun's gol - den eye Peep'd o'er the mountains high ;
 'Such thy bloom' did I cry — 'Phil - lis the fair.'

WHILE larks with little wing
 Fann'd the pure air,
 Viewing the breathing spring,
 Forth I did fare :
 Gay, the sun's golden eye
 Peep'd o'er the mountains high ;
 'Such thy bloom,' did I cry—
 'Phillis the fair.'

In each bird's careless song,
 Glad, I did share ;
 While yon wild-flowers among,
 Chance led me there :

Sweet to the op'ning day,
 Rosebuds bent the dewy spray ;
 'Such thy bloom,' did I say—
 'Phillis the fair.'

Down in a shady walk
 Doves cooing were ;
 I mark'd the cruel hawk
 Caught in a snare :
 So kind may Fortune be,
 Such make his destiny,
 He who would injure thee,
 Phillis the fair.

FAREWELL, thou stream that winding flows
 Around Eliza's dwelling!
 O mem'ry, spare the cruel throes
 Within my bosom swelling:
 Condemn'd to drag a hopeless chain
 And yet in secret languish,
 To feel a fire in every vein,
 Nor dare disclose my anguish!

Love's veriest wretch, unseen, unknown,
 I fain my griefs would cover:
 The bursting sigh, th' unweeting groan
 Betray the hapless lover.
 I know thou doom'st me to despair,
 Nor wilt, nor canst relieve me;
 But, O Eliza, hear one prayer—
 For pity's sake forgive me!

The music of thy voice I heard,
 Nor wist while it enslav'd me ;
 I saw thine eyes, yet nothing fear'd,
 Till fears no more had saved me :
 The unwary sailor thus, aghast,
 The wheeling torrent viewing,
 'Mid circling horrors sinks at last
 In overwhelming ruin.

Under friendship's kind disguise!

Thee, dear maid, hae I offended?

The offence is loving thee:

Canst thou wreck his peace for ever,

Wha for thine wad gladly die?

While the life beats in my bosom,
 Thou shalt mix in ilka throe :
 Turn again, thou lovely maiden,
 Ae sweet smile on me bestow !

Not the bee upon the blossom,

 All beneath the simmer moon,
 Not the poet, in the moment
 Fancy lightens in his e'e,
 Kens the pleasure, feels the rapture,

No. 49. There was a lass, and she was fair.

To its ain tune. (Unknown.)

THERE was a lass, and she was fair,
 At kirk and market to be seen
 When a' our fairest maids were met,
 The fairest maid was bonie Jean.

And ay she wrought her country wark,
 And ay she sang sae merrilie ;
 The blythest bird upon the bush
 Had ne'er a lighter heart than she !

But hawks will rob the tender joys,
 That bless the little lintwhite's nest,
 And frost will blight the fairest flowers,
 And love will break the soundest rest.

Young Robie was the brawest lad,
 The flower and pride of a' the glen,
 And he had owsen, sheep, and kye,
 And wanton naigies nine or ten.

He gaed wi' Jeanie to the tryste,
 He danced wi' Jeanie on the down,
 And, lang ere witless Jeanie wist,
 Her heart was tint, her peace was stown !

As in the bosom of the stream
 The moonbeam dwells at dewy e'en,
 So, trembling pure, was tender love
 Within the breast of bonie Jean.

And now she works her country's wark,
 And ay she sighs wi' care and pain,
 Yet wist na what her ail might be,
 Or what wad make her weel again.

But did na Jeanie's heart loup light,
 And did na joy blink in her e'e,
 As Robie tauld a tale o' love
 Ae e'enin on the lily lea?

The sun was sinking in the west,
 The birds sang sweet in ilka grove;
 His cheek to hers he fondly laid,
 And whisper'd thus his tale o' love :—

'O Jeanie fair, I lo'e thee dear—
 O, canst thou think to fancy me?
 Or wilt thou leave thy mammie's cot,
 And learn to tent the farms wi' me?

'At barn or byre thou shalt na drudge,
 Or naething else to trouble thee,
 But stray among the heather-bells,
 And tent the waving corn wi' me.'

Now what could artless Jeanie do?
 She had nae will to say him na:
 At length she blush'd a sweet consent,
 And love was ay between them twa.

He. O PHILLY, happy be that day
 When, roving thro' the gather'd hay,
 My youthfu' heart was stown away,
 And by thy charms, my Philly.

She. O, Willy, ay I bless the grove
 Where first I own'd my maiden love,
 Whilst thou did pledge the Powers above
 To be my ain dear Willy.

He. As songsters of the early year
 Are ilka day mair sweet to hear,
 So ilka day to me mair dear
 And charming is my Philly.

She. As on the brier the budding rose
 Still richer breathes, and fairer blows,
 So in my tender bosom grows
 The love I bear my Willy.

He. The milder sun and bluer sky,
 That crown my harvest cares wi' joy,
 Were ne'er sae welcome to my eye
 As is a sight o' Philly.

She. The little swallow's wanton wing,
 Tho' wafting o'er the flowery spring,
 Did ne'er to me sic tidings bring,
 As meeting o' my Willy.

He. The bee, that thro' the sunny hour
 Sips nectar in the op'ning flower,
 Compar'd wi' my delight is poor
 Upon the lips o' Philly.

She. The woodbine in the dewy weat,
 When ev'ning shades in silence meet,
 Is nocht sae fragrant or sae sweet
 As is a kiss o' Willy.

He. Let Fortune's wheel at random rin,
 And fools may tyne, and knaves may win;
 My thoughts are a' bound up in ane,
 And that's my ain dear Philly.

She. What's a' the joys that gowd can gie?
 I dinna care a single flie!
 The lad I love's the lad for me,
 And that's my ain dear Willy.

ADOWN winding Nith I did wander
 To mark the sweet flowers as they spring;
 Adown winding Nith I did wander
 Of Phillis to muse and to sing.

CHORUS. *Awa wi' your belles and your beauties—
 They never wi' her can compare!
 Whae'er hae met wi' my Phillis,
 Has met wi' the queen o' the Fair.*

The daisy amus'd my fond fancy,
 So artless, so simple, so wild;
 'Thou emblem,' said I, 'o' my Phillis'—
 For she is Simplicity's child.

The rosebud's the blush o' my charmer,
 Her sweet balmy lip when 'tis prest :
 How fair and how pure is the lily !
 But fairer and purer her breast.

Yon knot of gay flowers in the arbour,
 They ne'er wi' my Phillis can vie :
 Her breath is the breath of the woodbine,
 Its dew-drop o' diamond her eye.

Her voice is the song o' the morning,
 That wakes thro' the green-spreading grove,
 When Phebus peeps over the mountains
 On music, and pleasure, and love.

But beauty, how frail and how fleeting !
 The bloom of a fine summer's day !
 While worth in the mind o' my Phillis,
 Will flourish without a decay.

No. 52. Here is the glen, and here the bower.

Tune : Banks of Cree. (Unknown.)

HERE is the glen, and here the bower
 All underneath the birchen shade,
 The village bell has told the hour—
 O, what can stay my lovely maid ?
 'Tis not Maria's whispering call—
 'Tis but the balmy-breathing gale,
 Mixt with some warbler's dying fall
 The dewy star of eve to hail.

It is Maria's voice I hear ;—
 So calls the woodlark in the grove
 His little faithful mate to cheer :
 At once 'tis music and 'tis love !
 And art thou come ? and art thou true ?
 O, welcome, dear, to love and me,
 And let us all our vows renew
 Along the flowery banks of Cree.

ON Cessnock banks a lassie dwells;
 Could I describe her shape and mien;
 Our lasses a' she far excels;
 An' she has twa sparkling, rogueish een.

She's sweeter than the morning dawn,
 When rising Phœbus first is seen;
 When dew-drops twinkle o'er the lawn;
 An' she has twa sparkling, rogueish een.

She's stately like yon youthful ash,
 That grows the cowslip braes between,
 And drinks the stream with vigour fresh;
 An' she has twa sparkling, rogueish een.

She's spotless like the flow'ring thorn,
 With flow'rs so white and leaves so green,
 When purest in the dewy morn;
 An' she has twa sparkling, rogueish een.

Her looks are like the vernal May,
When ev'ning Phœbus shines serene ;
While birds rejoice on every spray ;
An' she has twa sparkling, rogueish een.

Her hair is like the curling mist,
That climbs the mountain-sides at e'en,
When flow'r-reviving rains are past ;
An' she has twa sparkling, rogueish een.

Her forehead's like the show'ry bow,
When gleaming sunbeams intervene,
And gild the distant mountain's brow ;
An' she has twa sparkling, rogueish een.

Her cheeks are like yon crimson gem,
The pride of all the flowery scene,
Just opening on its thorny stem ;
An' she has twa sparkling, rogueish een.

Her bosom's like the nightly snow,
When pale the morning rises keen ;
While hid the murmuring streamlets flow ;
An' she has twa sparkling, rogueish een.

Her voice is like the ev'ning thrush,
That sings on Cessnock banks unseen ;
While his mate sits nestling in the bush ;
An' she has twa sparkling, rogueish een.

Her lips are like yon cherries ripe,
That sunny walls from Boreas screen ;
They tempt the taste and charm the sight ;
An' she has twa sparkling, rogueish een.

Her teeth are like a flock of sheep,
With fleeces newly washen clean :
That slowly mount the rising steep,
An' she has twa sparkling, rogueish een.

Her breath is like the fragrant breeze
That gently stirs the blossom'd bean ;
When Phœbus sinks behind the seas ;
An' she has twa sparkling, rogueish een.

But it's not her air, her form, her face,
Tho' matching beauty's fabled queen ;
'Tis the mind that shines in every grace,
An' chiefly in her rogueish een.

No. 56. *O Mary, at thy window be.*Tune : Duncan Davison. Scots Musical Museum, 1788, No. 149.

O, Ma - ry at thy window be, It is the wish'd, the trysted hour !
 Those smiles and glances let me see, That make the miser's treasure poor.
 How blithely wad I bide the stoure, A weary slave frae sun to sun,
 Could I the rich re - ward secure—The love - ly Ma - ry Mor - i - son.

O MARY, at thy window be,
 It is the wish'd, the trysted hour !
 Those smiles and glances let me see,
 That make the miser's treasure poor.
 How blithely wad I bide the stoure,
 A weary slave frae sun to sun,
 Could I the rich reward secure—
 The lovely Mary Morison.

Yestreen, when to the trembling string
 The dance gaed thro' the lighted ha',
 To thee my fancy took its wing,
 I sat, but neither heard nor saw :
 Tho' this was fair, and that was brav,
 And yon the toast of a' the town,
 I sigh'd and said among them a' ;—
 'Ye are na Mary Morison !'

O Mary, canst thou wreck his peace
 Wha for thy sake wad gladly die ?
 Or canst thou break that heart of his
 Whase only faut is loving thee ?
 If love for love thou wilt na gie,
 At least be pity to me shown ;
 A thought ungentle canna be
 The thought o' Mary Morison.

Will ye go to the Indies, my Ma-ry, And leave auld Sco-tia's lan-tic roar? O, sweet grows the lime and the orange,

 And the ap-ple on the pine; But a' the charms

WILL ye go to the Indies, my Mary,
 And leave auld Scotia's shore?
 Will ye go to the Indies, my Mary,
 Across th' Atlantic roar?

O, sweet grows the lime and the orange,
 And the apple on the pine;
 But a' the charms o' the Indies
 Can never equal thine.'

I hae sworn by the Heavens to my Mary,
 I hae sworn by the Heavens to be true,
 And sae may the Heavens forget me,
 When I forget my vow!

O, plight me your faith, my Mary,
 And plight me your lily-white hand;
 O, plight me your faith, my Mary,
 Before I leave Scotia's strand!

We hae plighted our troth, my Mary,
 In mutual affection to join;
 And curst be the cause that shall part us!
 The hour and the moment o' time!

Flow gently, sweet Afton, among thy green braes,
Flow gently, I'll sing thee a song in thy praise;
My Mary's asleep by thy murmuring stream,
Flow gently, sweet Afton, disturb not her dream!

Thou stock-dove whose echo resounds thro' the glen,
Ye wild whistling blackbirds in yon thorny den,
Thou green-crested lapwing, thy screaming forbear,
I charge you, disturb not my slumbering fair.

How lofty, sweet Afton, thy neighbouring hills,
Far mark'd with the courses of clear, winding rills;
There daily I wander, as noon rises high,
My flocks and my Mary's sweet cot in my eye.

How pleasant thy banks and green vallies below,
Where wild in the woodlands the primroses blow;
There oft, as mild ev'ning weeps over the lea,
The sweet-scented birk shades my Mary and me.

The crystal stream, Afton, how lovely it glides,
And winds by the cot where my Mary resides;
How wanton thy waters her snowy feet lave,
As, gathering sweet flow'rets, she stems thy clear wave.

Flow gently, sweet Afton, among thy green braes,
Flow gently, sweet river, the theme of my lays;
My Mary's asleep by thy murmuring stream,
Flow gently, sweet Afton, disturb not her dream!

But fickle Fortune frowns on me,
And I maun cross the raging sea ;
But while my crimson currents flow
I'll love my Highland lassie, O.

Altho' thro' foreign climes I range,
I know her heart will never change ;
For her bosom burns with honour's

My faithful Highland lassie, O.

For her I'll dare the billows' roar,
For her I'll trace a distant shore,
That Indian wealth may lustre throw
Around my Highland lassie, O.

My Ma - ry from my soul was torn. O Ma - ry, dear de - part - ed shade! Where is thy place of bliss - ful rest? See'st thou thy lov - er low - ly laid? Hear'st thou the groans that rend his breast?

Thou ling'ring star with less'ning ray,
That lov'st to greet the early morn,
Again thou usher'st in the day
My Mary from my soul was torn.
O Mary, dear departed shade!
Where is thy place of blissful rest?
See'st thou thy lover lowly laid?
Hear'st thou the groans that rend his breast?

That sacred hour can I forget,
Can I forget the hallow'd grove,
Where, by the winding Ayr, we met
To live one day of parting love?
Eternity can not efface
Those records dear of transports past,
Thy image at our last embrace:
Ah! little thought we 'twas our last!

Ayr, gurgling, kiss'd his pebbled shore,
 O'erhung with wild woods thickening green;
 The fragrant birch and hawthorn hoar
 Twin'd amorous round the raptur'd scene;
 The flowers sprang wanton to be prest,
 The birds sang love on every spray;
 Till too, too soon, the glowing west
 Proclaim'd the speed of wingèd day.

Still o'er these scenes my mem'ry wakes,
 And fondly broods with miser care.
 Time but th' impression stronger makes,
 As streams their channels deeper wear.
 O Mary, dear departed shade!
 Where is thy place of blissful rest?
 See'st thou thy lover lowly laid?
 Hear'st thou the groans that rend his breast?

be your woods and fair your flowers, Your wa - ters ne - ver drum - lie : There Sim - mer first un - fold her robes, And there the lang - est tar - ry;

For there I took the last fareweel O' my sweet High-land Ma - ry.

YE banks and braes and streams around
 The castle o' Montgomery,
 Green be your woods, and fair your flowers,
 Your waters never drumlie:
 There Simmer first unfold her robes,
 And there the langest tarry;
 For there I took the last fareweel
 O' my sweet Highland Mary.

How sweetly bloom'd the gay, green birk,
 How rich the hawthorn's blossom,
 As underneath their fragrant shade,
 I clasp'd her to my bosom!
 The golden hours on angel wings
 Flew o'er me and my dearie;
 For dear to me as light and life
 Was my sweet Highland Mary.

Wi' monie a vow and lock'd embrace
 Our parting was fu' tender;
 And, pledging aft to meet again,
 We tore oursel's asunder.
 But O, fell Death's untimely frost,
 That nipt my flower sae early!
 Now green's the sod, and cauld's the clay,
 That wraps my Highland Mary!

O, pale, pale now, those rosy lips
 I aft hae kiss'd sae fondly;
 And clos'd for ay the sparkling glance
 That dwalt on me sae kindly;
 And mouldering now in silent dust
 That heart that lo'ed me dearly!
 But still within my bosom's core
 Shall live my Highland Mary.

No. 62. Tho' cruel fate should bid us part.

Tune: She rose and let me in. Orpheus Caledonius, 1733, No. 14.

Slowly tr

The musical score consists of four staves of music in G major and 3/4 time. The melody is written on a treble clef. The lyrics are written below the notes, with some words placed between notes. The first staff begins with a 'Slowly' marking and a 'tr' (trill) marking over the second measure. The lyrics are: 'Tho' cruel fate should bid us part Far as the pole and line; Her'. The second staff continues: 'dear i-dea round my heart Should ten-der-ly en-twine. Tho' moun-tains'. The third staff continues: 'rise, and des-erts howl, And o-ceans roar be-tween; Yet,'. The fourth staff concludes: 'dear-er than my death-less soul, I still would love my Jean.'

Tho' cruel fate should bid us part Far as the pole and line; Her dear i-dea round my heart Should ten-der-ly en-twine. Tho' moun-tains rise, and des-erts howl, And o-ceans roar be-tween; Yet, dear-er than my death-less soul, I still would love my Jean.

Tho' cruel fate should bid us part
 Far as the pole and line,
 Her dear idea round my heart
 Should tenderly entwine.
 Tho' mountains rise, and deserts howl,
 And oceans roar between;
 Yet dearer than my deathless soul
 I still would love my Jean.

 How life and love are all a dream!
 O, thou bright Queen, who o'er th'expanses
 Now highest reign'st with boundless sway!
 Oft has thy silent-marking glance
 Observ'd us, fondly-wan'dring, stray!
 The time, unheeded, sped away,
 While Love's luxurious pulse beat high,
 Beneath thy silver-gleaming ray,
 To mark the mutual-kindling eye.
 O scenes in strong remembrance set!
 Scenes, never, never to return!
 Scenes if in stupor I forget,
 Again I feel, again I burn!
 From ev'ry joy and pleasure torn,
 Life's weary vale I'll wander thro',
 And hopeless, comfortless, I'll mourn
 A faithless woman's broken vow.

AGAIN rejoicing Nature sees

Her robe assume its vernal hues;

Her leafy locks wave in the breeze,

All freshly steep'd in morning dews.

CHORUS. And maun I still on Menie doat,And bear the scorn that's in her e'e?For it's jet, jet-black, and it's like a hawk,And it winna let a body be!

In vain to me the cowslips blaw,

In vain to me the vi'lets spring;

In vain to me in glen or shaw,

The mavis and the lintwhite sing.

The merry ploughboy cheers his team,

Wi' joy the tentie seedsman stalks,

But life to me's a weary dream,

A dream of ane that never wauks.

The wanton coot the water skims,

Among the reeds the ducklings cry,

And stately swan majestic swims,

And ev'rything is blest but I.

The sheep-herd steeks his faulding slap,
 And o'er the moorlands whistles shill,
 Wi' wild, unequal, wand'ring step,
 I meet him on the dewy hill.

And when the lark, 'tween light and dark,
 Blythe waukens by the daisy's side,
 And mounts and sings on flittering wings,
 A woe-worn ghaist I hameward glide.

Come Winter, with thine angry howl,
 And raging, bend the naked tree ;
 Thy gloom will soothe my cheerless soul,
 When Nature all is sad like me !

 A bonie lass, I like her best,
 And wha a crime dare ca' that ?

In rapture sweet this hour we meet,
 Wi' mutual love an' a' that,
 But for how lang the flie may stang,
 Let inclination law that.

There's not a bon-ie bird that sings, But minds me o' my Jean.

Of a' the airts the wind can blaw
I dearly like the west,
For there the bonie lassie lives,

 The bonie lad that's far awa.
 O, weary winter soon will pass,
 And spring will clead the birken-shaw,
 And my sweet baby will be born, } bis
 And he'll be hame that's far awa.

No. 71. *I hae a wife o' my ain.*Tune : I hae a wife o' my ain. Scots Musical Museum, 1792, No. 352.Quick

I HAE a wife o' my ain,
I'll partake wi' naebody;
I'll tak cuckold frae nane,
I'll gie cuckold to naebody.

I hae a penny to spend,
There—thanks to naebody!
I hae naething to lend,
I'll borrow frae naebody.

I am naebody's lord,
I'll be slave to naebody:
I hae a gude braid-sword,
I'll tak dunts frae naebody.

I'll be merry and free,
I'll be sad for naebody,
Naebody cares for me,
I care for naebody.

It is na, Jean, thy bonie face
 Nor shape that I admire,
 Altho' thy beauty and thy grace
 Might weel awauk desire.
 Something in ilka part o' thee
 To praise, to love, I find;
 But, dear as is thy form to me,
 Still dearer is thy mind.

Nae mair ungen'rous wish I hae,
 Nor stronger in my breast,
 Than, if I canna mak thee sae,
 At least to see thee blest.
 Content am I, if Heaven shall give
 But happiness to thee,
 And, as wi' thee I'd wish to live,
 For thee I'd bear to die.

No. 73. Louis, what reck I by thee?

Tune : Louis, what reck. Scots Musical Museum, 1796, No. 414.
Boldly

Lou-is, what reck I by thee, Or Geordie on his o - cean?
 Dy - vor beg-gar loons to me! I reign in Jea - nie's bo - som.

Louis, what reck I by thee,
 Or Geordie on his ocean?
 Dyvor beggar loons to me!
 I reign in Jeanie's bosom.

Let her crown my love her law,
 And in her breast enthrone me:
 Kings and nations—swith awa!
 Reif randies, I disown ye!

No. 74. *O, were I on Parnassus' hill.*Tune: My love is lost to me. Caledonian Pocket Companion, 1753, v. p. 25.Mod. quick

The musical score is written on five staves of music in G major (one sharp) and common time (C). The tempo is marked 'Mod. quick'. The lyrics are written below the notes, with some words underlined. A trill is indicated above the word 'On' in the fourth line of the score.

O, were I on Par - nas - sus' hill! Or had o' He - li - con my fill, That I might catch po - e - tic skill To sing how dear I love thee! But Nith maun be my Mu - se's well, My Muse maun be thy bo - nie sel', On,
 Cor - sin - con I'll glow'r and spell, And write how dear I love thee.

O, WERE I on Parnassus' hill,
 Or had o' Helicon my fill,
 That I might catch poetic skill
 To sing how dear I love thee!
 But Nith maun be my Muse's well,
 My Muse maun be thy bonie sel',
 On Corsincon I'll glow'r and spell,
 And write how dear I love thee.
 Then come, sweet Muse, inspire my lay!
 For a' the lee-lang simmer's day
 I couldna sing, I couldna say
 How much, how dear I love thee.
 I see thee dancing o'er the green,
 Thy waist sae jimp, thy limbs sae clean,
 Thy tempting lips, thy rogueish een—
 By heaven and earth I love thee!
 By night, by day, a-field, at hame,
 The thoughts o' thee my breast inflame,
 And ay I muse and sing thy name—
 I only live to love thee.
 Tho' I were doom'd to wander on,
 Beyond the sea, beyond the sun,
 Till my last weary sand was run;
 Till then—and then—I'd love thee!

No. 75. *Out over the Forth, I look to the north.*Tune: Charles Graham's welcome home. Scots Mus. Museum, 1796, No. 421.

Slow

Out o - ver the Forth, I look to the north—But what is the north and its High-lands to me? The south nor the east gie ease to my breast, The far foreign land, or the wide roll-ing sea! But I look to the west, When I gae to rest, That hap-py my dreams and my slumbers may be; For far in the west lives he I lo'e best, The man that is dear to my ba-bie and me.

Out over the Forth, I look to the north—
But what is the north, and its Highlands to me?
The south nor the east gie ease to my breast,
The far foreign land or the wide rolling sea!

But I look to the west, when I gae to rest,
That happy my dreams and my slumbers may be;
For far in the west lives he I lo'e best,
That man that is dear to my babie and me.

No. 76. *For thee is laughing Nature gay.*Tune: Scots Queen (see No. 66).

No. 77. *Your friendship much can make me blest.*Tune: Banks of Spey. Scots Musical Museum, 1788, No. 186.Very slow

The musical score is written on five staves of a single treble clef. The first staff begins with a common time signature (C) and a tempo marking 'Very slow'. The melody is simple and features a trill (tr) on the final note of the first line. The lyrics are printed below the notes, with hyphens indicating syllables that span across multiple notes. The piece concludes with a double bar line.

Your friend-ship much can make me blest—O, why that bliss de - stroy? Why urge the only, one re - - - quest You know
 I will de - ny? Your thought, if Love must har - bour there, Con - ceal it in that thought, Nor cause me from my bo - som tear The ve - ry friend I sought.

YOUR friendship much can make me blest—
 O, why that bliss destroy?
 Why urge the only, one request
 You know I will deny?
 Your thought, if Love must harbour there,
 Conceal it in that thought,
 Nor cause me from my bosom tear
 The very friend I sought.

No. 78. *Thine am I, my faithful fair.*Tune: The Quaker's Wife (see No. 40).

THINE am I, my faithful fair,
 Thine my lovely Nancy!
 Every pulse along my veins,
 Ev'ry roving fancy!
 To thy bosom lay my heart
 There to throb and languish:
 Tho' despair had wrung its core,
 That would heal its anguish.

Take away those rosy lips
 Rich with balmy treasure!
 Turn away thine eyes of love,
 Lest I die with pleasure!
 What is life when wanting love?
 Night without a morning:
 Love's the cloudless summer sun,
 Nature gay adorning.

BEHOLD the hour, the boat arrive!
Thou goest, the darling of my heart!
Sever'd from thee, can I survive?
But Fate has will'd and we must part.
I'll often greet the surging swell,
Yon distant isle will often hail:—
'E'en here I took the last farewell;
There, latest mark'd her vanish'd sail!

Along the solitary shore,
While flitting sea-fowl round me cry,
Across the rolling, dashing roar,
I'll westward turn my wistful eye:—
'Happy, thou Indian grove,' I'll say,
'Where now my Nancy's path may be!
While thro' thy sweets she loves to stray,
O, tell me, does she muse on me?'

CLARINDA, mistress of my soul,
The measur'd time is run!
The wretch beneath the dreary pole
So marks his latest sun.
To what dark cave of frozen night
Shall poor Sylvander hie,
Depriv'd of thee, his life and light,
The sun of all his joy?
We part—but, by these precious drops
That fill thy lovely eyes,
No other light shall guide my steps,
Till thy bright beams arise!
She, the fair sun of all her sex,
Has blest my glorious day;
And shall a glimmering planet fix
My worship to its ray?

No. 81. *Now in her green mantle blythe

Tune : There are few good fellows when Jamie's awa.

Now in her green mantle blythe Nature arrays,
And listens the lambkins that bleat o'er the braes,
While birds warble welcomes in ilka green shaw,
But to me it's delightless—my Nanie's awa.
The snaw-drap and primrose our woodlands adorn,
And violets bathe in the wect o' the morn.
They pain my sad bosom, sae sweetly they blaw,
They mind me o' Nanie,—and Nanie's awa!

Thou lav'rock, that springs frae the dew's of the lawn,
The shepherd to warn o' the grey-breaking dawn,
And thou mellow mavis, that hails the night-fa',
Give over for pity—my Nanie's awa.

Come Autumn, sae pensive in yellow and grey,
And soothe me wi' tidings o' Nature's decay!
The dark, dreary winter and wild driving snaw
Alane can delight me—now Nanie's awa.

And here's to them we dare na tell, } bis
The dearest o' the quorum!

No. 83. *Ance mair I hail thee, thou gloomy December.*Tune: Thro' the lang moor. Scots Musical Museum, 1796, No. 499.

The musical score is written on a single treble clef staff in G major (one sharp) and 4/4 time. It begins with a 'Slow' tempo marking. The melody features several trills, indicated by 'tr' above notes. The lyrics are printed below the staff, with hyphens under syllables that span across bar lines. The score concludes with a double bar line.

Ance mair I hail thee, thou gloom-y De - cem - ber! Ance mair I hail thee wi' sor-row and care! Sad was the part-ing thou makes me re - mem - ber; Part-ing wi' Nau - cy, O, ne'er to meet mair!
 Fond lov - ers' part - ing is sweet, pain-ful pleas - ure, Hope beamwell for ev - er! An-guish un-min-gled and a - go - ny pure!

ANCE mair I hail thee, thou gloomy December!

Ance mair I hail thee wi' sorrow and care!

Sad was the parting thou makes me remember;

Parting wi' Nancy, O, ne'er to meet mair!

Fond lovers' parting is sweet, painful pleasure,

Hope beaming mild on the soft parting hour;

But the dire feeling, O, farewell for ever!

Anguish unmingled and agony pure!

Wild as the winter now tearing the forest,

Till the last leaf o' the summer is flown—

Such is the tempest has shaken my bosom,

Till my last hope and last comfort is gone!

Still as I hail thee, thou gloomy December,
 Still shall I hail thee wi' sorrow and care ;
 For sad was the parting thou makes me remember ;
 Parting wi' Nancy, O, ne'er to meet mair !

No. 84. Ae fond kiss, and then we sever !

Tune : Rory Dall's Port. Scots Musical Museum, 1792, No. 347.

Slow

Deep in heart-wrung tears I'll pledge thee, Warring sighs and groans I'll wage thee.

Ae fond kiss, and then we sever !
 Ae farewell, and then for ever !
 Deep in heart-wrung tears I'll pledge 'thee,
 Warring sighs and groans I'll wage thee.

Who shall say that Fortune grieves him,
 While the star of hope she leaves him ?
 Me, nae cheerfu' twinkle lights me,
 Dark despair around benights me.

I'll ne'er blame my partial fancy—
 Naething could resist my Nancy !
 But to see her was to love her,
 Love but her, and love for ever.

Had we never lov'd sae kindly,
 Had we never lov'd sae blindly,
 Never met—or never parted—
 We had ne'er been broken-hearted.

Fare-thee-weel, thou first and fairest !
 Fare-thee-weel, thou best and dearest !
 Thine be ilka joy and treasure,
 Peace, Enjoyment, Love and Pleasure !

Ae fond kiss, and then we sever !
 Ae farewell, alas, for ever !
 Deep in heart-wrung tears I'll pledge thee,
 Warring sighs and groans I'll wage thee.

No. 87. *Wilt thou be my dearie?*Tune : The sutor's dochter. Scots Musical Museum, 1796, No. 470.

Slow

Wilt thou be my dear-ie? When sor-row wrings thy gen-tle heart, O, wilt thou let me cheer thee? By the treasure of my soul—That's the love I bear thee— I swear and vow that on - ly thou Shall ev - er be my dear-ie!
 On - ly thou, I swear and vow Shall ev - er be my dear - ie.

WILT thou be my dearie?
 When sorrow wrings thy gentle heart,
 O, wilt thou let me cheer thee?
 By the treasure of my soul—
 That's the love I bear thee—
 I swear and vow that only thou
 Shall ever be my dearie!
 Only thou, I swear and vow,
 Shall ever be my dearie.

Lassie, say thou lo'es me,
 Or, if thou wilt na be my ain,
 Say na thou't refuse me!
 If it winna, canna be,
 Thou for thine may choose me,
 Let me, lassie, quickly die,
 Trusting that thou lo'es me!
 Lassie, let me quickly die,
 Trusting that thou lo'es me!

O, why, while Fancy, raptur'd, slumbers,
 'Chloris, Chloris,' all the theme;
 Why, why wouldst thou, cruel,
 Wake thy lover from his dream?

SLEEP'ST thou, or wak'st thou, fairest creature?

Rosy morn now lifts his eye,

Numbering ilka bud, which Nature

Waters wi' the tears o' joy.

Now to the streaming fountain

Or up the heathy mountain

The hart, hind, and roe, freely, wildly-wanton stray;

In twining hazel bow'rs

His lay the linnet pours;

The laverock to the sky

Ascends wi' sangs o' joy,

While the sun and thou arise to bless the day.

Phœbus, gilding the brow of morning,

Banishes ilk darksome shade,

Nature gladdening and adorning;

Such to me my lovely maid!

When frae my Chloris parted

Sad, cheerless, broken-hearted,

The night's gloomy shades, cloudy, dark, o'ercast my sky ;
 But when she charms my sight
 In pride of beauty's light,
 When thro' my very heart
 Her beaming glories dart—
 'Tis then—'tis then, I wake to life and joy.

 I hear the wild birds singing ;
 But what a weary wight can please,
 And Care his bosom wringing ?

Fain, fain would I my griefs impart,
 Yet dare na for your anger ;
 But secret love will break my heart,
 If I conceal 't langer.
 If thou refuse to pity me,
 If thou shalt love another,
 When yon green leaves fade frac

 Twa laughing een o' bonie blue.
 Her smiling, sae wyling,
 Wad make a wretch forget his woe !
 What pleasure, what treasure,
 Unto those rosy lips to grow !
 Such was my Chloris' bonie face,
 When first that bonie face I saw,
 And ay my Chloris' dearest charm—
 She says she lo'es me best of a'.

Like harmony her motion,
 Her pretty ankle is a spy
 Betraying fair proportion
 Wad mak a saint forget the sky !
 Sae warming, sae charming,
 Her faultless form and gracefu' air ;
 Ilk feature—auld Nature
 Declared that she could do nae mair !

Hers are the willing chains o' love
 By conquering Beauty's sovereign law,
 And ay my Chloris' dearest charm—
 She says she lo'es me best of a'.

Let others love the city,
 And gaudy show at sunny noon ;
 Gie me the lonely valley,
 The dewy eve, and rising moon,
 Fair beaming, and streaming,
 Her silver light the boughs amang ;
 While falling, recalling,
 The amorous thrush concludes his sang !
 There, dearest Chloris, wilt thou rove
 By wimpling burn and leafy shaw,
 And hear my vows o' truth and love,
 And say thou lo'es me best of a' ?

 Can I cease to languish,
 While my darling fair
 Is on the couch of anguish !

Ev'ry hope is fled,
 Ev'ry fear is terror ;
 Slumber ev'n I dread,
 Ev'ry dream is horror.

Hear me, Powers divine !
 O, in pity, hear me !
 Take aught else of mine,
 But my Chloris spare me !

THEIR GROVES o' sweet myrtle let foreign lands reckon,
 Where bright-beaming summers exalt the perfume;
 Far dearer to me yon lone glen o' green breckan,
 Wi' the burn stealing under the lang, yellow broom;
 Far dearer to me are yon humble broom bowers,
 Where the bluebell and gowan lurk lowly, unseen;
 For there, lightly tripping among the wild flowers,
 A-list'ning the linnet, aft wanders my Jean.

Tho' rich is the breeze in their gay, sunny vallies,
 And cauld Caledonia's blast on the wave,
 Their sweet-scented woodlands that skirt the proud palace,
 What are they?—The haunt of the tyrant and slave!
 The slave's spicy forests and gold-bubbling fountains
 The brave Caledonian views wi' disdain;
 He wanders as free as the winds of his mountains,
 Save Love's willing fetters—the chains o' his Jean.

No. 94. *Mark yonder pomp of costly fashion.*Tune : Deil tak the Wars (see No. 89).

MARK yonder pomp of costly fashion
 Round the wealthy, titled bride ;
 But, when compar'd with real passion,
 Poor is all that princely pride.
 What are the showy treasures ?
 What are the noisy pleasures ?
 The gay, gaudy glare of vanity and art !
 The polish'd jewel's blaze
 May draw the wond'ring gaze,
 And courtly grandeur bright
 The fancy may delight,
 But never, never can come near the heart.

But did you see my dearest Chloris
 In simplicity's array,
 Lovely as yonder sweet opening flower is,
 Shrinking from the gaze of day !
 O then, the heart alarming
 And all resistless charming,
 In Love's delightful fetters she chains the willing soul !
 Ambition would disown
 The world's imperial crown !
 Ev'n Avarice would deny
 His worshipp'd deity,
 And feel thro' every vein Love's raptures roll !

AH, Chloris, since it may not be
 That thou of love wilt hear,
 If from the lover thou maun flee,
 Yet let the friend be dear.

Altho' I love my Chloris mair
 Than ever tongue could tell,
 My passion I will ne'er declare
 I'll say, I wish thee well.

Tho' a' my daily care thou art,
 And a' my nightly dream,
 I'll hide the struggle in my heart,
 And say it is esteem.

They witness'd in their shade yestreen.

All in its rude and prickly bower,
That crimson rose how sweet and fair;
But love is far a sweeter flower
Amid life's thorny path o' care.
The pathless wild and wimpling burn,
Wi' Chloris in my arms, be mine,
And I the world nor wish nor scorn—
Its joys and griefs alike resign!

No. 98. *O, wat ye wha that lo'es me.*Tune : Morag. Scots Musical Museum, 1788, No. 143.Gracefully

O, wat ye wha that lo'es me, And has my heart a keep-ing? O, sweet is she that lo'es me As dew's o' sum-mer weep-ing, In tears the rose-buds steep-ing! O, that's the las-sie o' my heart, My las-sie ev-er dear-er;O, that's the queen o' wo-man-kind And ne'er a ane to peer her!

O, WAT ye wha that lo'es me,
 And has my heart a keeping?
 O, sweet is she that lo'es me
 As dew's o' summer weeping,
 In tears the rosebuds steeping!

CHORUS. *O, that's the lassie o' my heart,
 My lassie ever dearer;
 O, that's the queen o' womankind,
 And ne'er a ane to peer her!*

If thou shalt meet a lassie
 In grace and beauty charming,
 That e'en thy chosen lassie,
 Erewhile thy breast sae warming,
 Had ne'er sic powers alarming:—

If thou hadst heard her talking
 (And thy attention 's plighted),
 That ilka body talking
 But her, by thee is slighted,
 And thou art all delighted:—

If thou hast met this fair one,
 When frae her thou hast parted,
 If every other fair one
 But her thou hast deserted,
 And thou art broken-hearted;

*O, that's the lassie o' my heart,
 My lassie ever dearer;
 O, that's the queen o' womankind,
 And ne'er a aue to peer her!*

No. 99. There's nane shall ken, there's nane can guess.

Tune: I'll gae nae mair to your town. Bremner's Scots Reels, 1757, p. 6.

CHORUS. I'll ay ca' in by yon town And by yon gar-den green a - gain!

I'll ay ca' in by yon town, And see my bon-ie Jean a-gain. There's nane shall ken, there's nane can guess What brings me back the gate a . gain,

But she, my fair - est faith - fu' lass, And stown - lins we shall meet a - gain.

CHORUS. *I'll ay ca' in by yon town
 And by yon garden-green again!
 I'll ay ca' in by yon town,
 And see my bonie Jean again.*

There's nane shall ken, there's nane can guess

What brings me back the gate again,

But she, my fairest faithfu' lass,

And stownlins we shall meet again.

She'll wander by the aiken tree,

When trystin time draws near again;

And when her lovely form I see,

O, haith! she's doubly dear again.

No. 100. *Behold, my love, how green the groves.*Tune : On the cold ground. Playford's Dancing Master, 1665.Slowly

BEHOLD, my love, how green the groves,
 The primrose banks how fair!
 The balmy gales awake the flowers,
 And wave thy flaxen hair.
 The lav'rock shuns the palace gay,
 And o'er the cottage sings:
 For Nature smiles as sweet, I ween,
 To shepherds as to kings.

Let minstrels sweep the skilfu' string
 In lordly, lighted ha';
 The shepherd stops his simple reed,
 Blythe in the birken shaw.
 The princely revel may survey
 Our rustic dance wi' scorn;
 But are their hearts as light as ours,
 Beneath the milk-white thorn?

The shepherd in the flowery glen,
 In shepherd's phrase will woo:
 The courtier tells a finer tale—
 But is his heart as true?
 These wild-wood flowers I've pu'd, to deck
 That spotless breast o' thine:
 The courtiers' gems may witness love—
 But, 'tis na love like mine!

No. 101. *'Twas na her bonie blue e'e was my ruin.*Tune : Laddie lie near me (see No. 142).

'Twas na her bonie blue e'e was my ruin,
 Fair tho' she be, that was ne'er my undoin' :
 'Twas the dear smile when naebody did mind us,
 'Twas the bewitching, sweet, stown glance o' kindness.

Sair do I fear that to hope is denied me,
 Sair do I fear that despair maun abide me ;
 But tho' fell Fortune should fate us to sever,
 Queen shall she be in my bosom for ever.

Chloris, I'm thine wi' a passion sincerest,
 And thou hast plighted me love o' the dearest,
 And thou'rt the angel that never can alter—
 Sooner the sun in his motion would falter !

No. 102. *O, poortith cauld and restless love.*Tune : Cauld kail (see No. 228).

O, POORTITH cauld and restless love,
 Ye wrack my peace between ye ;
 Yet poortith a' I could forgive,
 An 'twere na for my Jeanie.

CHORUS. *O, why should Fate sic pleasure have Life's dearest bands untwining ?
 Or why sae sweet a flower as love
 Depend on Fortune's shining ?*

The ward's wealth when I think on
 Its pride, and a' the lave o't ;
 My curse on silly coward man,
 That he should be the slave o't !

Her een sae bonie blue betray
 How she repays my passion ;
 But prudence is her o'erword ay,
 She talks o' rank and fashion.

O, wha can prudence think upon,
 And sic a lassie by him ?

O, wha can prudence think upon,
 And sae in love, as I am ?

How blest the wild-wood Indian's fate !
 He woos his artless dearie ;
 The silly bogles, wealth and state,
 Can never make him cerie.

No. 103. *Now Nature cleeds the flowery lea.*Tune : Rothiemurché's rant. Bremner's Reels, 1759, p. 42.

Slow tr

CHORUS. Las-sie wi' the lint-white locks, Bo-nie las-sie, art-less las-sie, tr Fine.

Will thou wi' me tent the flocks—Will thou be my dear-ie, O? Now

tr

Na-ture cleeds the flow-ery lea, And a' is young and sweet like thee, O.

wilt thou share its joys wi' me, And say thou'lt be my dear-ie, O?

CHORUS. Lassie wi' the lint-white locks,
Bonie lassie, artless lassie,
Will thou wi' me tent the flocks—
Will thou be my dearie, O?

Now Nature cleeds the flowery lea,
 And a' is young and sweet like thee,
 O, wilt thou share its joys wi' me,
 And say thou'lt be my dearie, O?

The primrose bank, the wimpling burn,
 The cuckoo on the milk-white thorn,
 The wanton lambs at early morn
 Shall welcome thee, my dearie, O.

And when the welcome simmer shower
 Has cheer'd ilk drooping little flower,
 We'll to the breathing woodbine-bower
 At sultry noon, my dearie, O.

When Cynthia lights, wi' silver ray,
 The weary shearer's hameward way,
 Thro' yellow waving fields we'll stray,
 And talk o' love, my dearie, O.

And when the howling wintry blast
 Disturbs my lassie's midnight rest,
 Enclasp'd to my faithfu' breast,
 I'll comfort thee, my dearie, O.

No. 104. *Come, let me take thee to my breast.*Tune : Cauld Kail (see No. 228).

COME, let me take thee to my breast,
 And pledge we ne'er shall sunder,
 And I shall spurn as vilest dust
 The world's wealth and grandeur ;
 And do I hear my Jeanie own
 That equal transports move her ?
 I ask for dearest life alone,
 That I may live to love her.

Thus in my arms, wi' a' her charms,
 I clasp my countless treasure,
 I'll seek nae mair o' heav'n to share
 Than sic a moment's pleasure :
 And by thy een sae bonie blue
 I swear I'm thine for ever,
 And on thy lips I seal my vow,
 And break it shall I never !

No. 105. *Forlorn my love, no comfort near.*Tune : Let me in this ae night (see No. 159).

FORLORN my love, no comfort near,
 Far, far from thee I wander here ;
 Far, far from thee, the fate severe,
 At which I most repine, love.

CHORUS. *O, wert thou, love, but near me,
 But near, near, near me,
 How kindly thou would'st cheer me,
 And mingle sighs with mine, love !*

Around me scowls a wintry sky,
 Blasting each bud of hope and joy,
 And shelter, shade, nor home have I
 Save in these arms of thine, love.

Cold, alter'd friends, with cruel art,
 Poisoning fell misfortune's dart—
 Let me not break thy faithful heart,
 And say that fate is mine, love.

But dreary tho' the moments fleet,
 O, let me think we yet shall meet ;
 That only ray of solace sweet
 Can on thy Chloris shine, love.

No. 106. *Now haply down yon gay green shaw.*Tune: I'll gae nae mair to yon town (see No. 99).

CHORUS. *O, wat ye wha's in yon town,
Ye see the e'enin sun upon?
The dearest maid's in yon town
That e'enin sun is shining on!*

Now haply down yon gay green shaw
She wanders by yon spreading tree;
How blest ye flowers that round her blaw,
Ye catch the glances o' her e'e!

How blest ye birds that round her sing,
And welcome in the blooming year!
And doubly welcome be the spring,
The season to my Jeanie dear!

The sun blinks blythe in yon town,
Among the broomy braes sae green;
But my delight in yon town,
And dearest pleasure, is my Jean.

Without my Love, not a' the charms
O' Paradise could yield me joy;
But gie me Jeanie in my arms,
And welcome Lapland's dreary sky!

My cave wad be a lover's bower,
Tho' raging winter rent the air,
And she a lovely little flower,
That I wad tent and shelter there.

O, sweet is she in yon town
The sinkin sun's gane down upon!
A fairer than's in yon town
His setting beam ne'er shone upon.

If angry fate be sworn my foe,
And suff'ring I am doom'd to bear;
I'd careless quit aught else below,
But spare, O, spare me Jeanie dear!

For, while life's dearest blood is warm,
Ae thought frae her shall ne'er depart,
And she, as fairest is her form,
She has the truest, kindest heart.

No. 107. *It was the charming month of May.*Tune: Dainty Davie (see infra).

CHORUS. *Lovely was she by the dawn,
Youthful Chloe, charming Chloe,
Tripping o'er the pearly lawn,
The youthful, charming Chloe.*

It was the charming month of May,
When all the flow'rs were fresh and gay,
One morning, by the break of day,
The youthful, charming Chloe,
From peaceful slumber she arose,
Girt on her mantle and her hose,
And o'er the flow'ry mead she goes—
The youthful, charming Chloe—

The feather'd people you might see
Perch'd all around on every tree!
In notes of sweetest melody
They hail the charming Chloe
Till, painting gay the eastern skies,
The glorious sun began to rise,
Out-rivall'd by the radiant eyes
Of youthful, charming Chloe.

No. 108. *Let not woman e'er complain.*Tune: Duncan Gray (see No. 173).

LET not woman e'er complain
Of inconstancy in love;
Let not woman e'er complain,
Fickle man is apt to rove:
Look abroad through Nature's range,
Nature's mighty law is change;
Ladies, would it not be strange
Man should then a monster prove?

Mark the winds, and mark the skies,
Ocean's ebb and ocean's flow.
Sun and moon but set to rise;
Round and round the seasons go.
Why, then, ask of silly man
To oppose great Nature's plan?
We'll be constant while we can—
You can be no more, you know.

No. 109. Where are the joys I hae met in the morning.

Tune : Saw ye my father? Scots Musical Museum, 1787, No. 76.

Slow and pointed

Where are the joys I hae met in the morning, That danc'd to the lark's ear-ly sang? Where is the peace that a - wait - ed my wand'-ring At e'en - ing the wild woods a - mang?

WHERE are the joys I hae met in the morning,
That danc'd to the lark's early sang?
Where is the peace that awaited my wand'ring
At e'ning the wild woods amang?

Nae mair a-winding the course o' yon river
And marking sweet flow'rets sae fair,
Nae mair I trace the light footsteps o' pleasure,
But sorrow and sad sighing care.

Is it that Summer's forsaken our vallyes,
And grim, surly Winter is near?
No, no, the bees humming round the gay roses
Proclaim it the pride o' the year!

Fain would I hide what I fear to discover,
Yet lang, lang, too well hae I known:
A' that has caused the wreck in my bosom,
Is Jenny, fair Jenny alone.

Time cannot aid me, my griefs are immortal,
Not Hope dare a comfort bestow:
Come then, enamour'd and fond of my anguish,
Enjoyment I'll seek in my woe.

My Sandy gied to me a ring
Was a' beset wi' diamonds fine ;
But I gied him a far better thing,
I gied my heart in pledge o' his ring.

CHORUS. *My Sandy O, my Sandy O,
My bonie, bonie Sandy O ;
Tho' the love that I owe to thee I dare na show,
Yet I love my love in secret, my Sandy O !*

My Sandy brak a piece o' gowd,
While down his cheeks the saut tears row'd,
He took a hauf, and gied it to me,
And I'll keep it till the hour I die.

No. III. *There's nought but care on ev'ry han'.*Tune: Green grow the rashes, O. Scots Musical Museum, 1787, No. 77.

Lively

CHORUS. Green grow the rash-es, O! Green grow the rash-es, O! The sig-ni-fies the life o'man, An 'twere na for the las-sies, O?

CHORUS. Green grow the rashes, O!
Green grow the rashes, O!
The sweetest hours that e'er I spend,
Are spent among the lasses, O!

THERE'S nought but care on ev'ry han',
 In ev'ry hour that passes, O;
 What signifies the life o' man,
 An 'twere na for the lasses, O?

The warl'y race may riches chase,
 An' riches still may fly them, O;
 An' tho' at last they catch them fast,
 Their hearts can ne'er enjoy them, O.

But gie me a cannie hour at e'en,
 My arms about my dearie, O;
 An' warl'y cares, an' warl'y men,
 May a' gae tapsalteerie, O!

For you sae douce, ye sneer at this,
 Ye're nought but senseless asses, O;
 The wisest man the warl' saw,
 He dearly lov'd the lasses, O!

Auld Nature swears, the lovely dears
 Her noblest work she classes, O:
 Her prentice han' she tried on man,
 An' then she made the lasses, O.

No. 112. O, whar gat ye that hauver-meal bannock?

Tune : Adew Dundee. Skene MS. c. 1630.

Moderate time

'O, WHAR gat ye that hauver-meal bannock?'

'O silly blind body, O dinna ye see?

I gat it frae a young, brisk sodger laddie,

Between Saint Johnston and bonie Dundee.

O, gin I saw the laddie that gae me't!

Aft has he doudl'd me up on his knee;

May Heaven protect my bonie Scots laddie,

And send him safe hame to his babie and me!

'My blessins upon thy sweet wee lippie!

My blessins upon thy bonie e'e-brie!

Thy smiles are sae like my blythe sodger laddie,

Thou's ay the dearer and dearer to me!

But I'll big a bow'r on yon bonie banks,

Whar Tay rins wimplin by sae clear;

And I'll clead thee in the tartan sae fine,

And mak thee a man like thy daddie dear.'

No. 113. *Now simmer blinks on flow'ry braes.*Tune : The Birks of Abergeldie. Scots Musical Museum, 1788, No. 113.

Lively

CHORUS. Bon - ie las - sie, will ye go, Will ye go, will ye go?

Fine.

Bon - ie las - sie, will ye go To the birks of A - ber - feld - y!

Now sim - mer blinks on flow'ry braes, And o'er the crys - tal stream - lets plays, Come, let us spend the lightsome days In the birks of A - ber - feld - y.

CHORUS. *Bonie lassie, will ye go,
Will ye go, will ye go?
Bonie lassie, will ye go
To the birks of Aberfeldy?*

Now simmer blinks on flow'ry braes,
And o'er the crystal streamlets plays,
Come, let us spend the lightsome days
In the birks of Aberfeldy.

The little birdies blythely sing,
While o'er their heads the hazels hing,
Or lightly flit on wanton wing
In the birks of Aberfeldy.

The braes ascend like lofty wa's,
The foaming stream, deep-roaring, fa's
O'erhung wi' fragrant spreading shaws,
The birks of Aberfeldy.

The hoary cliffs are crown'd wi' flowers,
White o'er the linns the burnie pours,
And, rising, weets wi' misty showers
The birks of Aberfeldy.

Let Fortune's gifts at random flee,
They ne'er shall draw a wish frae me,
Supremely blest wi' love and thee,
In the birks of Aberfeldy.

No. 114. *As I gaed down the water-side.*Tune: Ca' the yowes. Scots Musical Museum, 1790, No. 264.Slow

Ca' the yowes to the knowes, Ca' them whare the heath-er grows,

Ca' them whare the bur-nie rowes, My bon-ie dear-ie.

CHORUS. *Ca' the yowes to the knowes,
Ca' them whare the heather grows,
Ca' them whare the burnie rowes,
My bonie dearie.*

As I gaed down the water-side,
There I met my shepherd lad:
He row'd me sweetly in his plaid,
An he ca'd me his dearie.

'Will ye gang down the water-side,
And see the waves sae sweetly glide
Beneath the hazels spreading wide?
The moon it shines fu' clearly.'

'I was bred up in nae sic school,
My shepherd lad to play the fool,
And a' the day to sit in dool,
And nae body to see me.'

'Ye sall get gowns and ribbons meet,
Cauf-leather shoon upon your feet,
And in my arms thou'lt lie and sleep,
An' ay sall be my dearie.'

'If ye'll but stand to what ye've said,
I'se gang wi' you my shepherd lad,
And ye may row me in your plaid,
And I sall be your dearie.'

'While waters wimple to the sea,
While day blinks in the lift sae hie,
Till clay-cauld death sall blin' my e'e,
Ye sall be my dearie.'

No. 115. *On a bank of flowers in a summer day.*Tune: The bashful lover. Watts's Musical Miscellany, 1729, i. p. 30.

Gracefully

On a bank of flowers in a summer day, For summer light - ly drest,
 The youthful, blooming Nel - ly lay With love and sleep op - prest; When Willie, wand'ring through the wood, Who for her fa - vour oft had sued; He gaz'd, he wish'd, he fear'd, he blush'd, And trembled where he stood.

ON a bank of flowers in a summer day,
 For summer lightly drest,
 The youthful, blooming Nelly lay
 With love and sleep opprest;
 When Willie, wand'ring through the wood,
 Who for her favour oft had sued;
 He gaz'd, he wish'd, he fear'd, he blush'd,
 And trembled where he stood.

Her closed eyes, like weapons sheath'd,
 Were seal'd in soft repose;
 Her lips, still as she fragrant breath'd,
 It richer dyed the rose;
 The springing lilies, sweetly prest,
 Wild-wanton kiss'd her rival breast;
 He gaz'd, he wish'd, he fear'd, he blush'd,
 His bosom ill at rest.

Her robes, light-waving in the breeze,
 Her tender limbs embrace;
 Her lovely form, her native ease,
 All harmony and grace.
 Tumultuous tides his pulses roll,
 A faltering, ardent kiss he stole;
 He gaz'd, he wish'd, he fear'd, he blush'd,
 And sigh'd his very soul.

As flies the partridge from the brake
 On fear-inspirèd wings,
 So Nelly starting, half-awake,
 Away affrighted springs ;
 But Willie follow'd—as he should ;
 He overtook her in the wood ;
 He vow'd, he pray'd, he found the maid
 Forgiving all, and good.

No. 116. When rosy May comes in wi' flowers.

Tune : The gardener's march. Scots Musical Museum, 1790, No. 220.

Slow and pointed

When ro - sy May comes in wi' flowers To deck her gay, green-spreading bowers,

Then bu - sy, bu - sy are his hours—, The gard'ner wi' his pai - dle. The

WHEN rosy May comes in wi' flowers,
 To deck her gay, green-spreading bowers,
 Then busy, busy are his hours—
 The gard'ner wi' his paidle.
 The crystal waters gently fa',
 The merry birds are lovers a',
 The scented breezes round him blaw—
 The gard'ner wi' his paidle.

When purple morning starts the hare
 To steal upon her early fare ;
 Then through the dew he maun repair—
 The gard'ner wi' his paidle.
 When day, expiring in the west,
 The curtain draws o' Nature's rest,
 He flies to her arms he lo'es best—
 The gard'ner wi' his paidle.

No. 118. *Hark the mavis' e'ening sang.*Tune : Ca' the yowes (see No. 114).

CHORUS. *Ca' the yowes to the knowes,
 Ca' them where the heather grows,
 Ca' them where the burnie rowes,
 My bonie dearie.*

HARK, the mavis' e'ening sang
 Sounding Clouden's woods amang,
 Then a-faulding let us gang,
 My bonie dearie.

We'll gae down by Clouden side,
 Thro' the hazels, spreading wide
 O'er the waves that sweetly glide
 To the moon sae clearly.

Yonder Clouden's silent towers
Where, at moonshine's midnight hours,
O'er the dewy bending flowers
Fairies dance sae cheery.

Ghaist nor bogle shalt thou fear,
Thou'rt to Love and Heav'n sae
dear,
Nocht of ill may come thee near,
My bonie dearie.

Fair and lovely as thou art,
Thou hast stown my very heart ;
I can die—but canna part,
My bonie dearie.

No. 121. Sweet are the banks—the banks o' Doon.

(FIRST VERSION.)

Tune: Cambdelmore. Bremner's Reels, 1761, p. 92.

Slow

Sweet are the banks—the banks o' Doon, The spreading flowers are fair, And
tr
 every-thing is blythe and glad, But I am fu' o' care. Thou'll break my heart, thou bo-nie bird, That sings up-on the bough! Thou minds me o' the happy days
 When my fause Luve was true: Thou'll break my heart, thou bo-nie bird That sings
tr
 be-side thy mate, For sae I sat, and sae I sang, And wist na o' my fate.

SWEET are the banks—the banks o' Doon,
 The spreading flowers are fair,
 And everything is blythe and glad,
 But I am fu' o' care.
 Thou'll break my heart, thou bonie bird
 That sings upon the bough!
 Thou minds me o' the happy days
 When my fause Luve was true:
 Thou'll break my heart, thou bonie bird
 That sings beside thy mate,
 For sae I sat, and sae I sang,
 And wist na o' my fate!

Aft hae I rov'd by bonie Doon
 To see the woodbine twine,
 And ilka bird sang o' its Luve,
 And sae did I o' mine.
 Wi' lightsome heart I pu'd a rose
 Upon its thorny tree,
 But my fause luver staw my rose,
 And left the thorn wi' me:
 Wi' lightsome heart I pu'd a rose
 Upon a morn in June,
 And sae I flourished on the morn,
 And sae was pu'd or noon.

No. 122. Ye flowery banks o' bonie Doon.

(SECOND VERSION.)

See Tune : Ballendalloch's Reel, or Cambdelmore (see No. 121).

YE flowery banks o' bonie Doon,
 How can ye blume sae fair?
 How can ye chant, ye little birds,
 And I sae fu' o' care?

Thou'll break my heart, thou bonie bird
 That sings upon the bough :
 Thou minds me o' the happy days
 When my fause Luve was true!

Thou'll break my heart, thou bonie bird
 That sings beside thy mate ;
 For sae I sat, and sae I sang,
 And wist na o' my fate.

Aft hae I rov'd by bonie Doon
 To see the woodbine twine,
 And ilka bird sang o' its Luve,
 And sae did I o' mine.

Wi' lightsome heart I pu'd a rose
 Frae aff its thorny tree ;
 And my fause luver staw my rose,
 But left the thorn wi' me.

No. 123. Ye banks and braes o' bonie Doon.

(THIRD VERSION.)

Tune : Caledonian Hunt's delight. Scots Musical Museum, 1792, No. 374.Slow

Ye banks and braes o' bon - ie Doon, How can ye bloom sae fresh and fair? How can ye chant, ye lit - tle birds, And I sae wea - ry fu' o' care! Thou'll break my heart, thou warb-ling bird, That wan - tons thro' the flower - ing thorn : Thou minds me

o' de - part - ed joys, De - part - ed nev - er to re - turn!

YE banks and braes o' bonie Doon,
How can ye bloom sae fresh and fair?
How can ye chant, ye little birds,
And I sae weary fu' o' care!
Thou'll break my heart, thou warbling bird,
That wantons thro' the flowering thorn :
Thou minds me o' departed joys,
Departed never to return!

Aft hae I roved by bonie Doon
To see the rose and woodbine twine,
And ilka bird sang o' its Luvie,
And fondly sae did I o' mine ;
Wi' lightsome heart I pu'd a rose,
Fu' sweet upon its thorny tree!
And my fause luvier staw my rose—
But ah! he left the thorn wi' me.

No. 124. O, stay, sweet warbling woodlark, stay.

Tune : Whare shall our gudeman lie (see No. 10).

O, STAY, sweet warbling woodlark, stay,
Nor quit for me the trembling spray!
A hapless lover courts thy lay,
Thy soothing, fond complaining.
Again, again that tender part,
That I may catch thy melting art!
For surely that wad touch her heart
Wha kills me wi' disdainin.

Say, was thy little mate unkind,
And heard thee as the careless wind?
O, nocht but love and sorrow join'd
Sic notes o' woe could wauken!
Thou tells o' never-ending care,
O' speechless grief and dark despair—
For pity's sake, sweet bird, nae mair,
Or my poor heart is broken!

Thou's welcome again to thy ain Jock Rab.

What says she, my dearie, my Eppie M^cNab?
 What says she, my dearie, my Eppie M^cNab?
 'She lets thee to wit that she has thee forgot,
 And for ever disowns thee, her ain Jock Rab.'

O, had I ne'er seen thee, my Eppie M^cNab!
 O, had I ne'er seen thee, my Eppie M^cNab!
 As light as the air and as fause as thou's fair,
 Thou's broken the heart o' thy ain Jock Rab.

No. 127. *O, luve will venture in.*Tune: The posie. Scots Musical Museum, 1792, No. 373.Moderate time

O, luve will ven-ture in where it daur na weel be seen; O, luve will ven-ture in, where wisdom ance hath been; But I will doun yon river rove a - mang the wood sae green, And a' to pu' a po-sie to my ain dear May!

O, LUVE will venture in where it daur na weel be seen;
 O, luve will venture in, where wisdom ance hath been;
 But I will doun yon river rove among the wood sae green,
 And a' to pu' a posie to my ain dear May!

The primrose I will pu', the firstling o' the year,
 And I will pu' the pink, the emblem o' my dear,
 For she's the pink o' womankind, and blooms without a peer—
 And a' to be a posie to my ain dear May!

I'll pu' the budding rose when Phœbus peeps in view,
 For it's like a baumy kiss o' her sweet, bonie mou'.
 The hyacinth's for constancy wi' its unchanging blue—
 And a' to be a posie to my ain dear May.

The lily it is pure, and the lily it is fair,
 And in her lovely bosom I'll place the lily there;
 The daisy's for simplicity and unaffected air—
 And a' to be a posie to my ain dear May.

The hawthorn I will pu', wi' its locks o' siller gray,
 Where, like an aged man, it stands at break o' day;
 But the songster's nest within the bush I winna tak away—
 And a' to be a posie to my ain dear May.

The woodbine I will pu' when the e'ening star is near,
 And the diamond draps o' dew shall be her een sae clear!
 The violet's for modesty, which weel she fa's to wear—
 And a' to be a posie to my ain dear May.

I'll tie the posie round wi' the silken band o' luve,
 And I'll place it in her breast, and I'll swear by a' above,
 That to my latest draught o' life the band shall ne'er remove,
 And this will be a posie to my ain dear May.

No. 129. *How cruel are the parents.*Tune : John Anderson my jo (see No. 212).

How cruel are the parents
 Who riches only prize,
 And to the wealthy booby
 Poor woman sacrifice !
 Meanwhile the hapless daughter
 Has but a choice of strife ;
 To shun a tyrant father's hate
 Become a wretched wife !

The ravening hawk pursuing,
 The trembling dove thus flies,
 To shun impelling ruin
 Awhile her pinion tries,
 Till, of escape despairing,
 No shelter or retreat,
 She trusts the ruthless falconer,
 And drops beneath his feet !

No. 130. *The smiling Spring comes in rejoicing.*Tune : Bonie Bell. Scots Musical Museum, 1792, No. 387.Lively

The smil-ing Spring comes in re-joic-ing, And sur-ly Win-ter grim-ly flies; Now crys-tal clear are the fall-ing wa-ters, And bon-ie blue are the sun-ny skies. Fresh o'er the mountains breaks forth the morn-ing, The ev'n-ing gilds the o-cean's swell; All crea-tures joy in the sun's re-turn-ing, And I re-joice in my bon-ie Bell.

THE smiling Spring comes in rejoicing,
And surly Winter grimly flies;
Now crystal clear are the falling waters,
And bonie blue are the sunny skies.
Fresh o'er the mountains breaks forth the morning,
The ev'ning gilds the ocean's swell;
All creatures joy in the sun's returning,
And I rejoice in my bonie Bell.

The flowery Spring leads sunny Summer,
The yellow Autumn presses near;
Then in his turn comes gloomy Winter,
Till smiling Spring again appear.
Thus seasons dancing, life advancing,
Old Time and Nature their changes tell;
But never ranging, still unchanging,
I adore my bonie Bell.

Where Cart rins row - in to the sea By mon-ie a flower and a gal - lant weav - er. O, I had woo - ers aught or nine, They gied me rings and rib-bons fine, And I was fear'd my heart wad tine, And I gied it to the weav - er.

WHERE Cart rins rowin to the sea
By monie a flower and spreading tree,
There lives a lad, the lad for me—

He is a gallant weaver!
O, I had woers aught or nine,
They gied me rings and ribbons fine,
And I was fear'd my heart wad tine,
And I gied it to the weaver.

My daddie sign'd my tocher-band
To gie the lad that has the land;
But to my heart I'll add my hand,
And give it to the weaver.

While birds rejoice in leafy bowers,
While bees delight in opening flowers,
While corn grows green in summer showers,
I love my gallant weaver.

No. 132. *I do confess thou art sae fair.*Tune: The cuckoo. Scots Musical Museum, 1792, No. 321.

Moderately quick

I do con - fess thou art sae fair, I wad been o'er lips could speak thy heart could muve. I do con - fess thee sweet, but find Thou art so thrift - less o' thy sweets, Thy fa - vours are the sil - ly wind That kiss - es il - ka thing it meets.

I do confess thou art sae fair,
 I wad been o'er the lugs in luv,
 Had I na found the slightest prayer
 That lips could speak thy heart could muve.
 I do confess thee sweet, but find
 Thou art so thriftless o' thy sweets,
 Thy favours are the silly wind
 That kisses ilka thing it meets.

See yonder rosebud rich in dew,
 Amang its native briers sae coy,
 How sune it tines its scent and hue,
 When pu'd and worn a common toy!
 Sic fate ere lang shall thee betide,
 Tho' thou may gaily bloom a while,
 And sune thou shalt be thrown aside,
 Like onie common weed, an' vile.

No. 133. *Whare live ye, my bonie lass?*Tune : My collier laddie. Scots Musical Museum, 1792, No. 361.

Gracefully

The musical notation consists of three staves of music in a 6/8 time signature with a key signature of three flats (B-flat, E-flat, A-flat). The melody is written on a treble clef. The lyrics are placed below the notes.

'Whare live ye, my bon - ie lass, And tell me what they ca' ye?' 'My name,' she says, 'is Mis - tress
Jean, And I fol - low the Col - - lier Lad - die.'

- 'WHARE live ye, my bonie lass,
And tell me what they ca' ye?'
'My name,' she says, 'is Mistress Jean, } bis
And I follow the Collier Laddie.'
- 'See you not yon hills and dales
The sun shines on sae brawlie?
They a' are mine, and they shall be thine, } bis
Gin ye'll leave your Collier Laddie.'
- 'An' ye shall gang in gay attire,
Weel buskit up sae gaudy,
And ane to wait on every hand, } bis
Gin ye'll leave your Collier Laddie.'
- 'Tho' ye had a' the sun shines on,
And the earth conceals sae lowly,
I wad turn my back on you and it a', } bis
And embrace my Collier Laddie.'
- 'I can win my five pennies in a day,
An' spend it at night fu' brawlie,
And make my bed in the Collier's neuk } bis
And lie down wi' my Collier Laddie.'
- 'Luve for luve is the bargain for me,
'Tho' the wee cot-house should haud me,
And the warld before me to win my bread— } bis
And fair fa' my Collier Laddie!'

No. 134. *In simmer, when the hay was mawn.*Tune: The country lass. Orpheus Caledonius, 1733, No. 38.Rather slow

The musical score is written in treble clef with a 3/4 time signature. It consists of five staves of music. The lyrics are printed below the notes. The melody is simple and characteristic of Burns's style, with a mix of eighth and sixteenth notes. There are some triplets indicated by a '3' over a group of notes.

In sim-mer, when the hay was mawn And corn wav'd green in il - ka field, While clav-er blooms white o'er the lea, And ro - ses blaw in il - ka field, Blythe Bes - sie in the milk - ing shiel, Says 'I'll be wed, come o't what will'; Out spake a dame in wrinkled eild:— 'O' guid ad - vise - ment comes nae ill.'

In simmer, when the hay was mawn
 And corn wav'd green in ilka field,
 While claver blooms white o'er the lea,
 And roses blaw in ilka field,
 Blythe Bessie in the milking shiel,
 Says—'I'll be wed, come o't what will';
 Out spake a dame in wrinkled eild:—
 'O' guid advisement comes nae ill.

'It's ye hae woers mony ane,
 And lassie, ye're but young, ye ken;
 Then wait a wee, and cannie wale
 A routhie butt, a routhie ben:
 There's Johnie o' the Buskie-Glen,
 Fu' is his barn, fu' is his byre:
 Tak this frae me, my bonie hen:—
 It's plenty beets the luver's fire.'

'For Johnie o' the Buskie-Glen
 I dinna care a single flie:
 He lo'es sae weel his craps and kye,
 He has nae luvè to spare for me:

But blythe's the blink o' Robie's e'e,
 And weel I wat he lo'es me dear :
 Ae blink o' him I wadna gie
 For Buskie-Glen and a' his gear.'

'O thoughtless lassie, life's a faught !
 The canniest gate, the strife is sair ;
 But ay fu'-han t is fechtin best ;
 A hungry care's an unco care.
 But some will spend, and some will spare,
 And wilfu' folk maun hae their will.
 Syne as ye brew, my maiden fair,
 Keep mind that ye maun drink the yill.'

'O, gear will buy me rigs o' land,
 And gear will buy me sheep and kye !
 But the tender heart o' leesome luv
 The gowd and siller canna buy :
 We may be poor, Robie and I ;
 Light is the burden luv lays on ;
 Content and luv brings peace and joy—
 What mair hae queens upon a throne?'

No. 135. Now rosy May comes in wi' flowers.

Tune : Dainty Davie (see infra).

CHORUS. *Meet me on the warlock knowe,
 Dainty Davie, Dainty Davie ;
 There I'll spend the day wi' you,
 My ain dear Dainty Davie.*

Now rosy May comes in wi' flowers
 To deck her gay, green-spreading bowers ;
 And now comes in the happy hours
 To wander wi' my Davie.

The crystal waters round us fa',
 The merry birds are lovers a',
 The scented breezes round us blaw,
 A wandering wi' my Davie.

When purple morning starts the hare
 To steal upon her early fare,
 Then thro' the dews I will repair
 To meet my faithfu' Davie.

When day, expiring in the west,
 The curtain draws o' Nature's rest,
 I flee to his arms I lo'e the best :
 And that's my ain dear Davie !

No. 136. *When o'er the hill the e'ening star.*Tune: My ain kind dearie, O. Scots Musical Museum, 1787, No. 49.

Slowly

When o'er the hill the e'en-ing star Tells bught-in time is near, my jo, And ows-en frae the far-row'd field Re - turn sae dowf and wea-ry, O, Down by the burn, where scent -
 - ed birks Wi' dew are hang - in clear, my jo, I'll meet thee on the lea - rig, My ain kind dea - rie, O.

WHEN o'er the hill the e'ening star
 Tells bughtin time is near, my jo,
 And owsen frae the furrow'd field
 Return sae dowf and weary, O,
 Down by the burn, where scented birks
 Wi' dew are hangin clear, my jo,
 I'll meet thee on the lea-rig,
 My ain kind dearie, O.

At midnight hour in mirkest glen
 I'd rove, and ne'er be eerie, O,
 If thro' that glen I gaed to thee,
 My ain kind dearie, O!
 Altho' the night were ne'er sae wild,
 And I were ne'er sae weary, O,
 I'll meet thee on the lea-rig,
 My ain kind dearie, O.

The hunter lo'es the morning sun
 To rouse the mountain deer, my jo ;
 At noon the fisher takes the glen
 A down the burn to steer, my jo ;
 Gie me the hour o' gloamin grey,
 It maks my heart sae cheery, O,
 To meet thee on the lea-rig,
 My ain kind dearie, O !

No. 137. Braw, braw lads on Yarrow braes.

Tune : The brave lads of Galla Water. Cal. Pocket Comp., c. 1756, viii. p. 28.

Braw, braw lads on Yar-row braes, They rove a-mang the bloom-ing heather ;

But Yar-row braes, nor Et-trick shaws Can match the lads o' Gal-la Water.

BRAW, braw lads on Yarrow braes,
 They rove among the blooming heather ;
 But Yarrow braes nor Ettrick shaws
 Can match the lads o' Galla Water.

But there is ane, a secret ane,
 Aboon them a' I lo'e him better ;
 And I'll be his, and he'll be mine,
 The bonie lad o' Galla Water.

Altho' his daddie was nae laird,
 And tho' I hae nae meikle tocher,
 Yet, rich in kindest, truest love,
 We'll tent our flocks by Galla Water.

It ne'er was wealth, it ne'er was wealth
 That coft contentment, peace, and pleasure :
 The bands and bliss o' mutual love,
 O, that's the chiefest world's treasure.

No. 138. *O, mirk, mirk is this midnight hour.*Tune: Lord Gregory. Scots Musical Museum, 1787, No. 5.

Slow

O, mirk, mirk, is this midnight hour, And loud the tem - pest's roar; A wae - fu' wander - er seeks thy tower—Lord Gre - go - ry, ope thy door! An ex - ile frae her fa - ther's ha', And a' for sake o' thee, At least some pi - ty on me shaw, If love it may na be.

O, MIRK, mirk is this midnight hour,
 And loud the tempest's roar;
 A wae-fu' wanderer seeks thy tower—
 Lord Gregory, ope thy door!
 An exile frae her father's ha',
 And a' for sake o' thee,
 At least some pity on me shaw,
 If love it may na be.

Lord Gregory mind'st thou not the grove
 By bonie Irwine side,
 Where first I own'd that virgin love
 I lang, lang had denied?
 How aften didst thou pledge and vow,
 Thou wad for ay be mine!
 And my fond heart, itsel sae true,
 It ne'er mistrusted thine.

Hard is thy heart, Lord Gregory,
 And flinty is thy breast:
 Thou bolt of heaven that flashest by,
 O, wilt thou bring me rest!

Ye mustering thunders from above,
 Your willing victim see,
 But spare and pardon my fause love
 His wrangs to Heaven and me!

No. 139. There's auld Rob Morris that wons in yon glen.

Tune : Auld Rob Morris. Orpheus Caledonius, 1725, No. 30.

The musical score is written on three staves in a 3/4 time signature with a key signature of two flats (B-flat and E-flat). The first staff begins with a 'Slow' marking and a trill (tr) over the final note. The lyrics are written below the notes, with hyphens indicating syllables that span across multiple notes. The second staff continues the melody, and the third staff concludes with another trill over the final note.

There's auld Rob Mor-ris that wons in yon glen, He's the king o' gude fel-lows and wale of auld men; He has gowd in his coffers, he has ows -
 - en and kine, And ae bo - nie las-sie, his dau-tie and mine.

THERE'S auld Rob Morris that wons in yon glen,
 He's the king o' gude fellows and wale of auld men;
 He has gowd in his coffers, he has owsen and kine,
 And ae bonie lassie, his dautie and mine.

She's fresh as the morning the fairest in May,
 She's sweet as the ev'ning amang the new hay,
 As blythe and as artless as the lambs on the lea,
 And dear to my heart as the light to my e'e.

But O, she's an heiress—auld Robin's a laird,
 And my daddie has nought but a cot-house and yard;
 A wooer like me maunna hope to come speed,
 The wounds I must hide that will soon be my dead.

The day comes to me, but delight brings me nane;
 The night comes to me, but my rest it is gane:
 I wander my lane like a night-troubled ghaist,
 And I sigh as my heart it wad burst in my breast.

O, had she but been of a lower degree,
 I then might hae hop'd she wad smil'd upon me!
 O, how past describing had then been my bliss,
 As now my distraction no words can express!

No. 140. *Here awa, there awa, wandering Willie.*Tune: Here awa, there awa. Scots Musical Museum, 1787, No. 57.

Slow tr

Here a - wa, there a-wa, wan-der-ing Wil - lie, Here a - wa, there a-wa, haud a - wa hame; Come to my bo-som, my ae on - ly dear-ie, And tell me thou bring'st me my Wil-lie the same.

HERE awa, there awa, wandering Willie,
 Here awa, there awa, haud awa hame;
 Come to my bosom, my ae only dearie,
 And tell me thou bring'st me my Willie the same.

Loud tho' the winter blew cauld at our parting,
 'Twas na the blast brought the tear in my e'e:
 Welcome now simmer, and welcome my Willie,
 The simmer to nature, my Willie to me.

Rest, ye wild storms in the cave o' your slumbers—
 How your wild howling a lover alarms!
 Wauken, ye breezes, row gently, ye billows,
 And waft my dear laddie ance mair to my arms.

But O, if he's faithless, and minds na his Nannie,
 Flow still between us, thou wide roaring main!
 May I never see it, may I never trow it,
 But, dying, believe that my Willie's my ain!

No. 141. *O, open the door some pity to shew.*Tune: Open the door softly. Bunting's Irish Melodies, 1796.

With pathos

O, open the door some pi - ty to shew, If love it may na be, O! Tho thou hast been false, I'll ev - er prove true—O, op - en the door to me, O!

O, OPEN the door some pity to shew,
 If love it may na be, O!
 Tho' thou hast been false, I'll ever prove true—
 O, open the door to me, O!

Cauld is the blast upon my pale cheek,
 But caulder thy love for me, O:
 The frost, that freezes the life at my heart,
 Is naught to my pains frae thee, O!

The wan moon sets behind the white wave,
 And Time is setting with me, O:
 False friends, false love, farewell! for mair
 I'll ne'er trouble them, nor thee, O!

She has open'd the door, she has open'd it wide,
 She sees the pale corse on the plain, O!
 'My truc love,' she cried, and sank down by his side—
 Never to rise again, O!

By Allan stream I chanc'd to rove,
 While Phæbus sank beyond Benledi;
 The winds were whisp'ring thro' the grove,
 The yellow corn was waving ready:
 I listen'd to a lover's sang,
 An' thought on youthfu' pleasures monie,
 And ay the wild wood echoes rang:—
 'O, my love Annie's very bonie!
 'O, happy be the woodbine bower,
 Nae nightly bogle make it eerie!
 Nor ever sorrow stain the hour,
 The place and time I met my dearie!
 Her head upon my throbbing breast,
 She, sinking, said:—"I'm thine for ever!"
 While monie a kiss the seal impress—
 The sacred vow we ne'er should sever.'

The haunt o' Spring's the primrose-brae,
 The Summer joys the flocks to follow.
 How cheery thro' her short'ning day,
 Is Autumn in her weeds o' yellow;
 But can they melt the glowing heart,
 Or chain the soul in speechless pleasure?
 Or thro' each nerve the rapture dart,
 Like meeting her, our bosom's treasure?

O, WERE my love yon lilac fair
 Wi' purple blossoms to the spring,
 And I a bird to shelter there,
 When wearied on my little wing,
 How I wad mourn when it was torn
 By autumn wild and winter rude !
 But I wad sing on wanton wing,
 When youthfu' May its bloom renew'd.

[O, gin my love were yon red rose,
 That grows upon the castle wa',
 And I mysel a drap o' dew
 Into her bonie breast to fa',

O, there, beyond expression blest,
 I'd feast on beauty a' the night,
 Seal'd on her silk-saft faulds to rest,

 The boat rocks at the pier o' Leith,
 Fu' loud the wind blows frae the ferry,
 The ship rides by the Berwick-law,
 And I maun leave my bonie Mary.

The trumpets sound, the banners fly,
 The glittering spears are rankèd ready,
 The shouts o' war are heard afar,
 The battle closes deep and bloody,
 It's not the roar o' sea or shore
 Wad mak me langer wish to tarry,
 Nor shouts o' war that's heard afar—
 It's leaving thee, my bonie Mary!

And the small birds sing on ev'ry tree:
The hearts of these are glad, but mine is very sad,
For my lover has parted from me.

The rose upon the brier by the waters running clear
May have charms for the linnet or the bee:
Their little loves are blest, and their little hearts at rest,
But my lover is parted from me.

[My love is like the sun in the firmament does run—
For ever constant and true;
But his is like the moon, that wanders up and down
And every month it is new.

All you that are in love, and cannot it remove,
I pity the pains you endure,
For experience makes me know that your hearts are full of woe,
A woe that no mortal can cure.]

WAE is my heart, and the tear's in my e'e;
Lang, lang joy's been a stranger to me:
Forsaken and friendless my burden I bear,
And the sweet voice o' pity ne'er sounds in my ear.

Love, thou hast pleasures—and deep hae I luv'd!
Love, thou hast sorrows—and sair hae I pruv'd!
But this bruised heart that now bleeds in my breast,
I can feel by its throbbings, will soon be at rest.

O, if I were where happy I hae been,
Down by yon stream and yon bonie castle-green!
For there he is wand'ring and musing on me,
Wha wad soon dry the tear-drop that clings to my e'e.

'Twas past one o'clock in a cauld fros - ty morn'ing When can - kert No - vem - ber blows o - ver the plain, I heard the kirk - bell re - peat the loud warn - ing, As rest - less I sought for sweet slum - ber in vain: Then up I a - rose, the sil - ver moon shining bright; Moun - tains and val - lies ap - pear - ing all hoary white; Forth I would go . . . a - mid the pale, si - lent night, To vis - it the fair one, the cause of my pain.

'Twas past one o'clock in a cauld frosty morning
 When cankert November blows over the plain,
 I heard the kirk-bell repeat the loud warning
 As restless I sought for sweet slumber in vain :
 Then up I arose, the silver moon shining bright,
 Mountains and vallies appearing all hoary white ;
 Forth I would go amid the pale, silent night,
 To visit the fair one, the cause of my pain.

Sae gently I staw to my lovely maid's chamber,
 And rapp'd at her window, low down on my knee,
 Begging that she would awauk from sweet slumber,
 Awauk from sweet slumber and pity me :
 For, that a stranger to a' pleasure, peace and rest,
 Love into madness had firèd my tortur'd breast,
 And that I should be of a' men the maist unblest,
 Unless she would pity my sad miserie !

My true love arose and whisperèd to me—
 (The moon lookèd in and envy'd my love's charms ;—)
 ' An innocent maiden, ah, would you undo me ! '
 I made no reply, but leapt into her arms :
 Bright Phœbus peep'd over the hills and found me there ;
 As he has done, now, seven lang years and mair,
 A faithfuller, constanter, kinder, more loving pair,
 His sweet chearing beam nor enlightens nor warms.

O, dinna think, my pretty pink,

But I can live without thee:

I vow and swear I dinna care

How lang ye look about ye!

Thou'rt ay sae free informing me

Thou hast nae mind to marry,

I'll be as free informing thee

Nae time hae I to tarry.

I ken thy freens try ilka means

Frae wedlock to delay thee—

Depending on some higher chance,—

But fortune may betray thee.

I ken they scorn my low estate,

But that does never grieve me,

For I'm as free as any he,—

Sma' siller will relieve me!

I'll count my health my greatest wealth
 Sae lang as I'll enjoy it :
 I'll fear nae scant, I'll bode nae want
 As lang's I get employment.
 But far off fowls hae feathers fair,
 And ay until ye try them,
 Tho' they seem fair, still have a care—
 They may prove as bad as I am !
 But at twel at night, when the moon shines bright,

 There's some that are dowie, I trow wad be fain
 To see the bit taylor come skippin again.

No. 170. *O, merry hae I been teethin a heckle.*Tune : Lord Brcadalbine's March. Scots Musical Museum, 1790, No. 270.

Brisk

O, mer - ry hae I been teeth - in a heckle, An' mer - ry hae I been shap - in a spoon ; O, mer - ry hae I been clout - in a - ket - tle, An' kiss - in my Ka - tie when a' was done.
 O, a' the lang day I ca' at my ham - mer, An' a' the lang day I whis - tle and sing ; O, a' the lang night I cud - dle my kim - mer, An' a' the lang night as hap - py's a king!

O, MERRY hae I been teethin a heckle,
 An' merry hae I been shapin a spoon ;
 O, merry hae I been cloutin a kettle,
 An' kissin my Katie when a' was done.
 O, a' the lang day I ca' at my hammer,
 An' a' the lang day I whistle and sing ;
 O, a' the lang night I cuddle my kimmer,
 An' a' the lang night as happy's a king !

Bitter in dool, I lickit my winnins
 O' marrying Bess, to gie her a slave :
 Blest be the hour she cool'd in her linens,
 And blythe be the bird that sings on her grave !
 Come to my arms, my Katie, my Katie,
 An' come to my arms, and kiss me again !
 Drucken or sober, here's to thee, Katie,
 An' blest be the day I did it again !

My lord a-hunt-ing he is gane, But hounds or hawks wi' him are nane;

By Colin's cot-tage lies his game, If Colin's Jen-ny be at hame.

CHORUS. *My lady's gown, there's gairs upon't.
And gowden flowers sae rare upon't;
But Jenny's jimps and jirkinet,
My lord thinks meikle mair upon't.*

My lord a-hunting he is gane,
But hounds or hawks wi' him are nane ;
By Colin's cottage lies his game,
If Colin's Jenny be at hame.

My lady's white, my lady's red,
And kith and kin o' Cassillis' blude ;
But her ten-pund lands o' tocher gude
Were a' the charms his lordship lo'ed.

Out o'er yon muir, out o'er yon moss,
Whare gor-cocks thro' the heather pass,
There wons auld Colin's bonie lass,
A lily in a wilderness.

Sae sweetly move her genty limbs,
Like music-notes o' lovers' hymns :
The diamond-dew in her een sae blue,
Where laughing love sae wanton swims.

My lady's dink, my lady's drest,
The flower and fancy o' the west ;
But the lassie that a man lo'es best,
O, that's the lass to mak him blest !

No. 172. *The heather was blooming.*Tune: The Tailor's March.

Cheerily

The heath-er was blooming, the meadows were mawn, Our lads gaed mon - ie a glen; At length they dis - cov - er'd a bon - ie moor-hen.

CHORUS. I rede you, be-ware at the hunt-ing young men! I rede you be - some as they spring, But can - ni - ly steal on a bon - ie moor-hen.

THE heather was blooming, the meadows were mawn,
Our lads gaed a-hunting ae day at the dawn,
O'er moors and o'er mosses and monie a glen;
At length they discover'd a bonie moor-hen.

CHORUS. *I rede you, beware at the hunting, young men!
I rede you, beware at the hunting, young men!
Take some on the wing, and some as they spring,
But cannily steal on a bonie moor-hen.*

Sweet-brushing the dew from the brown heather bells,
Her colours betrayed her on yon mossy fells;
Her plumage outlusted the pride o' the spring,
And O! as she wanton'd sae gay on the wing,

Auld Phœbus himsel, as he peeped o'er the hill,
In spite at her plumage he trièd his skill;
He levell'd his rays where she bask'd on the brae—
His rays were outshone, and but mark'd where she lay.

They hunted the valley, they hunted the hill,
 The best of our lads wi' the best o' their skill;
 But still as the fairest she sat in their sight,
 Then, whirr! she was over, a mile at a flight.

WEARY fa' you, Duncan Gray!
 Ha, ha, the girdin o't!
 Wae gae by you, Duncan Gray!
 Ha, ha, the girdin o't!
 When a' the lave gae to their play,
 Then I maun sit the lee-lang day,
 And jeeg the cradle wi' my tae,
 And a' for the girdin o't!

Bonie was the Lammas moon—
 Ha, ha, the girdin o't!
 Glowrin a' the hills aboon,—
 Ha, ha, the girdin o't!
 The girdin brak, the beast cam down,
 I tint my curch and baith my shoon,
 And, Duncan, ye're an unco loun—
 Wae on the bad girdin o't!

But Duncan, gin ye'll keep your aith,
 Ha, ha, the girdin o't!
 I'se bless you wi' my hindmost breath,
 Ha, ha, the girdin o't!
 Duncan, gin ye'll keep your aith,
 The beast again can bear us baith,
 And auld Mess John will mend the skaith
 And clout the bad girdin o't.

No. 174. Wi' braw new branks in meikle pride.

(Tune unknown.)

Wi' braw new branks in meikle pride,
 And eke a braw new brechan,
 My Pegasus I'm got astride,
 And up Parnassus pechin ;
 Whiles owre a bush wi' downward crush
 The doited beastie stammers ;
 Then up he gets, and off he sets
 For sake o' Willie Chalmers.

I doubt na, lass, that weel-kenn'd name
 May cost a pair o' blushes ;
 I am nae stranger to your fame,
 Nor his warm-urg'd wishes :
 Your bonie face, sae mild and sweet,
 His honest heart enamours ;
 And faith ! ye'll no be lost a whit,
 Tho' wair'd on Willie Chalmers.

Auld Truth hersel might swear ye're fair,
 And Honor safely back her ;
 And Modesty assume your air,
 And ne'er a ane mistak her :
 And sic twa love-inspiring een
 Might fire even holy palmers ;
 Nae wonder then they've fatal been
 To honest Willie Chalmers.

I doubt na Fortune may you shore
 Some mim-mou'd, pouth'er'd priestie,
 Fu' lifted up wi' Hebrew lore,
 And band upon his breastie :
 But O, what signifies to you
 His lexicons and grammars ?
 The feeling heart's the royal blue,
 And that's wi' Willie Chalmers.

Some gapin, glowrin countra laird
 May warsle for your favour ;
 May claw his lug, and straik his beard,
 And hoast up some palaver.
 My bonie maid, before ye wed
 Sic clumsy-witted hammers,
 Seek Heaven for help, and barefit skelp
 Awa' wi' Willie Chalmers.

Forgive the Bard ! my fond regard
 For aye that shares my bosom
 Inspires my Muse to gie'm his dues,
 For deil a hair I roose him.

May powers aboon unite you soon,
 And fructify your âmour, s,
 And every year come in mair dear
 To you and Willie Chalmers !

There was a lass, they ca'd her Meg, And she held o'er the moors to spin ;

There was a lad that fol-low'd her, They ca'd him Dun-can Da-vi-son.

The moor was dreigh, and Meg was skeigh, Her fa-vour Dun-can could-na win ; For wi' the rock she wad him knock, And ay she shook the tem-per-pin.

THERE was a lass, they ca'd her Meg,
 And she held o'er the moors to spin ;
 There was a lad that follow'd her,
 They ca'd him Duncan Davison,
 The moor was dreigh, and Meg was skeigh,
 Her favour Duncan couldna win ;
 For wi' the rock she wad him knock,
 And ay she shook the temper-pin.

As o'er the moor they lightly foor,
 A burn was clear, a glen was green ;
 Upon the banks they eas'd their shanks,
 And ay she set the wheel between :
 But Duncan swear a haly aith,
 That Meg should be a bride the morn ;
 Then Meg took up her spinnin graith,
 And flang them a' out o'er the burn.

We will big a wee, wee house,
 And we will live like king and queen,
 Sae blythe and merry 's we will be,
 When ye set by the wheel at e'en !
 A man may drink, and no be drunk ;
 A man may fight, and no be slain ;
 A man may kiss a bonie lass,
 And ay be welcome back again !

No. 179. *Duncan Gray cam here to woo.*Tune : Duncan Gray (see No. 173).

DUNCAN Gray cam here to woo

Ha, ha, the wooing o't!

On blythe yule-night when we were fou

Ha, ha, the wooing o't!

Maggie coost her head fu' high,

Look'd asklent and unco skeigh,

Gart poor Duncan stand abeigh—

Ha, ha, the wooing o't!

Duncan fleech'd, and Duncan pray'd—
 Ha, ha, the wooing o't!
 Meg was deaf as Ailsa Craig
 Ha, ha, the wooing o't!
 Duncan sigh'd baith out and in,
 Grat his een baith bleer't and blin',
 Spak o' lowpin o'er a linn—
 Ha, ha, the wooing o't!

Time and chance are but a tide,
 Ha, ha, the wooing o't!
 Slighted love is sair to bide
 Ha, ha, the wooing o't!
 'Shall I, like a fool,' quoth he,
 'For a haughty hizzie die?
 She may gae to—France for me!—
 Ha, ha, the wooing o't!

How it comes, let doctors tell,
 Ha, ha, the wooing o't!
 Meg grew sick, as he grew hale
 Ha, ha, the wooing o't!
 Something in her bosom wrings,
 For relief a sigh she brings,
 And O! her een they spak sic things!—
 Ha, ha, the wooing o't.

Duncan was a lad o' grace,
 Ha, ha, the wooing o't,
 Maggie's was a piteous case,
 Ha, ha, the wooing o't:
 Duncan couldna be her death,
 Swelling pity smoor'd his wrath;
 Now they're crouse and cantybaith—
 Ha, ha, the wooing o't.

 Dusty was the coat,
 Dusty was the colour,
 Dusty was the kiss
 That I gat frae the miller.

Hey the dusty miller
 And his dusty sack;
 Leeze me on the calling
 Fills the dusty peck.
 Fills the dusty peck,
 Brings the dusty siller;
 I wad gie my coatie
 For the dusty miller.

 The deities that I adore
 Are social Peace and Plenty;
 I'm better pleas'd to make one more,
 Than be the death of twenty.
 I would not die like Socrates,
 For all the fuss of Plato;
 Nor would I with Leonidas,
 Nor yet would I with Cato:
 The zealots of the Church and State
 Shall ne'er my mortal foes be;
 But let me have bold Zimri's fate
 Within the arms of Cozbi.

No. 184. *Wha is that at my bower-door?*Tune: Lass, an I come near thee. Scots Musical Museum, 1792, No. 337.

Lively

The musical notation consists of four staves of music in G major (one sharp) and common time (C). The melody is written on a treble clef. The lyrics are printed below the notes.

'Wha is that at my bower-door?' 'O, wha is it but Find-lay.'

'Then gae your gate, ye'se nae be here:' 'In-deed, maun I,' quo' Findlay.

'What mak ye sae like a thief?' 'O, come and see,' quo' Find-lay; 'Be -

- fore the morn ye'll work mis-chief?' 'In-deed will I,' quo' Find-lay.

'WHA is that at my bower-door?'
 'O, wha is it but Findlay?'
 'Then gae your gate, ye'se nae be here:'
 'Indeed, maun I,' quo' Findlay.
 'What mak ye sae like a thief?'
 'O, come and see,' quo' Findlay;
 'Before the morn ye'll work mischief?'
 'Indeed will I,' quo' Findlay.

'Gif I rise and let you in'—
 'Let me in,' quo' Findlay—
 'Ye'll keep me waukin wi' your din?'
 'Indeed will I,' quo' Findlay.
 'In my bower if ye should stay'—
 'Let me stay,' quo' Findlay;
 'I fear ye'll bide till break o' day?'—
 'Indeed will I,' quo' Findlay.

'Here this night if ye remain'—
 'I'll remain,' quo' Findlay—
 'I dread ye'll learn the gate again?'—
 'Indeed will I,' quo' Findlay.
 'What may pass within this bower'—
 'Let it pass,' quo' Findlay;
 'Ye maun conceal till your last hour'—
 'Indeed will I,' quo' Findlay.

No. 185. *There's a youth in this city.*Tune : Niel Gow's lament. Scots Musical Museum, 1790, No. 258.Moderately

The musical score is written on a single treble clef staff in 6/8 time, with a key signature of one flat (B-flat). The melody is simple and rhythmic, with lyrics written below the notes. The score consists of six lines of music, each with a corresponding line of lyrics. The lyrics are: 'There's a youth in this ci - ty, it were a great pi - ty That he from our las - sies should wan - der a - wa ; For he's bon - ie and braw, weel - fa - vor'd, with - a'. An' his hair has a na - tu - ral buckle and a'. His coat is the hue o' his bon - net sae blue, His feck - et is white as the new - driv - en snaw, His hose they are blae, and his shoon like the slae, And his clear sil - ler buck - les, they daz - zle us a'.'

[THERE'S a youth in this city, it were a great pity
That he from our lasses should wander awa ;
For he's bonie and braw, weel-favor'd witha',
An' his hair has a natural buckle an' a'.]

His coat is the hue o' his bonnet sae blue,
His fecket is white as the new-driven snaw,
His hose they are blae, and his shoon like the slae,
And his clear siller buckles, they dazzle us a'.

For beauty and fortune the laddie's been courtin ;
Weel-featured, weel-tocher'd, weel-mounted, an' braw ;
But chiefly the siller that gars him gang till her,
The penny's the jewel that beautifies a' ;
There's Meg wi' the mailen, that fain wad a haen him,
And Susie, whase daddy was laird o' the ha' ;
There's lang-tocher'd Nancy maist fetters his fancy ;
But the laddie's dear sel he lo'es dearest of a'.

No. 187. Whare are you gaun, my bonie lass.

Tune : A waukrife minnie. Scots Musical Museum, 1790, No. 288.

'Whare are you gaun, my bon - ie lass, Whare are you gaun, my hin - ey?'

She answer'd me right sau - ci - lie, - 'An er - rand for my min - nie.'

'WHARE are you gaun, my bonie lass,
 Whare are you gaun, my hincey?'
 She answer'd me right saucilie, -
 'An errand for my minnie.'

'O, whare live ye, my bonie lass,
 O, whare live ye, my hincey?'
 'By yon burnside, gin ye maun ken,
 In a wee house wi' my minnie.'

But I foor up the glen at e'en
 To see my bonie lassie;
 And lang before the grey morn cam
 She was na hauf sae saucie.

O, wearie fa' the waukrife cock,
 And the fougart lay his crawin!
 He wauken'd the auld wife frae her sleep
 A wee blink or the dawin.

An angry wife I wat she raise,
 And o'er the bed she brocht her;
 And wi' a meikle hazel rung
 She made her a weel-pay'd dochter.

'O, fare-thee-weel, my bonie lass!
 O, fare-thee-weel, my hincey!
 Thou art a gay and a bonie lass,
 But thou hast a waukrife minnie!'

Brisk

My heart is a-breaking, dear Tittie, Some coun-sel un-to me come len': To an-ger them a' is a pi-ty, But what will I do wi' Tam Glen?

My heart is a-breaking, dear Tittie,
Some counsel unto me come len':

To anger them a' is a pity,
But what will I do wi' Tam Glen?

I'm thinking, wi' sic a brow fellow
In poortith I might mak a fen':
What care I in riches to wallow,
If I mauna marry Tam Glen?

There's Lowrie the Laird o' Dummeller;
'Guid day to you';—brute! he comes ben:
He brags and he blows o' his siller,
But when will he dance like Tam Glen?

My minnie does constantly deave me,
And bids me beware o' young men:
They flatter, she says, to deceive me:
But wha can think sae o' Tam Glen?

My daddie says, gin I'll forsake him,
He'd gie me guid hunder marks ten:
But if it's ordain'd I maun take him,
O, wha will I get but Tam Glen?

Yestreen at the valentines' dealing,
My heart to my mou' gied a sten,
For thrice I drew ane without failing,
And thrice it was written—'Tam Glen'!

The last Hallowe'en I was waukin
My droukit sark-sleeve, as ye ken;
His likeness came up the house staukin,
And the very grey breeks o' Tam Glen!

Come, counsel, dear Tittie, don't tarry!
I'll gie ye my bonny black hen,
Gif ye will advise me to marry
The lad I lo'e dearly—Tam Glen.

THEY snool me sair, and haud me down,
And gar me look like bluntie, Tam;
But three short years will soon wheel roun'—
And then comes ane-and-twenty, Tam!

A gleib o' lan', a claut o' gear
Was left me by my auntie, Tam:
At kith or kin I needna spier,
An I saw ane-and-twenty, Tam.

They'll hae me wed a wealthy coof,
Tho' I mysel hae plenty, Tam;
But hear'st thou, laddie! there's my loof;
I'm thine at ane-and-twenty, Tam!

No. 191. O, when she cam ben, she bobbed fu' law!

Tune : When she cam ben she bobbit. Scots Musical Museum, 1792, No. 353.

Moderate

The musical score is written on a single treble clef staff in a key signature of three flats (B-flat, E-flat, A-flat) and a 6/8 time signature. The tempo is marked 'Moderate'. The melody consists of three lines of music. The lyrics are written below the notes. The first line ends with a double bar line, and the second line ends with a repeat sign. The third line ends with a double bar line.

O, when she cam ben, she bob - bed fu' law! O, when she cam ben, she bob - bed fu' law! And when she cam ben, she kiss'd Cock - pen, And syne she de - ny'd she did it at a'.

[O, WHEN she cam ben, she bobbed fu' law!
 O, when she cam ben, she bobbed fu' law!
 And when she cam ben, she kiss'd Cockpen,
 And syne she deny'd she did it at a'.

And was na Cockpen right saucy witha'?
 And was na Cockpen right saucy witha'?]
 In leaving the dochter o' a lord,
 And kissin a collier lassie an' a'?

O, never look down, my lassie, at a'!
 O, never look down, my lassie, at a'!
 Thy lips are as sweet, and thy figure complete,
 As the finest dame in castle or ha'.

Tho' thou hast nae silk, and holland sae sma',
 Tho' thou hast nae silk, and holland sae sma',
 Thy coat and thy sark are thy ain handywark,
 And Lady Jean was never sae braw.

Tune: O ken ye what Meg. Scots Musical Museum, 1803, No. 566.
Moderately

O, ken ye what Meg o' the Mill has got-ten? An' ken ye what Meg o' the Mill has got-ten? A braw new naig wi' the tail o' a rot-tan, And that's what Meg o' the Mill has got-ten! O, ken ye what Meg o' the Mill lo'es dear-ly? An' ken ye what Meg o' the Mill lo'es dear-ly? A dram o' gude strunt in a morn-ing ear-ly, And that's what Meg o' the Mill lo'es dear-ly!

O, KEN ye what Meg o' the Mill has gotten?
An' ken ye what Meg o' the Mill has gotten?
A braw new naig wi' the tail o' a rottan,
And that's what Meg o' the Mill has gotten!

O, ken ye what Meg o' the Mill lo'es dearly?
An' ken ye what Meg o' the Mill lo'es dearly?
A dram o' gude strunt in a morning early,
And that's what Meg o' the Mill lo'es dearly!

O, ken you how Meg o' the Mill was married?
An' ken ye how Meg o' the Mill was married?
The priest he was oxt'er'd, the clark he was carried,
And that's how Meg o' the Mill was married!

O, ken ye how Meg o' the Mill was bedded?
 An' ken ye how Meg o' the Mill was bedded?
 The groom gat sae fu', he fell awald beside it,
 And that's how Meg o' the Mill was bedded!

 has gotten?*

(SECOND VERSION.)

Tune: O bonie lass, will ye lie in a barrack? Napier's Scots Songs, 1792, ii. p. 90.

O, ken ye what Meg o' the Mill has gotten? An' ken ye what Meg o' the Mill has got-ten? She's gotten a coof wi' a claut o' sil-ler, And bro-ken the heart o' the bar-ley mil-ler!

O, KEN ye what Meg o' the Mill has gotten?
 An' ken ye what Meg o' the Mill has gotten?
 She's gotten a coof wi' a claut o' siller,
 And broken the heart o' the barley miller!

The miller was strappin, the miller was ruddy,
 A heart like a lord, and a hue like a lady.
 The laird was a widdifu', bleerit knurl—
 She's left the gude fellow, and taen the churl!

The miller, he hecht her a heart leal and loving,
 The laird did address her wi' matter mair moving;
 A fine pacing horse wi' a clear, chainèd bridle,
 A whip by her side, and a bonie side-saddle.

O, wae on the siller, it is sae prevailin,
 And wae on the love that is fixed on a mailen!
 A tocher's nae word in a true lover's parl,
 But gie me my love and a gif for the war!

Last May a braw woo - er cam down the lang glen, And sair wi' his love he did deave me. I said there was nae-thing I hat - ed like men— The deuce gae wi' him to be - lieve me, be - lieve me— The deuce gae wi' him, to be - lieve me!

LAST May a braw wooer cam down the lang glen,
And sair wi' his love he did deave me.

I said there was naething I hated like men—
The deuce gae wi'm to believe me, believe me—
The deuce gae wi'm, to believe me!

He spak o' the darts in my bonie black een,
And vow'd for my love he was diein.

I said, he might die when he liket for Jean—
The Lord forgie me for liein, for liein—
The Lord forgie me for liein!

A weel-stockèt mailen, himsel for the laird,
And marriage aff-hand were his proffers;
I never loot on that I kenn'd it, or car'd,
But thought I might hae waur offers, waur offers—
But thought I might hae waur offers.

But what wad ye think?—in a fortnight or less—
The deil tak his taste to gae near her—
He up the lang loan to my black cousin, Bess,
Guess ye how, the jad! I could bear her, could bear her—
Guess ye how, the jad! I could bear her.

But a' the neist week, as I petted wi' care,
I gaed to the tryste o' Dalgarnock,
And wha but my fine fickle lover was there?
I glowr'd as I'd seen a warlock, a warlock,
I glowr'd as I'd seen a warlock.

But owre my left shouther I gae him a blink,
 Lest neibors might say I was saucy;
 My wooer he caper'd as he'd been in drink,
 And vow'd I was his dear lassie, dear lassie—
 And vow'd I was his dear lassie.

I spier'd for my cousin fu' couthy and sweet,
 Gin she had recover'd her hearin' ?
 And how her new shoon fit her auld, shachl'd feet?
 But heavens! how he fell a swearin, a swearin—
 But heavens! how he fell a swearin!

He beggèd, for gudesake, I wad be his wife,
 Or else I wad kill him wi' sorrow;
 So e'en to preserve the poor body in life,
 I think I maun wed him to-morrow, to-morrow—
 I think I maun wed him to-morrow.

 We clamb the hill thegither;
 And mony a cantie day, John,
 We've had wi' ane anither:
 Now we maun totter down, John,
 And hand in hand we'll go,
 And sleep thegither at the foot,
 John Anderson my jo!

No. 213. *Willie Wastle dwalt on Tweed.*Tune: Sic a wife as Willie had. Scots Musical Museum, 1792, No. 376.Moderate time

Wil - lie Was - tle dwalt on Tweed, The spot they ca'd it Lin-kum-dod-die; Wil - lie was a wabs-ter gude Could stoun a clue wi' o - ny bod - ie: He had a wife was dour and din, O, Tink - ler Maid - gie was her mit - her; Sic a wife as Wil - lie had, I wad - na gie a but - ton for her.

WILLIE Wastle dwalt on Tweed,
 The spot they ca'd it Linkumdoddie;
 Willie was a wabster gude
 Could stoun a clue wi' ony bodie:
 He had a wife was dour and din,
 O, Tinkler Maidgie was her mither;
 Sic a wife as Willie had,
 I wadna gie a button for her.

She has an e'e—she has but ane,—
 The cat has twa the very colour,
 Five rusty teeth, forbye a stump,
 A clapper tongue wad deave a miller;
 A whiskin beard about her mou',
 Her nose and chin they threaten ither:
 Sic a wife as Willie had,
 I wadna gie a button for her.

She's bow-hough'd, she's hem-shinn'd,
 Ae limp in leg a hand-breed shorter;
 She's twisted right, she's twisted left,
 To balance fair in ilka quarter:
 She has a hump upon her breast,
 The twin o' that upon her shouther:
 Sic a wife as Willie had,
 I wadna gie a button for her.

Auld baudrans by the ingle sits,
 An' wi' her loof her face a-washin;
 But Willie's wife is nae sae trig,
 She dights her grunzie wi' a hushion;
 Her walie nieves like midden-creels,
 Her face wad fyle the Logan Water:
 Sic a wife as Willie had,
 I wadna gie a button for her.

No. 214. There's sax eggs in the pan, gudeman.

Tune: O, an ye were dead gudman (see infra).

CHORUS. *O, an ye were dead, gudeman!
 A green turf on your head, gudeman!
 I wad bestow my widowhood
 Upon a rantin' Highlandman!*

THERE's sax eggs in the pan, gudeman,
 There's sax eggs in the pan, gudeman;
 There's ane to you, and twa to me,
 And three to our John Highlandman!

A sheep's head in the pot, gudeman,
 A sheep's head in the pot, gudeman,
 The flesh to him, the broo to me,
 An' the horns become your brow, gudeman!

Sing, round about the fire wi' a rung she ran,
 An' round about the fire wi' a rung she ran:—
 'Your horns shall tie you to the staw,
 An' I shall bang your hide, gudeman!'

No. 215. *I bought my wife a stane o' lint.*Tune: The weary pund o' tow. Scots Musical Museum, 1792, No. 350.*Slow*CHORUS. The wea-ry pund, the wea-ry pund, The wea-ry pund o' tow!Fine.I think my wife will end her life Be-fore she spin her tow.I bought my wife a stane o' lint As gude as e'er did grow, AndD. C.a' that she has made o' that, Is ae poor pund o' tow.

CHORUS. *The weary pund, the weary pund,
The weary pund o' tow!
I think my wife will end her life
Before she spin her tow.*

I BOUGHT my wife a stane o' lint
As gude as e'er did grow,
And a' that she has made o' that
Is ae poor pund o' tow.

There sat a bottle in a bole
Beyond the ingle low;
And ay she took the tither souk
To drouk the stourie tow.

Quoth I: 'For shame, ye dirty dame,
Gae spin your tap o' tow!'
She took the rock, and wi' a knock
She brak it o'er my pow.

At last her feet—I sang to see't!—
Gaed foremost o'er the knowe,
And or I wad anither jad,
I'll wallop in a tow.

No. 216. *The bairns gat out wi' an unco shout.*Tune: The deuks dang o'er my daddie. Scots Mus. Museum, 1792, No. 396.Merrily.

THE bairns gat out wi' an unco shout:—

'The deuks dang o'er my daddie, O!'

'The fien-ma-care,' quo' the feirie auld wife,

'He was but a paidlin body, O!

He paidles out, and he paidles in,

An' he paidles late and early, O!

This seven lang years I hae lien by his side,

An' he is but a fusionless carlie, O!'

'O, haud your tongue, my feirie auld wife,

'O, haud your tongue, now Nansie, O!

I've seen the day, and sae hae ye,

Ye wadna been sae donsie, O!

I've seen the day ye butter'd my brose,

And cuddl'd me late and early, O;

But downa-do's come o'er me now,

And, och, I find it sairly, O!'

No. 217. *Husband, husband, cease your strife.*Tune: My jo, Janet. Orpheus Caledonius, 1733, No. 36.Slow and pointed.

‘Hus - band, hus - band, cease your strife, Nor long - er id - ly rave, sir!
 Tho' I am your wed - ded wife, Yet I am not your slave, sir!’
 ‘One of two must still o - bey, Nan - cy, Nan - cy;
 Is it man or wo - man, say, My spouse Nan - cy?’

‘HUSBAND, husband, cease your strife, Nor longer idly rave, sir! Tho' I am your wedded wife, Yet I am not your slave, sir!’ ‘One of two must still obey, Nancy, Nancy; Is it man or woman, say, My spouse Nancy?’ ‘If 'tis still the lordly word, Service and obedience, I'll desert my sov'reign lord, And so good-bye, allegiance!’ ‘Sad will I be so bereft, Nancy, Nancy; Yet I'll try to make a shift, My spouse Nancy.’	‘My poor heart, then break it must, My last hour I am near it: When you lay me in the dust, Think, how you will bear it.’ ‘I will hope and trust in Heaven, Nancy, Nancy; Strength to bear it will be given, My spouse Nancy.’ ‘Well, sir; from the silent dead, Still I'll try to daunt you: Ever round your midnight bed Horrid sprites shall haunt you!’ ‘I'll wed another like my dear Nancy, Nancy; Then all hell will fly for fear, My spouse Nancy.’

No. 218. *I never saw a fairer.*Tune: My wife's a wanton wee thing (see No. 220).

CHORUS. *She is a winsome wee thing,
 She is a handsome wee thing,
 She is a lo'esome wee thing,
 This sweet wee wife c' mine!*

I NEVER saw a fairer,
 I never lo'ed a dearer,
 And neist my heart I'll wear her,
 For fear my jewel tine.

The world's wrack, we share o't,
 The warstle and the care o't,
 Wi' her I'll blythely bear it,
 And think my lot divine.

No. 219. O, that I had ne'er been married.

Tune: Crowdie. Scots Musical Museum, 1803, No. 593.

Slowly

O, that I had ne'er been mar-ried, I wad ne - ver had nae care!

Now I've got - ten wife an' weans, An' they cry 'crow - die' ev - er - mair.

CHORUS.—Ance crow-die, twice crow-die, Three times crow-die in a day; Gin

ye 'crow-die' on - ie mair, Ye'll crow-die a' my meal a-way.

[O, THAT I had ne'er been married,
 I wad never had nae care;
 Now I've gotten wife an' weans,
 An' they cry 'crowdie' evermair.

CHORUS. *Ance crowdie, twice crowdie,
 Three times crowdie in a day;
 Gin ye 'crowdie' onie mair,
 Ye'll crowdie a' my meal away.]*

Waefu' want and hunger fley me,
 Glow'rin by the hallan en':
 Sair I fecht them at the door,
 But ay I'm eerie they come ben.

No. 220. *She play'd the loon or she was married.*Tune: My wife's a wanton wee thing. Stewart's Reels, 1762, p. 30.

CHORUS. My wife's a wan - ton wee thing, My wife's a wan - ton wee thing, My wife's a wan - ton wee thing, She win - na be guid - ed by me. She play'd the loon or she was mar - ried, She play'd the loon or she was mar - ried, She play'd the loon or she was mar - ried, She'll do it a - gain or she die.

CHORUS. [*My wife's a wanton wee thing,
My wife's a wanton wee thing,
My wife's a wanton wee thing,
She winna be guided by me.*]

*She play'd the loon or she was married,
She play'd the loon or she was married,
She play'd the loon or she was married,
She'll do it again or she die.]*

*She sell'd her coat and she drank it,
She sell'd her coat and she drank it,
She row'd hersell in a blanket,—
She winna be guided by me.*

*She mind't na when I forbade her,
She mind't na when I forbade her,
I took a rung and I claw'd her,
And a braw gude bairn was she.*

No. 221. *On peace an' rest my mind was bent.*Tune : My wife she dang me. Scots Musical Museum, 1803, No. 532.

CHORUS. O, ay my wife she dang me, An' aft my wife she bang'd me! If ye gie a wo - man a' her will, Gude faith! she'll soon o'er - gang ye. Fine.

On peace an' rest my mind was bent, And, fool I was! I mar - ri - ed; But nev - er hon - est man's in - tent Sae curs - ed - ly mis - car - ried. D. C.

CHORUS. *O, ay my wife she dang me,
An' aft my wife she bang'd me!
If ye gie a woman a' her will,
Gude faith! she'll soon o'ergang ye.*

On peace an' rest my mind was bent,
And, fool I was! I married;
But never honest man's intent
Sae cursedly miscarried.

Some sairie comfort at the last,
When a' thir days are done, man;
My 'pains o' hell' on earth is past,
I'm sure o' bliss aboon, man.

No. 222. *I coft a stane o' haslock woo.*Tune: The cardin o't. Scots Musical Museum, 1796, No. 437.

I coft a stane o' has-lock woo, To mak a wab to John-ie o't; For John-ie is my only jo— I lo'e him best of on-ie yet! CHORUS. The card-in o't, the spin-nin o't, The warp-in o't, the win-nin o't; When il-ka ell cost me a groat, The tai-lor staw the lyn-in o't.

I COFT a stane o' haslock woo,
To mak a wab to Johnie o't;
For Johnie is my only jo—
I lo'e him best of onie yet!

CHORUS. The cardin o't, the spinnin o't,
The warpin o't, the winnin o't;
When ilka ell cost me a groat,
The tailor staw the lynin o't.

For tho' his locks be lyart gray,
And tho' his brow be beld aboon,
Yet I hae seen him on a day
The pride of a' the parishen.

No. 223. *The cooper o' Cuddie came here awa.*Tune: Bab at the bowster. Scots Musical Museum, 1796, No. 431.CHORUS. *We'll hide the coop-er be - hind the door, Ee - hint the door, be -- hint the door, We'll hide the coop-er be - hind the door, Andcov-er him un - der a mawn, O! CHORUS. *We'll hide the cooper behind the door,
 Behint the door, behint the door,
 We'll hide the cooper behind the door,
 And cover him under a mawn, O.*

THE cooper o' Cuddie came here awa,
 He ca'd the girrs out owre us a',
 An' our gudewife has gotten a ca',
 That's anger'd the silly gudeman, O.

He sought them out, he sought them in,
 Wi', 'Deil hae her!' and, 'Deil hae him!'
 But the body he was sae doited and blin',
 He wistna where he was gaun, O.

They cooper'd at e'en, they cooper'd at morn,
 Till our gudeman has gotten the scorn;
 On ilka brow she's planted a horn,
 And swears that there they sall stan', O!

No. 224. *Guid'e'en to you, kimmer.*Tune: We're a' noddin. Scots Musical Museum, 1803, No. 523.

The musical notation consists of three staves of music in G major (one sharp) and 2/4 time. The first staff begins with a treble clef and a key signature of one sharp (F#). The melody is written on a single line. The lyrics are: 'Guid - e'en to you, kim-mer, And how do you do?' 'Hic-cup,'

The second staff continues the melody. The lyrics are: quo' kim-mer, 'The bet - ter that I'm fou.' CHORUS. We're a' nod - din,

The third staff concludes the piece. The lyrics are: nid, nid, nod - din, We're a' nod - din at our house at hame!

'GUIDE'EN to you, kimmer,
And how do you do?'
'Hiccup,' quo' kimmer,
'The better that I'm fou.'

CHORUS. We're a' noddin, nid, nid, noddin,
We're a' noddin at our house at hame!

[Kate sits i' the neuk,
Suppin hen broo;
Deil tak Kate,
An she be na noddin too!]

'How's a' wi' you, kimmer,
And how do ye fare?'
'A pint o' the best o't,
And twa pints mair.'

'How's a' wi' you, kimmer,
And how do ye thrive?
How mony bairns hae ye?'
Quo' kimmer, 'I hae five.'

'Are they a' Johnie's?'
'Eh! atweel, na:
Twa o' them were gotten
When Johnny was awa!'

[Cats like milk,
And dogs like broo;
Lads like lasses weel,
And lasses lads too.]

No. 225. *There's cauld kail in Aberdeen.*Tune: Cauld kail. Scots Musical Museum, 1788, No. 162.Lively

There's cauld kail in A-ber-deen, And cas-tocks in Strath-bo-gie,

When il - ka lad maun hae his lass, Then fye, gie me my Cog-gie.

CHORUS. My Cog-gie, Sirs, My Cog-gie, Sirs, I can-not want my Cog - gie: Iwad - na gie my three-girr'd cap For e'er a quean on Bog - ie.

THERE'S cauld kail in Aberdeen,
And castocks in Strathbogie,
When ilka lad maun hae his lass,
Then fye, gie me my coggie.

CHORUS. *My coggie, Sirs, my coggie, Sirs,
I cannot want my coggie:
I wadna gie my three-girr'd cap,
For e'er a quean on Bogie.*

There's Johnie Smith has got a wife
That scrimps him o' his coggie,
If she were mine, upon my life
I wad douk her in a bogie.

No. 226. The deil cam fiddlin thro' the town.

Tune: The Hemp-dresser. Scots Musical Museum, 1792, No. 399.

Merrily

CHORUS.

THE deil cam fiddlin thro' the town,
And danc'd awa wi' the Exciseman,
And ilka wife cries:—'Auld Mahoun,
I wish you luck o' the prize, man!

CHORUS. *The deil's awa, the deil's awa,
The deil's awa wi' the Exciseman!
He's danc'd awa, he's danc'd awa,
He's danc'd awa wi' the Exciseman!*

'We'll mak our maut, and we'll brew our drink,
We'll laugh, sing, and rejoice, man,
And monie braw thanks to the meikle black deil,
That danc'd awa wi' the Exciseman.

'There's threesome reels, there's foursome reels,
There's hornpipes and strathspeys, man,
But the ae best dance e'er cam to the land,
Was The deil's awa wi' the Exciseman!'

How tut - ti, tai - ti, Hey tut - ti, tai - ti, Wha's fou now?

LANDLADY, count the lawin,
The day is near the dawin;
Ye're a' blind drunk, boys,
And I'm but jolly fou.

CHORUS. Hey tutti, taiti,
How tutti, taiti,
Hey tutti, taiti,
Wha's fou now?

Cog, and ye were ay fou,
Cog, and ye were ay fou,
I wad sit and sing to you,
If ye were ay fou!

Weel may we a' be!
Ill may we never see!
God bless the king
And the companie!

No. 228. *A' the lads o' Thornie-bank.*Tune: Ruffian's rant (see No. 239).

A' THE lads o' Thornie-bank,
When they gae to the shore o' Bucky,
They'll step in an' tak a pint
Wi' Lady Onlie, honest lucky.

CHORUS. Lady Onlie, honest lucky,
Brews guid ale at shore o' Bucky;
I wish her sale for her guid ale,
The best on a' the shore o' Bucky.

Her house sae bien, her curch sae clean—
I wat she is a dainty chuckie,
And cheery blinks the ingle-gleede
O' Lady Onlie, honest lucky!

No. 229. *I sing of a whistle.*Tune: The Whistle. Scots Musical Museum, 1792, No. 314.

ral lal lal lay, And long with this whistle all Scotland shall ring.

I SING of a whistle, a whistle of worth,
 I sing of a whistle, the pride of the North,
 Was brought to the court of our good Scottish king,
 And long with this whistle all Scotland shall ring.

CHORUS. Fal de ral lal lal lay
And long with this whistle all Scotland shall ring.

Old Loda, still rueing the arm of Fingal,
 The god of the bottle sends down from his hall—
 'This whistle's your challenge, to Scotland get o'er,
 And drink them to hell, sir, or ne'er see me more!'

Old poets have sung, and old chronicles tell,
 What champions ventur'd, what champions fell;
 The son of great Loda was conqueror still,
 And blew on the whistle their requiem shrill.

Till Robert, the lord of the Cairn and the Scaur,
 Unmatch'd at the bottle, unconquer'd in war,
 He drank his poor god-ship as deep as the sea:
 No tide of the Baltic e'er drunker than he.

Thus Robert, victorious, the trophy has gain'd ;
Which now in his house has for ages remain'd ;
Till three noble chieftains, and all of his blood,
The jovial contest again have renew'd.

Three joyous good fellows, with hearts clear of flaw ;
Craigdarroch, so famous for wit, worth, and law ;
And trusty Glenriddel, so skill'd in old coins ;
And gallant Sir Robert, deep-read in old wines.

Craigdarroch began, with a tongue smooth as oil,
Desiring Glenriddel to yield up the spoil ;
Or else he would muster the heads of the clan,
And once more, in claret, try which was the man.

'By the gods of the ancients!' Glenriddel replies,
'Before I surrender so glorious a prize,
I'll conjure the ghost of the great Rorie More,
And bumper his horn with him twenty times o'er.'

Sir Robert, a soldier, no speech would pretend,
But he ne'er turn'd his back on his foe, or his friend ;
Said, 'Toss down the whistle, the prize of the field,'
And, knee-deep in claret, he'd die ere he'd yield.

To the board of Glenriddel our heroes repair,
So noted for drowning of sorrow and care ;
But for wine and for welcome not more known to fame,
Than the sense, wit, and taste of a sweet lovely dame.

A Bard was selected to witness the fray,
And tell future ages the feats of the day ;
A Bard who detested all sadness and spleen,
And wish'd that Parnassus a vineyard had been.

The dinner being over, the claret they ply,
And ev'ry new cork is a new spring of joy ;
In the bands of old friendship and kindred so set,
And the bands grew the tighter the more they were wet.

Gay Pleasure ran riot as bumpers ran o'er ;
Bright Phœbus ne'er witness'd so joyous a core,
And vow'd that to leave them he was quite forlorn,
Till Cynthia hinted he'd see them next morn.

Six bottles apiece had well wore out the night,
When gallant Sir Robert, to finish the fight,
Turn'd o'er in one bumper a bottle of red,
And swore 'twas the way that their ancestor did.

Then worthy Glenriddel, so cautious and sage,
 No longer the warfare ungodly would wage;
 A high ruling-elder to wallow in wine!
 He left the foul business to folks less divine.

The gallant Sir Robert fought hard to the end;
 But who can with Fate and quart-bumpers contend?
 Though Fate said, 'A hero should perish in light:'
 So up rose bright Phœbus—and down fell the knight.

Next up rose our Bard, like a prophet in drink:—
 'Craigdarroch, thou'll soar when creation shall sink;
 But if thou would flourish immortal in rhyme,
 Come—one bottle more—and have at the sublime!

'Thy line, that have struggled for Freedom with Bruce,
 Shall heroes and patriots ever produce:
 So thine be the laurel, and mine be the bay;
 The field thou hast won, by yon bright god of day!'

No. 230. Ye sons of old Killie.

Tune: Over the water to Charlie (see infra).

YE sons of old Killie, assembled by Willie
 To follow the noble vocation,
 Your thrifty old mother has scarce such another
 To sit in that honorèd station.
 I've little to say, but only to pray,—
 As praying's the ton of your fashion—
 A prayer from the Muse you well may excuse—
 'Tis seldom her favourite passion:—

'Ye powers who preside o'er the wind and the tide,
 Who markèd each element's border,
 Who formèd this frame with beneficent aim,
 Whose sovereign statute is order:—
 Within this dear mansion may wayward Contention
 Or witherèd Envy ne'er enter;
 May secrecy round be the mystical bound
 And brotherly Love be the centre!'

No. 232. *Deluded swain, the pleasure.*Tune: The Collier's bonie lassie (see No. 44).

DELUDED SWAIN, the pleasure
The fickle fair can give thee
Is but a fairy treasure—
Thy hopes will soon deceive thee:

The billows on the ocean,
The breezes idly roaming,
The clouds' uncertain motion—
They are but types of woman.

Oh! art thou not ashamèd
To doat upon a feature?
If man thou wouldst be namèd,
Despise the silly creature!

Go, find an honest fellow;
Good claret set before thee.
Hold on till thou art mellow,
And then to bed in glory!

No. 233. Should auld acquaintance be forgot?

(Now first printed from a holograph of Burns in the Interleaved Museum, who states:—'The original and by much the best set of the words of this song is as follows.')

(Auld Lang Syne.)

Tune: Auld lang syne. Scots Musical Museum, 1796, No. 413.

Moderate time.

Should auld ac-quaint-ance be for-got, and nev - er brought to mind? Should auld ac-quaint-ance be for-got, And days o' lang syne?
CHORUS.
And for auld lang syne, my jo, For auld lang syne, We'll tak a cup o' kind-ness yet, For auld lang syne.

SHOULD auld acquaintance be forgot,
And never brought to mind?
Should auld acquaintance be forgot,
And days o' lang syne?

CHORUS. And for auld lang syne, my jo,
For auld lang syne,
We'll tak a cup o' kindness yet,
For auld lang syne.

And surely ye'll be your pint-stowp!
And surely I'll be mine!
And we'll tak a cup o' kindness yet,
For auld lang syne.

We twa hae run about the braes,
And pou'd the gowans fine;
But we've wander'd mony a weary foot
Sin auld lang syne.

We twa hae paidl'd i' the burn,
Frae mornin sun till dine;
But seas between us braid hae roar'd
Sin auld lang syne.

And there's a hand my trusty fiere!
And gie's a hand o' thine!
And we'll tak a right gude-willy waught,
For auld lang syne.

Three blyther hearts that lee-lang night
Ye wadna found in Christendie.

CHORUS. We are na fou, we're nae that fou,
But just a drappie in our e'e;
The cock may craw, the day may daw,
And ay we'll taste the barley bree.

Here are we met three merry boys,
Three merry boys I trow are we;
And monie a night we've merry been,
And monie mae we hope to be!

It is the moon, I ken her horn,
 That's blinkin in the lift sae hie :
 She shines sae bright to wyle us hame,
 But, by my sooth, she'll wait a wee !

Wha first shall rise to gang awa,
 A cuckold, coward loun is he !
 Wha first beside his chair shall fa',
 He is the king amang us three !

No. 236. No churchman am I for to rail and to write.

Tune : Come let us prepare (see infra).

No churchman am I for to rail and to write,
 No statesman nor soldier to plot or to fight,
 No sly man of business contriving a snare,
 For a big-belly'd bottle's the whole of my care.
 The peer I don't envy, I give him his bow ;
 I scorn not the peasant, tho' ever so low ;
 But a club of good fellows, like those that are here,
 And a bottle like this, are my glory and care.
 Here passes the squire on his brother—his horse,
 There centum per centum, the cit with his purse,
 But see you The Crown, how it waves in the air ?
 There a big-belly'd bottle still eases my care.
 The wife of my bosom, alas ! she did die ;
 For sweet consolation to church I did fly ;
 I found that old Solomon provèd it fair,
 That a big-belly'd bottle's a cure for all care.
 I once was persuaded a venture to make ;
 A letter inform'd me that all was to wreck ;
 But the pursy old landlord just waddlèd upstairs
 With a glorious bottle that ended my cares.
 'Life's cares they are comforts'—a maxim laid down
 By the bard, what d'ye call him ? that wore the black gown ;
 And faith I agree with th' old prig to a hair ;
 For a big-belly'd bottle's a heav'n of a care.

A STANZA ADDED IN A MASON LODGE.

Then fill up a bumper and make it o'erflow,
 And honours masonic prepare for to throw ;
 May every true brother of the compass and square
 Have a big-belly'd bottle, when harass'd with care !

IN comin by the brig o' Dye,
 At Darlet we a blink did tarry;
 As day was dawin in the sky,
 We drank a health to bonie Mary.

CHORUS. Theniel Menzies' bonie Mary,
Theniel Menzies' bonie Mary,
Charlie Grigor tint his plaidie,
Kissin Theniel's bonie Mary.

Her een sae bright, her brow sae white,
 Her haffet locks as brown 's a berry;
 And ay they dimpl't wi' a smile,
 The rosy cheeks o' bonie Mary.

We lap and danc'd the lee-lang day,
 Till piper lads were wae and weary;
 But Charlie gat the spring to pay,
 For kissin Theniel's bonie Mary.

 Bedim cauld Boreas' blast ;
 When hailstanes drive wi' bitter skyte,
 And infant frosts begin to bite,

 Ae night at e'en a merry core
 O' randie, gangrel bodies
 In Poosie Nansie's held the splore,
 To drink their orra duddies :
 Wi' quaffing and laughing
 They ranted an' they sang,
 Wi' jumping an' thumping,
 The vera girdle rang.

First, niest the fire, in auld red rags

 Just like an aumous dish :

Tune : Soldier's joy. [M^cGlashan's Scots Measures, 1781, p. 32.]

CHORUS.

I AM a son of Mars, who have been in many wars,
And show my cuts and scars wherever I come;
This here was for a wench, and that other in a trench
When welcoming the French at the sound of the drum.

CHORUS. Lal de daudle, &c.

My prenticeship I past, where my leader breath'd his last,
When the bloody die was cast on the heights of Abram :
And I servèd out my trade, when the gallant game was play'd,
And the Moro low was laid at the sound of the drum.

I lastly was with Curtis, among the floating batt'ries,
And there I left for witness an arm and a limb;
Yet let my country need me, with Elliot to head me,
I'd clatter on my stumps at the sound of a drum.

And now, tho' I must beg with a wooden arm and leg,
And many a tatter'd rag hanging over my bum,
I'm as happy with my wallet, my bottle, and my callet,
As when I us'd in scarlet to follow a drum.

What tho' with hoary locks I must stand the winter shocks,
 Beneath the woods and rocks oftentimes for a home!
 When the t'other bag I sell, and the t'other bottle tell,
 I could meet a troop of hell at the sound of a drum.

 No wonder I'm fond of a sodger laddie.

CHORUS. Sing, Lal de lal, &c.

The first of my loves was a swaggering blade ;
 To rattle the thundering drum was his trade ;
 His leg was so tight and his cheek was so ruddy,
 Transported I was with my sodger laddie.

But the godly old chaplain left him in the lurch ;
 The sword I forsook for the sake of the church ;
 He ventur'd the soul, and I riskèd the body ;
 'Twas then I proved false to my sodger laddie.

Full soon I grew sick of my sanctified sot ;
 The regiment at large for a husband I got ;
 From the gilded spontoon to the fife I was ready ;
 I askèd no more but a sodger laddie.

But the peace it reduc'd me to beg in despair,
 Till I met my old boy in a Cunningham fair ;
 His rags regimental they flutter'd so gaudy ;
 My heart it rejoic'd at a sodger laddie.

And now I have lived—I know not how long !
 And still I can join in a cup and a song ;
 But whilst with both hands I can hold the glass steady,
 Here 's to thee, my hero, my sodger laddie.

 But what will ye hae of a fool?

For drink I would venture my neck;
 A hizzie's the half of my craft;
 But what could ye other expect
 Of one that's avowedly daft?

I ance was tied up like a stirk
 For civilly swearing and quaffing;
 I ance was abus'd i' the kirk
 For towsing a lass i' my daffin.

Poor Andrew that tumbles for sport
 Let nabody name wi' a jeer:
 There's even, I'm tauld, i' the Court
 A tumbler ca'd the Premier.

Observ'd ye yon reverend lad
 Mak faces to tickle the mob;
 He rails at our mountebank squad,—
 It's rivalship just i' the job!

 For faith! I'm confoundedly dry;

 The poet did request
 To lowse his pack and wale a sang,
 A ballad o' the best ;
 He rising, rejoicing,
 Between his twa Debòrabs,
 Looks round him, an' found them
 Impatient for the chorus :—

AIR.

Tune: Jolly Mortals, fill your glasses. [Ritson's English Songs, 1783.]

See the smok - ing bowl be - fore us, Mark our jo - vial, rag - ged ring! Round and round take up the chor - us, And in rap - tures let us sing,—

SEE the smoking bowl before us,
Mark our jovial, ragged ring!
Round and round take up the chorus,
And in raptures let us sing,—

CHORUS. A fig for those by law protected!
Liberty's a glorious feast!
Courts for cowards were erected,
Churches built to please the priest!

What is title, what is treasure,
What is reputation's care?
If we lead a life of pleasure,
'Tis no matter how or where!

With the ready trick and fable
Round we wander all the day;
And at night, in barn or stable
Hug our doxies on the hay.

Does the train-attended carriage
Thro' the country lighter rove?
Does the sober bed of marriage
Witness brighter scenes of love?

Life is all a variorum,
We regard not how it goes;
Let them cant about decorum,
Who have character to lose.

Here's to budgets, bags, and wallets!
Here's to all the wandering train!
Here's our ragged brats and callets!
One and all, cry out,—'Amen'!

A fig for those by law protected!
Liberty's a glorious feast!
Courts for cowards were erected,
Churches built to please the priest!

No. 254. Amang the trees, where humming bees.

AMANG the trees, where humming bees
 At buds and flow'rs were hinging, O,
 Auld Caledon drew out her drone,
 And to her pipe was singing, O:
 'Twas pibroch, sang, strathspeys, and reels—
 She dir'l'd them aff fu' clearly, O,
 When there cam a yell o' foreign squeels,
 That dang her tapsalteerie, O!

Their capon craws and queer 'ha, ha's,'
 They made our lugs grow eerie, O;
 The hungry bike did scrape and fyke,
 Till we were wae and weary, O.
 But a royal ghaist, wha ance was cased
 A prisoner aughteen year awa,
 He fir'd a fiddler in the north,
 That dang them tapsalteerie, O!

No. 255. *Scots, wha hae wi' Wallace bled.*Tune: Hey, tutti taitie. Thomson's Scottish Airs, 1801.Boldly

Scots, wha hae wi' Wallace bled, Scots, wham Bruce has af - ten led,

Wel - come to your gor - y bed Or to vic - tor - ie!

Now's the day, and now's the hour: See the front o' bat - tle lour,

See approach proud Ed - ward's power— Chains and sla - ver - ie!

Scots, wha hae wi' WALLACE bled,
 Scots, wham BRUCE has aften led,
 Welcome to your gory bed
 Or to victorie!

Now's the day, and now's the hour:
 See the front o' battle lour,
 See approach proud Edward's power—
 Chains and slaverie!

Wha will be a traitor knave?
 Wha can fill a coward's grave?
 Wha sae base as be a slave?—
 Let him turn, and flee!

Wha for SCOTLAND's king and law
 FREEDOM's sword will strongly draw,
 Freeman stand or freeman fa',
 Let him follow me!

By Oppression's woes and pains,
 By your sons in servile chains,
 We will drain our dearest veins
 But they shall be free!

Lay the proud usurpers low!
 Tyrants fall in every foe!
 LIBERTY's in every blow!—
 Let us do, or die!

No. 256. *O, wha will to Saint Stephen's house.*Tune : Killicrankie. Scots Musical Museum, 1788, No. 102.Briskly

O, wha will to Saint Ste-phen's house, To do our er -
 - rands there, man? O, wha will to Saint Ste-phen's house O' th' merry lads of Ayr, man? Or, will ye send a man o' law? Or will ye send a sodg-er? Or him wha led o'er Scot-land a' The mei-kle Ur-sa Ma-jor?

O, WHA will to Saint Stephen's house,
 To do our errands there, man?
 O, wha will to Saint Stephen's house
 O' th' merry lads of Ayr, man?
 Or will ye send a man o' law?
 Or will ye send a sodger?
 Or him wha led o'er Scotland a'
 The meikle Ursa Major?

Come, will ye court a noble lord,
 Or buy a score o' lairds, man?
 For worth and honour pawn their word,
 Their vote shall be Glencaird's, man?
 Ane gies them coin, ane gies them wine,
 Anither gies them clatter;
 Annbank, wha guessed the ladies' taste,
 He gies a Fête Champêtre.

When Love and Beauty heard the news
The gay greenwoods amang, man ;
Where, gathering flowers and busking bowers,
They heard the blackbird's sang, man ;
A vow, they seal'd it with a kiss,
Sir Politics to fetter ;
As theirs alone, the patent bliss
To hold a Fête Champêtre.

Then mounted Mirth on glesome wing,
O'er hill and dale she flew, man ;
Ilk wimpling burn, ilk crÿstal spring,
Ilk glen and shaw she knew, man :
She summon'd every social sprite,
That sports by wood or water,
On th' bonie banks of Ayr to meet
And keep this Fête Champêtre.

Cauld Boreas wi' his boisterous crew
Were bound to stakes like kye, man ;
And Cynthia's car, o' silver fu',
Clamb up the starry sky, man :
Reflected beams dwell in the streams,
Or down the current shatter ;
The western breeze steals thro' the trees
To view this Fête Champêtre.

How many a robe sae gaily floats,
What sparkling jewels glance, man,
To Harmony's enchanting notes,
As moves the mazy dance, man !
The echoing wood, the winding flood
Like paradise did glitter,
When angels met at Adam's yett
To hold their Fête Champêtre.

When Politics came there to mix
And make his ether-stane, man !
He circled round the magic ground,
But entrance found he nane, man :
He blush'd for shame, he quat his name,
Forswore it every letter,
Wi' humble prayer to join and share
This festive Fête Champêtre.

meet the foe? Let me wander, Let me rove, Still my heart is with my love:
far a - way.

D. C. for Chorus.
Night - ly dreams and thoughts by day Are with him that's far a - way.

How can my poor heart be glad
When absent from my sailor lad?
How can I the thought forego—
He's on the seas to meet the foe?
Let me wander, let me rove,
Still my heart is with my love:
Nightly dreams and thoughts by day
Are with him that's far away.
On the seas and far away,
On stormy seas and far away;
Nightly dreams and thoughts by day
Are ay with him that's far away.

When in summer noon I faint,
As weary flocks around me pant,
Haply in this scorching sun
My sailor's thund'ring at his gun.
Bullets, spare my only joy!
Bullets, spare my darling boy!
Fate, do with me what you may,
Spare but him that's far away!
On the seas and far away,
On stormy seas and far away—
Fate, do with me what you may,
Spare but him that's far away!

At the starless, midnight hour,
 When winter rules with boundless power,
 As the storms the forest tear,
 And thunders rend the howling air,
 Listening to the doubling roar
 Surging on the rocky shore,
 All I can—I weep and pray
 For his weal that's far away.
 On the seas and far away,
 On stormy seas and far away,
 All I can—I weep and pray
 For his weal that's far away.

Peace, thy olive wand extend
 And bid wild War his ravage end;
 Man with brother Man to meet,
 And as brother kindly greet!
 Then may Heaven with prosperous gales
 Fill my sailor's welcome convey
 To my arms their charge convey
 My dear lad that's far away.
 On the seas and far away,
 On stormy seas and far away,
 To my arms their charge convey
 My dear lad that's far away!

No. 258. There was on a time.

Tune: Caledonian hunt's delight (see No. 123).

THERE was on a time, but old Time was then young,
 That brave Caledonia, the chief of her line,
 From some of your northern deities sprung,
 (Who knows not that brave Caledonia's divine?)
 From Tweed to the Orcades was her domain,
 To hunt, or to pasture, or do what she would:
 Her heav'nly relations there fixèd her reign,
 And pledged her their godheads to warrant it good.
 A lambkin in peace, but a lion in war,
 The pride of her kindred the heroine grew;
 Her grandsire, old Odin, triumphantly swore:—
 'Whoe'er shall provoke thee, th' encounter shall rue!'
 With tillage or pasture at times she would sport,
 To feed her fair flocks by her green rustling corn;
 But chiefly the woods were her fav'rite resort,
 Her darling amusement the hounds and the horn.

Long quiet she reign'd, till thitherward steers
 A flight of bold eagles from Adria's strand:
 Repeated, successive, for many long years,
 They darken'd the air, and they plunder'd the land.
 Their pounces were murder, and horror their cry;
 They'd conquer'd and ravag'd a world beside.
 She took to her hills, and her arrows let fly—
 The daring invaders, they fled or they died.

 The fell harpy-raven took wing from the north,
 The scourge of the seas, and the dread of the shore;
 The wild Scandinavian boar issued forth
 To wanton in carnage and wallow in gore:
 O'er countries and kingdoms their fury prevailed,
 No arts could appease them, no arms could repel;
 But brave Caledonia in vain they assail'd,
 As Largs well can witness, and Longcartie tell.

 The Cameleon-savage disturb'd her repose,
 With tumult, disquiet, rebellion, and strife;
 Provok'd beyond bearing, at last she arose,
 And robb'd him at once of his hopes and his life.
 The Anglian lion, the terror of France,
 Oft, prowling, ensanguin'd the Tweed's silver flood,
 But, taught by the bright Caledonian lance,
 He learn'd to fear in his own native wood.

 Thus bold, independent, unconquer'd, and free,
 Her bright course of glory for ever shall run,
 For brave Caledonia immortal must be,
 I'll prove it from Euclid as clear as the sun:—
 Rectangle-triangle, the figure we'll chuse;
 The upright is Chance, and old Time is the base,
 But brave Caledonia's the hypothenuse;
 Then, ergo, she'll match them, and match them always!

 The Nith shall run to Corsincon,
 The Criffel sink in Solway,
 Ere we permit a foreign foe

 But while we sing God save the King, } bis
 We'll ne'er forget the People! }

No. 260. *As I stood by yon roofless tower.*Tune: Cumnock Psalms. Scots Musical Museum, 1796, No. 405.

Recit.

As I stood by yon roof-less tow'r, Where the wa'-flow'r scents the dew - y air, Where the hou - let mourns in her i - vy bower, And tells the mid-night moon her care; A las -

- sie all a - lone was mak - ing her moan, La - ment - ing our lads be - yond the sea;—'In the bluid-y wars they fa', And our hon - or's gane an' a', And brok - en heart - ed we maun die.'

As I stood by yon roofless tower,
 Where the wa'-flow'r scents the dewy air,
 Where the houlet mourns in her ivy bower,
 And tells the midnight moon her care:

CHORUS. *A lassie all alone was making her moan,
 Lamenting our lads beyond the sea;—
 'In the bluidy wars they fa',
 And our honor's gane an' a',
 And broken hearted we maun die.'*

The winds were laid, the air was still,
 The stars they shot along the sky,
 The tod was howling on the hill,
 And the distant-echoing glens reply.

The burn, adown its hazelly path,
 Was rushing by the ruin'd wa',
 Hasting to join the sweeping Nith,
 Whase roarings seem'd to rise and fa'.

The cauld blae North was streaming forth
 Her lights, wi' hissin, eerie din:
 Athort the lift they start and shift,
 Like Fortune's favors, tint as win!

Now, looking over firth and fauld,
 Her horn the pale-fac'd Cynthia rear'd,
 When lo! in form of minstrel auld
 A stern and stalwart ghaist appear'd.

And frae his harp sic strains did flow,
 Might rous'd the slumb'ring dead to hear,
 But O, it was a tale of woe
 As ever met a Briton's ear!

He sang wi' joy his former day,
 He, weeping, wail'd his latter times:
 But what he said—it was nae play!—
 I winna ventur't in my rhymes.

 But he'll sair them as he sair'd the king—
 Turn tail and rin awa, Jamie!

The day he stude his country's friend,
 Or gied her faes a claw, Jamie,
 Or frae puir man a blessin wan,—
 That day the Duke ne'er saw, Jamie.

But wha is he, his country's boast?
 Like him there is na twa, Jamie!
 There's no a callant tents the kye,
 But kens o' Westerha', Jamie.

To end the wark, here's Whistlebirk!
 Lang may his whistle blaw, Jamie!—
 And Maxwell true, o' sterling blue,
 And we'll be Johnstone's a', Jamie.

No. 262. As I cam down the banks o' Nith.

(ANOTHER VERSION.)

Tune: The black watch (see No. 269).

As I cam down the banks o' Nith
 And by Glenriddell's ha, man,
 There I heard a piper play
Turncoat Whigs awa, man.

Drumlanrig's towers hae tint the powers
 That kept the lands in awe, man:
 The eagle's dead, and in his stead
 We're gotten a hoodie-craw, man.

The turncoat Duke his King forsook,
 When his back was at the wa, man:
 The rattan ran wi' a' his clan
 For fear the house should fa', man.

The lads about the banks o' Nith
 They trust his Grace for a', man:
 But he'll sair them as he sair't his king,
 Turn tail and rin awa', man.

 A-chasing the wild deer and following the roe—
 My heart's in the Highlands, wherever I go.*

FAREWELL to the Highlands, farewell to the North,
 The birthplace of valour, the country of worth;
 Wherever I wander, wherever I rove,
 The hills of the Highlands for ever I love.

Farewell to the mountains high cover'd with snow,
 Farewell to the straths and green vallies below,
 Farewell to the forests and wild-hanging woods,
 Farewell to the torrents and loud-pouring floods!

No. 264. *Fareweel to a' our Scottish fame.*Tune: A parcel of rogues in a nation. Scots Musical Museum, 1792, No. 378.

Andante

 mar - tial sto - ry! Now Sark rins ov - er Sol - way

FAREWHEEL to a' our Scottish fame,
 Fareweel our ancient glory;
 Fareweel even to the Scottish name,
 Sae fam'd in martial story!
 Now Sark rins over Solway sands,
 An' Tweed rins to the ocean,
 To mark where England's province stands—
 Such a parcel of rogues in a nation!

What force or guile could not subdue
 Thro' many warlike ages,
 Is wrought now by a coward few
 For hireling traitors' wages.
 The English steel we could disdain,
 Secure in valour's station:
 But English gold has been our bane—
 Such a parcel of rogues in a nation!

O, would, or I had seen the day
 That treason thus could sell us,
 My auld grey head had lien in clay
 Wi' Bruce and loyal Wallace!
 But pith and power, till my last hour
 I'll mak this declaration :—
 ' We're bought and sold for English gold'—
 Such a parcel of rogues in a nation !

No. 265. The Thames flows proudly to the sea.

Tune : Robie donna gorach. Scots Musical Museum, 1790, No. 257.

Slow

The Thames flows proud - ly to the sea, Where roy -
 - al ci - ties state - ly stand ; But sweet - er flows the Nith to me, Where Cum - mins ance had high com - mand.

THE Thames flows proudly to the sea,
 Where royal cities stately stand ;
 But sweeter flows the Nith to me,
 Where Cummins ance had high command.

When shall I see that honour'd land,
 That winding stream I love so dear !
 Must wayward Fortune's adverse hand
 For ever—ever keep me here ?

How lovely, Nith, thy fruitful vales,
 Where bounding hawthorns gaily bloom,
 And sweetly spread thy sloping dales,
 Where lambkins wanton thro' the broom !

Tho' wandering now must be my doom
 Far from thy bonie banks and braes,
 May there my latest hours consume
 Among the friends of early days !

No. 266. *When wild war's deadly blast was blawn.*Tune: The mill, mill O. Scots Musical Museum, 1790, No. 242.

When wild war's dead-ly blast was blawn, And gen-tle peace re - turn - ing, Wi' monie a sweet babe fa - ther - less And monie a wi - dow mourn-ing, I left the lines and tent -
 - ed field, Where lang I'd been a lod - ger, My hum - ble
 knap - sack a' my wealth, A poor and hon - est sod - ger.

WHEN wild war's deadly blast was blawn,
 And gentle peace returning,
 Wi' monie a sweet babe fatherless
 And monie a widow mourning,
 I left the lines and tented field,
 Where lang I'd been a lodger,
 My humble knapsack a' my wealth,
 A poor and honest sodger.

A leal, light heart was in my breast,
 My hand unstain'd wi' plunder;
 And for fair Scotia, hame again,
 I cheery on did wander:
 I thought upon the banks o' Coil,
 I thought upon my Nancy,
 And ay I mind't the witching smile
 That caught my youthful fancy.

At length I reach'd the bonie glen,
 Where early life I sported;
 I pass'd the mill and trysting thorn,
 Where Nancy aft I courted.

Wha spied I but my ain dear maid,
 Down by her mother's dwelling,
 And turn'd me round to hide the flood
 That in my een was swelling!

Wi' alter'd voice, quoth I:—'Sweet lass,
 Sweet as yon hawthorn's blossom,
 O, happy, happy may he be,
 That's dearest to thy bosom!
 My purse is light, I've far to gang,
 And fain wad be thy lodger;
 I've served my king and country lang—
 Take pity on a sodger.'

Sae wistfully she gazed on me,
 And lovelier was than ever:
 Quo' she:—'A sodger ance I lo'ed,
 Forget him shall I never:
 Our humble cot, and hamely fare,
 Ye freely shall partake it;
 That gallant badge—the dear cockade—
 Ye're welcome for the sake o't.'

She gaz'd, she redden'd like a rose,
 Syne, pale like onie lily,
 She sank within my arms, and cried:—
 'Art thou my ain dear Willie?'
 'By Him who made yon sun and sky,
 By whom true love's regarded,
 I am the man! and thus may still True lovers be rewarded!

'The wars are o'er, and I'm come hame
 And find thee still true-hearted;
 Tho' poor in gear, we're rich in love,
 And mair, we'se ne'er be parted.'
 Quo' she:—'My grandsire left me gowd,
 A mailen plenish'd fairly;
 And come, my faithfu' sodger lad,
 Thou'rt welcome to it dearly!'

For gold the merchant ploughs the main,
 The farmer ploughs the manor;
 But glory is the sodger's prize,
 The sodger's wealth is honor:
 The brave poor sodger ne'er despise,
 Nor count him as a stranger;
 Remember he's his country's stay
 In day and hour of danger.

No. 267. *There was five carlins in the South.*Tune : Chevy chase. M^cGibbon's Scots Tunes, 1768, iv. p. 108 (adapted).

There was five car - lins in the South, They fell up - on a scheme
To send a lad to Lon-don Town To bring them ti - dings hame.

THERE was five carlins in the South,
They fell upon a scheme
To send a lad to London Town
To bring them tidings hame :

Not only bring them tidings hame,
But do their errands there ;
And aiblins gowd and honor baith
Might be that laddie's share.

There was Maggie by the banks o' Nith,
A dame wi' pride eneugh ;
And Marjory o' the monie Lochs,
A carlin auld and tough :

And Blinkin Bess of Annandale,
That dwelt near Solway-side ;
And Whisky Jean, that took her gill
In Galloway sae wide ;

And Black Joàn frae Crichton Peel,
O' gipsy kith an' kin—
Five wighter carlins were na found
The South countrie within.

To send a lad to London Town
They met upon a day ;
And monie a knight and monie a laird
This errand fain wad gae.

O, monie a knight and monie a laird
This errand fain wad gae ;
But nae ane could their fancy
please,
O, ne'er a ane but twae.

The first ane was a belted knight,
Bred of a Border band ;
And he wad gae to London Town,
Might nae man him withstand ;

And he wad do their errands weel,
And meikle he wad say ;
And ilka ane at London court
Wad bid to him gude-day.

Then neist cam in, a soger boy,
And spak wi' modest grace ;
And he wad gae to London Town,
If sae their pleasure was.

He wadna hecht them courtly gifts,
Nor meikle speech pretend ;
But he wad hecht an honest heart
Wad ne'er desert his friend.

Now, wham to chuse and wham refuse
At strife thir carlins fell ;
For some had gentlefolks to please,
And some wad please themsel.

Then out spak mim-mou'd Meg o' Nith,
And she spak up wi' pride,
And she wad send the Soger lad,
Whatever might betide.

For the auld gudeman o' London court
She didna care a pin ;
But she wad send the Soger lad
To greet his eldest son.

Then up sprang Bess o' Annandale,
And a deadly aith she 's ta'en,
That she wad vote the Border knight,
Tho' she should vote her lane.

'For far-off fowls hae feathers fair,
And fools o' change are fain;
But I hae tried the Border knight,
And I'll try him yet again.

Then Whisky Jean spak owre her drink :

'Ye weel ken, kimmers a',
The auld gudeman o' London court,
His back 's been at the wa' :

'And monie a friend that kiss'd his caup
Is now a fremit wight ;
But it 's ne'er be sae wi' Whisky
Jean—
I'll send the Border knight.'

Says Black Joàn frae Crichton Peel,
A carlin stoor and grim :—

'The auld gudeman, or the young gudeman,
For me may sink or swim ;

'For fools will prate o' right or wrang,
While knaves laugh them to scorn ;
But the Soger's friends hae blawn
the best,
So he shall bear the horn.'

Then slow raise Marjory o' the Lochs,
And wrinkled was her brow,
Her ancient weed was russet grey,
Her auld Scots bluid was true ;—

'There 's some great folk set light by me,
I set as light by them ;—
But I will send to London Town
Wham I like best at home.'

Sae how this sturt and strife may end,
Nae mortal wight can tell :
God grant the king, and ilka man,
May look weel to himsel !

Tune : Robin Adair (see No. 45).

You'RE welcome to despots, Dumourier ;

You're welcome to despots, Dumourier ;

How does Dampiere do ?

Ay, and Bournonville too ?

Why did they not come along with you, Dumourier ?

I will fight France with you, Dumourier ;

I will fight France with you, Dumourier ;

I will fight France with you,

I will take my chance with you,

By my soul, I'll dance with you, Dumourier !

Then let us fight about, Dumourier ;

Then let us fight about, Dumourier ;

Then let us fight about,

Till Freedom's spark be out,

Then we'll be damn'd, no doubt, Dumourier.

No. 269. *When Guilford good our pilot stood.*Tune: The black watch. McGlashan's Strathspey Reels, 1780, p. 6.

The musical score is written on four staves in G major (one sharp) and common time (C). It features a melody with a 'tr' (trill) marking above the first staff and the fourth staff. The lyrics are printed below the notes.

When Guilford good our pi - lot stood, An' did our hel-lim thraw, man, Ae night, at tea, be - gan a plea, With - in A - mer - i - ca, man; Then up they gat the mask-in-pat, And in the sea did jaw, man; An' did nae less, in full Con - gress, Than quite re - fuse our law, man.

WHEN Guilford good our pilot stood,
 An' did our hellim thraw, man,
 Ae night, at tea, began a plea,
 Within America, man:
 Then up they gat the maskin-pat,
 And in the sea did jaw, man;
 An' did nae less, in full Congress,
 Than quite refuse our law, man.

Then thro' the lakes Montgomery takes,
 I wat he wasna slaw, man;
 Down Lowrie's burn he took a turn,
 And Carleton did ca', man:
 But yet, whatreck, he at Quebec,
 Montgomery-like did fa', man:
 Wi' sword in hand, before his band,
 Amang his en'mies, a', man.

Poor Tammy Gage within a cage
 Was kept at Boston-ha', man;
 Till Willie Howe took o'er the knowe
 For Philadelphia, man:
 Wi' sword an' gun he thought a sin
 Guid Christian bluid to draw, man;
 But at New York, wi' knife an' fork,
 Sir-Loin he hackèd sma', man.

Burgoyne gaed up, like spur an' whip,
 Till Fraser brave did fa', man;
 Then lost his way, ae misty day,
 In Saratoga shaw, man.
 Cornwallis fought as lang's he dought,
 An' did the buckskins claw, man;
 But Clinton's glaive frae rust to save,
 He hung it to the wa', man.
 Then Montague, and Guilford too,
 Began to fear a fa', man;
 And Sackville doure, wha stood the stoure,
 The German chief to thraw, man:
 For Paddy Burke, like onie Turk,
 Nae mercy had at a', man;
 An' Charlie Fox threw by the box,
 An' lows'd his tinkler jaw, man.
 Then Rockingham took up the game,
 Till death did on him ca', man;
 When Shelburne meek held up his cheek,
 Conform to gospel law, man;
 Saint Stephen's boys, wi' jarring noise,
 They did his measures thraw, man;
 For North an' Fox united stocks,
 An' bore him to the wa', man.
 Then clubs an' hearts were Charlie's cartes;
 He swept the stakes awa', man,
 Till the diamond's ace, of Indian race,
 Led him a sair faux pas, man;
 The Saxon lads, wi' loud placads,
 On Chatham's boy did ca', man;
 An' Scotland drew her pipe an' blew:
 'Up, Willie, waur them a', man!'

Behind the throne then Granville's gone,
 A secret word or twa, man;
 While slee Dundas arous'd the class
 Be-north the Roman wa', man:
 And Chatham's wraith, in heav'nly graith
 (Inspirèd bardies saw, man),
 Wi' kindling eyes cried, 'Willie, rise!
 Would I hae fear'd them a', man?'

But, word an' blow, North, Fox, and Co.
 Gowff'd Willie like a ba', man,
 Till Suthron raise, an' coost their claes
 Behind him in a raw, man;
 An' Caledon threw by the drone,
 An' did her whittle draw, man;
 An' swoor fu' rude, thro' dirt and bluid,
 To make it guid in law, man.

No. 270. *Fy, let us a' to Kirkcudbright.*Tune: Fy, let us a' to the bridal. Orpheus Caledonius, 1725, No. 36.

Briskly

Fy, let us a' to Kirkcudbright, For there will be bick-er-in there; For Murray's light horse are to mus-ter, An' O, how the he-roses will swear! And there will be Mur-ray, com-man-der, An' Gordon the bat-tle to win; Like brothers they'll stan' by each o-ther, Sae knit in al-li-ance and kin.

Fy, let us a' to Kirkcudbright,
For there will be bickerin there;
For Murray's light horse are to muster,
An' O, how the heroes will swear!
And there will be Murray, commander,
An' Gordon the battle to win;
Like brothers they'll stan' by each other,
Sae knit in alliance and kin.

And there will be black-nebbit Johnie,
The tongue o' the trump to them a':
An' he get na Hell for his haddin,
The deil gets nae justice awa!
And there will be Kempleton's birkie,
A boy no sae black at the bane;
But as to his fine nabob fortune,—
We'll e'en let the subject alone!

And there will be Wigton's new Sheriff;
Dame Justice fu' brawly has sped;
She's gotten the heart of a Bushby,
But Lord! what's become o' the head?
And there will be Cardoness, Esquire,
Sae mighty in Cardoness' eyes;
A wight that will weather damnation,
For the devil the prey would despise.

And there will be Douglasses doughty,
 New christening towns far and near;
 Abjuring their democrat doings
 By kissing the doup of a Peer:
 And there will be folk frae Saint Mary's,
 A house o' great merit and note;
 The deil ane but honors them highly—
 The deil ane will gie them his vote!

And there will be Kenmure sae gen'rous
 Whose honor is proof to the storm,
 To save them from stark reprobation,
 He lent them his name in the firm:
 And there will be lads o' the gospel:
 Muirhead, wha's as gude as he's true;
 And there will be Buittle's apostle,
 Wha's mair o' the black than the blue!

And there will be Logan's McDowall,— Sculdudd'ry an' he will be there,
 An' also the Wild Scot o' Galloway,
 Sogering, gunpowder Blair!
 But we winna mention Redcastle,
 The body—e'en let him escape!
 He'd venture the gallows for siller,
 An 'twere na the cost o' the rape!

But where is the Doggerbank hero,
 That made 'Hogan-Mogan' to Skulk?
 Poor Keith's gane to hell to be fuel,
 The auld rotten wreck of a hulk.
 And where is our King's Lord Lieutenant,
 Sae fam'd for his gratefu' return?
 The birkie is gettin' his Questions
 To say in St. Stephen's the morn!

But mark ye there's trusty Kerroughtree,
 Whose honor was ever his law;
 If the virtues were pack'd in a parcel,
 His worth might be sample for a';
 And strang an' respectfu' his backing,
 The maist o' the lairds wi' him stand;
 Nae gipsy-like nominal barons
 Whase property's paper—not land.

And there frae the Niddisdale borders,
 The Maxwells will gather in droves,
 Tough Jockie, staunch Geordie an' Wattie,
 That girns for the fishes and loaves;

And there will be Heron, the Major
 Wha'll ne'er be forgot in the Greys :
 Our flatt'ry we'll keep for some other :
 Him only its justice to praise !

And there will be maiden Kilkerran,
 An' also Barskimming's gude Knight ;
 And there will be roarin Birtwhistle,
 Yet luckily roars in the right !

And there'll be Stamp Office Johnnie
 (Tak tent how ye purchase a dram).

And there will be gay Cassencarry
 And there'll be gleg Colonel Tam.

And there'll be wealthy young Richard,
 Dame Fortune should hing by the neck :
 For prodigal, thriftless bestowing—
 His merit had won him respect.

And there will be rich brother Nabobs,
 (Tho' nabobs, yet men not the first),
 And there will be Collieston's whiskers,
 An' Quinton—o' lads no the worst !

Then hey! the chaste interest o' Broughton,
 And hey! for the blessings 'twill bring ;
 It may send Balmaghie to the Commons—
 In Sodom 'twould make him a king ;
 An' hey! for the sanctified Murray,
 Our land wha wi' chapels has stor'd ;
 He founder'd his horse among harlots,
 But gied the auld naig to the Lord !

No. 271. O Logan, sweetly didst thou glide.

Tune: Logan Water. Orpheus Caledonius, 1733, No. 23.

Slow

O Lo - gan, sweet - ly didst thou glide That day I was my Wil - lie's bride, And years sin - syne hae o'er us run Like Lo - gan to the sim - mer sun :

But now thy flow - ery banks ap - pear Like drum - lie Win - ter, dark and drear, While my dear lad maun face his faes Far, far frae me and Lo - gan braes.

O LOGAN, sweetly didst thou glide
 That day I was my Willie's bride,
 And years sinsyne hae o'er us run
 Like Logan to the simmer sun:
 But now thy flowery banks appear
 Like drumlie Winter, dark and drear,
 While my dear lad maun face his faes
 Far, far frae me and Logan braes.

Again the merry month of May
 Has made our hills and vallies gay;
 The birds rejoice in leafy bowers,
 The bees hum round the breathing flowers;
 Blythe morning lifts his rosy eye,
 And evening's tears are tears o' joy:
 My soul delightless a' surveys,
 While Willie's far frae Logan braes.

Within yon milk-white hawthorn bush,
 Amang her nestlings sits the thrush;
 Her faithfu' mate will share her toil,
 Or wi' his song her cares beguile:
 But I wi' my sweet nurslings here,
 Nae mate to help, nae mate to cheer,
 Pass widow'd nights and joyless days,
 While Willie's far frae Logan braes.

O, wae upon you, Men o' State,
 That brethren rouse in deadly hate!
 As ye make monie a fond heart mourn,
 Sae may it on your heads return!
 Ye mindna 'mid your cruel joys
 The widow's tears, the orphan's cries,
 But soon may peace bring happy days,
 And Willie hame to Logan braes!

No. 272. *Farewell, thou fair day.*Tune : Oran an aoig. Scots Musical Museum, 1792, No. 385.Very slow

Fare-well, thou fair day, thou green earth, and ye skies, Now gay with the broad set - ting sun; Fare - well, loves and friend-ships, ye dear ten - der ties—Our race of ex - ist - ence is run!
Thou grim King of Ter - rors! thou life's gloomy foe, Go, fright - en the co - ward and slave! Go, teach them to trem - ble, fell ty - rant! but know, No ter - rors hast thou to the brave!

FAREWELL, thou fair day, thou green earth, and ye skies,
Now gay with the broad setting sun;
Farewell, loves and friendships, ye dear tender ties—
Our race of existence is run!
Thou grim King of Terrors! thou life's gloomy foe,
Go, frighten the coward and slave!
Go, teach them to tremble, fell tyrant! but know,
No terrors hast thou to the brave!

Thou strik'st the dull peasant—he sinks in the dark,
Nor saves e'en the wreck of a name!
Thou strik'st the young hero—a glorious mark;
He falls in the blaze of his fame!
In the field of proud honor—our swords in our hands,
Our king and our country to save,
While victory shines on life's last ebbing sands,
O, who would not die with the brave!

No. 273. Wha will buy my troggin?

(The Trogger.)

Tune: Buy broom besoms. Northumbrian Minstrelsy, p. 118.

Wha will buy my troggin, fine e - lec - tion ware, Brok - en trade

o' Broughton, a' in high re - pair? Buy braw trog - gin frae the banks o' Dee; Wha wants trog - gin let him come to me.

Wha will buy my troggin, fine election ware,
Broken trade o' Broughton, a' in high repair?

CHORUS. Buy braw troggin frae the banks o' Dee;
Wha wants troggin let him come to me.

There's a noble Earl's fame and high renown,
For an auld sang—it's thought the gudes were stown—
Here's the worth o' Broughton in a needle's e'e.
Here's a reputation tint by Balmaghie.

Here's its stuff and lining, Cardoness's head—
Fine for a soger, a' the wale o' lead.

Here's a little wadset,—Buittles scrap o' truth,
Pawn'd in a gin-shop, quenching holy drouth.

Here's an honest conscience might a prince adorn,
Frae the downs o' Tinwald—so was never worn!

Here's armorial bearings frae the manse o' Urr:
The crest, a sour crab-apple rotten at the core.

Here is Satan's picture, like a blizzard gled
Pouncing poor Redcastle, sprawlin like a taed.

Here's the font where Douglas stane and mortar names,
Lately used at Caily christening Murray's crimes.

Here's the worth and wisdom Collieston can boast;
By a thievish midge they had been nearly lost.

Here is Murray's fragments o' the ten commands,
Gifted by black Jock to get them aff his hands.

Saw ye e'er sic troggin? if to buy ye're slack,
Hornie's turnin chapman—he'll buy a' the pack!

No. 274. 'Twas in the seventeen hunder year.

Tune : The children in the wood. Chappell's Popular Music, p. 201.

'Twas in the seven-teen hun - der year O' grace, and nine-ty five,

That year I was the wae'est man Of on - ie man a - live.

'Twas in the seventeen hunder year
O' grace, and ninety-five,
That year I was the wae'est man
Of onie man alive.

In March the three-an'-twentieth morn,
The sun rase clear an' bright ;
But O ! I was a wae'fu' man,
Ere to-fa' o' the night.

Yerl Galloway lang did rule this land
Wi' equal right and fame,
And thereto was his kinsman join'd
The Murray's noble name.

Yerl Galloway's man o' men was I,
And chief o' Broughton's host ;
So twa blind beggars, on a string,
The faithfu' tyke will trust.

But now Yerl Galloway's sceptre's broke,
And Broughton's wi' the slain,
And I my ancient craft may try,
Sin' honesty is gane.

'Twas by the banks o' bonie Dee,
Beside Kirkcudbright's towers,
The Stewart and the Murray there
Did muster a' their powers.

Then Murray on the auld grey yaud,
Wi' wingèd spurs did ride :
That auld grey yaud a' Nidsdale
rade,
He staw upon Nidside.

An' there had na been the Yerl
himsel,
O, there had been nae play ;
But Garlies was to London gane,
And sae the kye might stray.

And there was Balmaghie, I ween—
In front rank he wad shine ;
But Balmaghie had better been Drinkin Madeira wine.

And frae Glenkens cam to our aid
A chief o' doughty deed :
In case that worth should wanted be,
O' Kenmure we had need.

And by our banners march'd Muir-
head,
And Buittle was na slack,
Whase haly priesthood nane could stain,
For wha could dye the black ?

And there was grave Squire Cardoness,
Look'd on till a' was done ;
Sae in the tower o' Cardoness
A howlet sits at noon.

And there led I the Bushby clan :
My gamesome billie, Will,
And my son Maitland, wise as brave,
My footsteps follow'd still.

The Douglas and the Heron's name,
We set nought to their score ;
The Douglas and the Heron's name,
Had felt our weight before.

But Douglasses o' weight had we: The pair o' lusty lairds, For building cot-houses sae fam'd, And christenin kail-yards. And then Redcastle drew his sword That ne'er was stain'd wi' gore	Save on a wand'rer lame and blind, To drive him frae his door. And last cam creepin Collieston, Was mair in fear than wrath; Ae knave was constant in his mind— To keep that knave frae scaith.

No. 275. Wham will we send to London town.

Tune : For a' that (see No. 252).

WHAM will we send to London town,
 To Parliament and a' that?
 Or wha in a' the country round
 The best deserves to fa' that?
 For a' that, and a' that,
 Thro' Galloway and a' that,
 Where is the Laird or belted Knight
 That best deserves to fa' that?

Wha sees Kerroughtree's open yett,
 (And wha is't never saw that?)
 Wha ever wi' Kerroughtree met,
 And has a doubt of a' that?
 For a' that, and a' that!
 Here's Heron yet for a' that!
 The independent patriot,
 The honest man, and a' that!

Tho' wit and worth, in either sex,
 Saint Mary's Isle can shaw that,
 Wi' Dukes and Lords let Selkirk
 mix,
 And weel does Selkirk fa' that.
 For a' that, and a' that,
 Here's Heron yet for a' that!
 The independent commoner
 Shall be the man for a' that.

But why should we to Nobles jouk,
 And is't against the law, that?
 For why, a Lord may be a gowk,
 Wi' ribban, star, and a' that.
 For a' that, and a' that,
 Here's Heron yet for a' that!
 A Lord may be a lousy loun
 Wi' ribban, star, and a' that.

A beardless boy comes o'er the hills
 Wi' s uncle's purse and a' that;
 But we'll hae ane frae 'mang oursel's,
 A man we ken, and a' that.
 For a' that, and a' that,
 Here's Heron yet for a' that!
 For we're na to be bought and sold,
 Like naigs, and nowte, and a'
 that.

Then let us drink:—'the Stewartry,
 Kerroughtree's laird, and a' that,
 Our representative to be';
 For weel he's worthy a' that!
 For a' that, and a' that,
 Here's Heron yet for a' that!
 A House of Commons such as he,
 They wad be blest that saw that.

No. 276. *Dire was the hate at old Harlaw.*Tune: The Dragon of Wantley. Durfey's Pills, 1719, iii. p. 10.Spirited

Dire was the hate at old Har-law, That Scot to Scot did car-ry;
 And dire the dis-cord Langside saw For beauteous, hap-less Ma-ry: But Scot to Scot ne'er met so hot, Or were more in fu-ry seen, sir, Than 'twixt
 Hal and Bob for the fa-mous job, Who should be the Faculty's Dean, sir.

DIRE was the hate at old Harlaw,
 That Scot to Scot did carry;
 And dire the discord Langside saw
 For beauteous, hapless Mary:
 But Scot to Scot ne'er met so hot,
 Or were more in fury seen, sir,
 Than 'twixt Hal and Bob for the famous job,
 Who should be the Faculty's Dean,
 sir.

This Hal, for genius, wit, and lore,
 Among the first was number'd;
 But pious Bob, 'mid learning's store
 Commandment the tenth remember'd:

Yet simple Bob the victory got,
 And won his heart's desire,
 Which shows that Heaven can boil
 the pot,
 Tho' the deil piss in the fire.

Squire Hal, besides, had in this case
 Pretensions rather brassy;
 For talents, to deserve a place,
 Are qualifications saucy.

So their worships of the Faculty,
 Quite sick of merit's rudeness,
 Chose one who should owe it all,
 d'ye see,
 To their gratis grace and goodness.

As once on Pisgah purg'd was the sight
 Of a son of Circumcision,
 So, may be, on this Pisgah height
 Bob's purblind mental vision;—
 Nay, Bobby's mouth may be open'd yet,
 Till for eloquence you hail him,
 And swear that he has the Angel met
 That met the ass of Balaam.

In your heretic sins may ye live and die,
 Ye heretic eight-and-thirty!
 But accept, ye sublime majority,
 My congratulations hearty!
 With your honors, as with a certain
 King,
 In your servants this is striking,
 The more incapacity they bring,
 The more they're to your liking.

 There's somebody there we'll teach better behaviour—
 Hey, brave Johnie lad, cock up your beaver!

No. 279. *Now Nature hangs her mantle green.*Tune : Mary Queen of Scots lament. Scots Musical Museum, 1796, No. 404.

Slow

Now Na - ture hangs her. man - tle green On eve - ry bloom - ing tree,

tr

And spreads her sheets o' dai - sies white Out o'er the grassy lea.

Now Nature hangs her mantle green
On every blooming tree,
And spreads her sheets o' daisies white
Out o'er the grassy lea :
Now Phœbus cheers the crystal streams,
And glads the azure skies ;
But nought can glad the weary wight
That fast in durance lies.

Now laverocks wake the merry morn,
Aloft on dewy wing ;
The merle, in his noontide bow'r,
Makes woodland echoes ring ;
The mavis wild wi' monie a note
Sings drowsy day to rest :
In love and freedom they rejoice,
Wi' care nor thrall opprest.

Now blooms the lily by the bank,
The primrose down the brae ;
The hawthorn's budding in the glen,
And milk-white is the slae :
The meanest hind in fair Scotland
May rove their sweets amang ;
But I, the Queen of a' Scotland,
Maun lie in prison strang.

I was the Queen o' bonie France,
Where happy I hae been ;
Fu' lightly rase I in the morn,
As blythe lay down at e'en :
And I'm the sov'reign of Scotland,
And monie a traitor there ;

Yet here I lie in foreign bands,
And never-ending care.

But as for thee, thou false woman,
My sister and my fae,
Grim Vengeance yet shall whet a sword
That thro' thy soul shall gae !
The weeping blood in woman's breast
Was never known to thee ;
Nor the balm that draps on wounds of woe
Frae woman's pitying e'e.

My son ! my son ! may kinder stars
Upon thy fortune shine ;
And may those pleasures gild thy reign,
That ne'er wad blink on mine !
God keep thee frae thy mother's fays,
Or turn their hearts to thee :
And where thou meet'st thy mother's friend,
Remember him for me !

O ! soon, to me, may Summer's suns
Nae mair light up the morn !
Nae mair to me the Autumn winds
Wave o'er the yellow corn !
And, in the narrow house of death,
Let Winter round me rave ;
And the next flow'rs that deck the Spring
Bloom on my peaceful grave.

'O, CAM ye here the fight to shun,
 Or herd the sheep wi' me, man?
 Or were ye at the Sherra-moor,
 Or did the battle see, man?'
 'I saw the battle sair and teugh,
 And reekin-red ran monie a sheugh;
 My heart for fear gae sough for sough,
 To hear the thuds, and see the cluds
 O' clans frae woods in tartan duds,
 Wha glaum'd at kingdoms three, man.

'The red-coat lads wi' black cockauds
 To meet them were na slaw, man;
 They rush'd and push'd and bluid outgush'd,
 And monie a bouk did fa', man;

The great Argyle led on his files,
 I wat they glanc'd for twenty miles ;
 They hough'd the clans like nine-pin kyles,
 They hack'd and hash'd, while braid-swords clash'd,
 And thro' they dash'd, and hew'd and smash'd,
 'Till fey men died awa', man.

'But had ye seen the philabegs
 And skyrin tartan trews, man,
 When in the teeth they daur'd our Whigs
 And covenant True-blues, man !
 In lines extended lang and large,
 When baignets overpow'd the targe,
 And thousands hasten'd to the charge,
 Wi' Highland wrath they frae the sheath
 Drew blades o' death, till out o' breath
 They fled like frightened dows, man.'

'Oh, how deil, Tam, can that be true ?
 The chase gaed frae the North, man ;
 I saw mysel, they did pursue
 The horseman back to Forth, man ;
 And at Dunblane, in my ain sight,
 They took the brig wi' a' their might,
 And straught to Stirling wing'd their flight ;
 But, cursèd lot ! the gates were shut ;
 And monie a huntit poor red-coat
 For fear amaisht did swarf, man !'

'My sister Kate cam up the gate
 Wi' crowdie unto me, man :
 She swoor she saw some rebels run
 To Perth and to Dundee, man !
 Their left-hand general had nae skill ;
 The Angus lads had nae good-will
 That day their neibor's blude to spill ;
 For fear by foes that they should lose
 Their cogs o' brose, they scar'd at blows,
 And hameward fast did flee, man.

'They've lost some gallant gentlemen,
 Amang the Highland clans, man ;
 I fear my Lord Panmure is slain,
 Or in his en'mies' hands, man :
 Now wad ye sing this double flight,
 Some fell for wrang, and some for right,
 But monie bade the world gude-night ;
 Say, pell and mell, wi' muskets' knell,
 How Tories fell, and Whigs to hell
 Flew off in frightened bands, man !'

 A short sword and a lang,
 A weak arm and a strang for to draw!

What makes heroic strife famed afar, famed afar?
 What makes heroic strife famed afar?
 What makes heroic strife?
 To whet th' assassin's knife,
 Or hunt a parent's life wi' bluidy war!

Then let your schemes alone, in the state, in the state!
 Then let your schemes alone, in the state;
 Then let your schemes alone,
 Adore the rising sun,
 And leave a man undone to his fate!

No. 282. *O, Kenmure's on and awa, Willie.*Tune : Kenmure's on and awa. Scots Musical Museum, 1792, No. 359.

Sprightly

O, Kenmure's on and a - wa, Wil-lie, O, Kenmure's on and a - wa ;

An' Kenmure's lord's the bravest lord That ev - er Gal-lo-way saw.

Suc - cess to Kenmure's band, Wil-lie, Suc-cess to Kenmure's band!

There's no a heart that fears a Whig, That rides by Kenmure's hand.

O, KENMURE'S ON and awa, Willie,
 O, Kenmure's on and awa ;
 An' Kenmure's lord's the bravest lord
 That ever Galloway saw.

Success to Kenmure's band, Willie,
 Success to Kenmure's band !
 There's no a heart that fears a Whig,
 That rides by Kenmure's hand.

Here's Kenmure's health in wine, Willie,
 Here's Kenmure's health in wine !
 There ne'er was a coward o' Kenmure's blude
 Nor yet o' Gordon's line.

O, Kenmure's lads are men, Willie,
 O, Kenmure's lads are men !
 Their hearts and swords are metal true,
 And that their faes shall ken.

They'll live or die wi' fame, Willie,
 They'll live or die wi' fame !
 But soon wi' sounding victorie
 May Kenmure's lord come hame.

Here's him that's far awa, Willie,
 Here's him that's far awa !
 And here's the flower that I lo'e best--
 The rose that's like the snaw !

No. 283. *When we gaed to the braes o' Mar.*Tune: Up, and warn a', Willie. Scots Musical Museum, 1788, No. 188.

Quickly

CHORUS. Up, and warn a', Wil-lie, Warn, warn a'; To hear my can - ty
Fine.

high-land sang Re - late the thing I saw, Wil - lie. When we gaed to the braes o' Mar, And to the wea - pon - shaw, Wil - lie; Wi' true de - sign to serve the king And ban - ish Whigs a - wa, Wil - lie.

CHORUS. Up, and warn a', Willie,
Warn, warn a';
To hear my canty Highland sang
Relate the thing I saw, Willie.

When we gaed to the braes o' Mar,
And to the weapon-shaw, Willie;
Wi' true design to serve the king
And banish Whigs awa, Willie.
Up, and warn a', Willie,
Warn, warn a';
For lords and lairds came there bedeen,
And wow! but they were braw, Willie.

But when the standard was set up,
Right fierce the wind did blaw, Willie,
The royal nit upon the tap
Down to the ground did fa', Willie.
Up, and warn a', Willie,
Warn, warn a';
Then second-sighted Sandie said
We'd do nae gude at a', Willie.

But when the army join'd at Perth,
The bravest e'er ye saw, Willie,
We didna doubt the rogues to rout,
Restore our king and a', Willie.

Up, and warn a', Willie,
 Warn, warn a';
 The pipers play'd frae right to left
O whirry Whigs awa, Willie.

But when we march'd to Sherramuir
 And there the rebels saw, Willie;
 Brave Argyle attack'd our right,
 Our flank, and front and a', Willie;
 Up, and warn a', Willie,
 Warn, warn a';
 Traitor Huntly soon gave way,
 Seaforth, St. Clair and a', Willie.

But brave Glengary on our right
 The rebels' left did claw, Willie;
 He there the greatest slaughter made
 That ever Donald saw, Willie;
 Up, and warn a', Willie,
 Warn, warn a',
 And Whittam fyled his breeks for fear,
 And fast did rin awa, Willie.

For he ca'd us a Highland mob,
 And soon he'd slay us a', Willie;
 But we chas'd him back to Stirling brig—
 Dragoons, and foot, and a', Willie.
 Up, and warn a', Willie,
 Warn, warn a';
 At length we rallied on a hill,
 And briskly up did draw, Willie.

But when Argyle did view our line
 And them in order saw, Willie,
 He straight gaed to Dumblane again,
 And back his left did draw, Willie.
 Up, and warn a', Willie,
 Warn, warn a';
 Then we to Auchterairder march'd
 To wait a better fa', Willie.

Now if ye spier wha wan the day,
 I've tell'd you what I saw, Willie,
 We baith did fight, and baith did beat,
 And baith did rin awa, Willie.
 Up, and warn a', Willie,
 Warn, warn a';
 For second-sighted Sandie said
 We'd do nae gude at a', Willie.

No. 284. *Here's a health to them that's awa.*Tune: Here's a health to them that's awa. Scots Mus. Mus., 1796, No. 412.

Here's a health to them that's a - wa, Here's a health to them that's a -
 - wa! And wha win - na wish guid luck to our cause, May nev - er guid luck be their fa'! It's guid to be mer - ry and wise, It's guid to be hon - est and true, It's guid to sup - port Cal -
 - e - do - ni - a's cause, And bide by the buff and the blue.

HERE'S a health to them that's awa,
 Here's a health to them that's awa!
 And wha winna wish guid luck to our cause,
 May never guid luck be their fa'!
 It's guid to be merry and wise,
 It's guid to be honest and true,
 It's guid to support Caledonia's cause
 And bide by the buff and the blue.
 Here's a health to them that's awa,
 Here's a health to them that's awa!
 Here's a health to Charlie, the chief o' the clan,
 Altho' that his band be but sma'.
 May Liberty meet wi' success!
 May Prudence protect her frae evil!
 May tyrants and tyranny tine i' the mist,
 And wander their way to the devil!
 Here's a health to them that's awa,
 Here's a health to them that's awa!
 Here's a health to Tammie, the Norlan' laddie,
 That lives at the lug o' the law!
 Here's freedom to them that wad read,
 Here's freedom to them that would write!
 There's nane ever fear'd that the truth should be heard
 But they whom the truth would indite.

Here's a health to them that's awa,
 An' here's to them that's awa!
 Here's to Maitland and Wycombe; let wha does na like 'em
 Be built in a hole in the wa'!
 Here's timmer that's red at the heart,
 Here's fruit that is sound at the core,
 And may he that wad turn the buff and blue coat
 Be turn'd to the back o' the door!
 Here's a health to them that's awa,
 Here's a health to them that's awa!
 Here's Chieftain M'Leod, a chieftain worth gowd,
 Tho' bred amang mountains o' snaw!
 Here's friends on baith sides o' the Firth,
 And friends on baith sides o' the Tweed,
 And wha wad betray old Albion's right,
 May they never eat of her bread!

No. 285. Wha in a brulzie.

Tune: The Killogie. Scots Musical Museum, 1796, No. 475.

Moderate time

CHORUS. Ban-nocks o' bear meal, Ban-nocks o' bar-ley; Fine.

Here's to the High-land-man's Ban-nocks o' bar-ley!

Wha in a brul-zie Will first cry a par-ley? Nev-er the lads Wi' the ban-nocks o' bar-ley! D. C.

CHORUS. *Bannocks o' bear meal,
 Bannocks o' barley;
 Here's to the Highlandman's
 Bannocks o' barley!*

Wha in a brulzie
 Will first cry a parley?
 Never the lads
 Wi' the bannocks o' barley.

Wha, in his wae-days,
 Were loyal to Charlie?
 Wha but the lads
 Wi' the bannocks o' barley.

No. 286. *The small birds rejoice.*Tune: Captain O'Kane. M^oGlashan's Reels, 1786, p. 36.

Slow

The small birds re-joice in the green leaves re - turn-ing, The mur-mur-ing stream - let winds clear thro' the vale, The prim - ro -

 cow - slips be - deck the green dale: But what can give plea - by care? No birds sweet - ly sing - ing, nor flow'rs gai - ly spring-ing, Can soothe the sad bo - som of joy - less des - pair.

THE small birds rejoice in the green leaves returning,
 The murmuring streamlet winds clear thro' the vale,
 The primroses blow in the dews of the morning,
 And wild scatter'd cowslips bedeck the green dale:
 But what can give pleasure, or what can seem fair,
 When the lingering moments are number'd by care?

No birds sweetly singing, nor flow'rs gaily springing,
 Can soothe the sad bosom of joyless despair.

The deed that I dared, could it merit their malice,
 A king and a father to place on his throne?
 His right are these hills, and his right are those valleys,
 Where the wild beasts find shelter, tho' I can find none!

But 'tis not my suff'rings thus wretched, forlorn—
 My brave gallant friends, 'tis your ruin I mourn!
 Your faith prov'd so loyal in hot-bloody trial,
 Alas! can I make it no better return?

No. 287. My love was born in Aberdeen.

Tune: The White Cockade. Scots Musical Museum, 1790, No. 272.

Merrily

My love was born in Ab - er - deen, The bon - iest lad that e'er was seen; But now he makes our hearts fu' sad,— He takes the field wi' his White Cock - ade.
 CHORUS. O, he's a rant - ing, rov - ing lad! He is a brisk an' a bon - ie lad! Be - tide what may, I will be wed, And fol - low the boy wi' the White Cock - ade.

My love was born in Aberdeen,
 The boniest lad that e'er was seen;
 But now he makes our hearts fu' sad,—
 He takes the field wi' his White Cockade.

CHORUS. O, he's a ranting, roving lad!
He is a brisk an' a bonie lad!
Betide what may, I will be wed,
And follow the boy wi' the White Cockade.

I'll sell my rock, my reel, my tow,
 My gude gray mare and hawkit cow,
 To buy mysel a tartan plaid,
 To follow the boy wi' the White Cockade.

No. 288. *The noble Maxwells and their powers.*Tune: Nithsdale's welcome home. Scots Musical Museum, 1792, No. 364.

Joyous

The no-ble Max-wells and their powers Are com-ing o'er the Bor-der; And they'll gae big Ter-rea-gles' towers, And set them a' in or-der.
And they de-clare Ter-rea-gle's fair, For their a-bode they choose it; There's no a heart in a' the land But's light-er at the news o't!

THE noble Maxwells and their powers
Are coming o'er the Border;
And they'll gae big Terreagles' towers,
And set them a' in order.
And they declare Terreagle's fair,
For their abode they choose it;
There's no a heart in a' the land
But's lighter at the news o't!

Tho' stars in skies may disappear,
And angry tempests gather,
The happy hour may soon be near
That brings us pleasant weather;
The weary night o' care and grief
May hae a joyfu' morrow;
So dawning day has brought relief—
Fareweel our night o' sorrow!

No. 289. *My Harry was a gallant gay.*Tune: Highlander's lament. Scots Musical Museum, 1790, No. 209.

My Har-ry was a gal-lant gay, Fu' state-ly strade he on the plain;
But now he's ban-ish'd far a-way; I'll nev-er see him back a-gain.
CHORUS.
O, for him back a-gain! O for him back a-gain!

I wad gie a' Knockhaspie's land For Highland Har-ry back a - gain.

MY HARRY was a gallant gay,
Fu' stately strade he on the plain;
But now he's banish'd far away;
I'll never see him back again.

When a' the lave gae to their bed,
I wander dowie up the glen,
I set me down and greet my fill,
And ay I wish him back again.

CHORUS.

O, for him back again!

O, for him back again!

*I wad gie a' Knockhaspie's land
For Highland Harry back again.*

O, were some villains hangit high,
And ilka body had their ain,
Then I might see the joyfu' sight,
My Highland Harry back again!

*Carl, an the king come,
Carl, an the king come,
Thou shalt dance, and I will sing,
Carl, an the king come!*

I trow we swappèd for the worse:
We gae the boot and better horse,
And that we'll tell them at the cross,
Carl, an the king come.

An somebody were come again,
Then somebody maun cross the main,
And every man shall hae his ain,
Carl, an the king come.

No. 291. *Sir John Cope trode the north right far.*Tune: Johnie Cope. Scots Musical Museum, 1790, No. 234.In moderate time

Sir John Cope trode the north right far, Yet ne'er a re - bel he cam naur, Un - til he land - ed at Dun - bar Right ear - ly in a morn - ing. CHORUS. Hey!
John - ie Cope, are ye wauk - ing yet? Or are ye sleep - ing I would wit; O, haste ye get up, for the drums do beat; O, fye! Cope, rise in the morn - ing.

SIR John Cope trode the north right far,
Yet ne'er a rebel he cam naur,
Until he landed at Dunbar
Right early in a morning.

CHORUS. *Hey! Johnie Cope, are ye wauking yet?
Or are ye sleeping I would wit;
O, haste ye get up, for the drums do beat;
O fye! Cope, rise in the morning.*

He wrote a challenge from Dunbar,
'Come fight me, Charlie, an ye daur,
If it be not by the chance of war
I'll give you a merry morning.'

When Charlie look'd the letter upon,
He drew his sword the scabbard from—
'So Heaven restore to me my own,
I'll meet you, Cope, in the morning.'

Cope swore, with many a bloody word,
That he would fight them gun and sword,
But he fled frae his nest like an ill-scar'd bird,
And Johnie took wing in the morning.

It was upou an afternoon,
Sir Johnie march'd to Preston town,
He says, 'My lads come lean you down,
And we'll fight the boys in the morning.'

But when he saw the Highland lads,
Wi' tartan trews and white cockauds,
Wi' swords, and guns, and rungs, and gauds—
O Johnie, he took wing in the morning.

On the morrow when he did rise,
He looked between him and the skies ;
He saw them wi' their naked thighs,
Which fear'd him in the morning.

O, then he flew into Dunbar,
Crying for a man of war ;
He thought to have passed for a rustic tar,
And gotten awa in the morning.

Sir Johnie into Berwick rade,
Just as the devil had been his guide ;
Gien him the warld he would na stay'd
To foughten the boys in the morning.

Says the Berwickers unto Sir John :—
'O what's become of all your men ?'
'In faith,' says he, 'I dinna ken—
I left them a' this morning.'

Says Lord Mark Car—'Ye are na blate
To bring us the news o' your ain defeat,
I think you deserve the back o' the gate !
Get out o' my sight this morning.'

No. 293. *My heart is wae, and unco wae.*Tune: Mary's dream. Perth Musical Miscellany, 1786, p. 96.

Slow

My heart is wae, and un - co wae, To think up - on the rag - ing sea, That roars between her gar - dens green An' the bon - ie Lass of Al - ban - ie.
 This love - ly maid's of roy - al blood, That rul - èd Al -
 - bion's king - doms three; But O' a - las! for her bonie face! They've wrang'd the Lass of Al - ban - ie.

My heart is wae, and unco wae,
 To think upon the raging sea,
 That roars between her gardens
 green
 An' the bonie Lass of Albanie.

This lovely maid's of royal blood,
 That rulèd Albion's kingdoms
 three;
 But O, alas! for her bonie face!
 They've wrang'd the Lass of Albanie.

In the rolling tide of spreading Clyde,
 There sits an isle of high degree,
 And a town of fame, whose princely name
 Should grace the Lass of Albanie.

But there is a youth, a witless youth,
 That fills the place where she should be;
 We'll send him o'er to his native
 shore,
 And bring our ain sweet Albanie.

Alas the day, and woe the day!
 A false usurper wan the gree,
 Who now commands the towers and lands—
 The royal right of Albanie.

We'll daily pray, we'll nightly pray.
 On bended knees most fervently,
 The time may come, with pipe and drum
 We'll welcome home fair Albanie.

COME boat me o'er, come row me o'er,
 Come boat me o'er to Charlie;
 I'll gie John Ross another bawbee
 To boat me o'er to Charlie.

CHORUS. *We'll o'er the water, we'll o'er the sea,
 We'll o'er the water to Charlie;
 Come weal, come woe, we'll gather and go,
 And live and die wi' Charlie.*

I lo'e weel my Charlie's name,
 Tho' some there be abhor him;
 But O, to see auld Nick gaun hame,
 And Charlie's faes before him!

I swear and vow by moon and stars
 And sun that shines so early,
 If I had twenty thousand lives,
 I'd die as aft for Charlie.

No. 295. *O, I am come to the low countrie.*Tune: The Highland widow's lament. Scots Musical Museum, 1796, No. 498.

O, I am come to the low countrie—
Ochon, ochon, ochrie!—

Without a penny in my purse
To buy a meal to me.

It wasna sae in the Highland hills—
Ochon, ochon, ochrie!—

Nae woman in the country wide
Sae happy was as me.

For then I had a score o' kye—
Ochon, ochon, ochrie!—

Feeding on yon hill sae high
And giving milk to me.

And there I had threescore o' yowes—
Ochon, ochon, ochrie!—

Skipping on yon bonie knowes
And casting woo' to me.

I was the happiest of a' the clan—
Sair, sair may I repine!—

For Donald was the brawest man,
And Donald he was mine.

Till Charlie Stewart cam at last—
Sae far to set us free;

My Donald's arm was wanted then
For Scotland and for me.

Their waefu' fate what need I tell?

Right to the wrang did yield;
My Donald and his country fell
Upon Culloiden field.

Ochon! O Donald, O!

Ochon, ochon, ochrie!—
Nae woman in the world wide
Sae wretched now as me.

No. 296. *It was a' for our rightfu' king.*Tune: Mally Stuart. Scots Musical Museum, 1796, No. 497.

It was a' for our rightfu' king
We left fair Scotland's strand;
It was a' for our rightfu' king,
We e'er saw Irish land, my dear—
We e'er saw Irish land.

Now a' is done that men can do,
And a' is done in vain,
My Love and native land fareweel,
For I maun cross the main, my
dear—
For I maun cross the main.

[He turn'd him right and round about
Upon the Irish shore,

And gae his bridle reins a shake,
With Adieu for evermore, my dear,
And adieu for evermore!]

The soger frae the wars returns,
The sailor frae the main,
But I hae parted frae my love
Never to meet again, my dear—
Never to meet again.

When day is gane, and night is come,
And a' folk bound to sleep,
I think on him that's far awa
The lee-lang night and weep, my

THICKEST night, surround my dwell - ing!

Howling tempests, o'er me rave!
Turbid torrents wintry swelling,
Roaring by my lonely cave!
Crystal streamlets gently flowing,
Busy haunts of base mankind,
Western breezes softly blowing,
Suit not my distracted mind.

In the cause of right engagèd,
Wrongs injurious to redress,
Honour's war we strongly wagèd,
But the heavens deny'd suc -

Ruin's wheel has driven o'er us;
Not a hope that dare attend,
The wide world is all before us,
But a world without a friend!

THERE grows a bonie brier-bush in our kail-yard,
There grows a bonie brier-bush in our kail-yard;
And below the bonie brier-bush there's a lassie and a lad,
And they're busy, busy courting in our kail-yard.

We'll court nae mair below the buss in our kail-yard,
We'll court nae mair below the buss in our kail-yard;
We'll awa to Athole's green, and there we'll no be seen,
Where the trees and the branches will be our safe-guard.

'Will ye go to the dancin in Carlyle's ha'?'
Will ye go to the dancin in Carlyle's ha'?'
Where Sandy and Nancy I'm sure will ding them a'?'
'I winna gang to the dance in Carlyle ha.'

What will I do for a lad when Sandy gangs awa?
What will I do for a lad when Sandy gangs awa?
I will awa to Edinburgh, and win a penny fee,
And see an onie bonie lad will fancy me.

He's comin frae the North that's to fancy me,
He's comin frae the North that's to fancy me;
A feather in his bonnet and a ribbon at his knee,
He's a bonie, bonie laddie, and yon be he!

'Trumpets sound and cannons roar,
Bonie lassie, Lawland lassie—
And a' the hills wi' echoes roar,
Bonie Lawland lassie!

Glory, honor, now invite—
Bonie lassie, Lawland lassie;
For freedom and my King to fight,
Bonie Lawland lassie!'

'Thesuna backward course shall take,
Bonie laddie, Highland laddie;
Ere ought thy manly courage shake;
Bonie Highland laddie!

Go, for yoursel' procure renown,
Bonie laddie, Highland laddie,
And for your lawful king his crown,

No. 302. By yon Castle wa' at the close of the day.

Tune: There are few good fellows when Jamie's awa. Scots M.M. 1792, No. 315.

With pathos

By yon cas-tle wa' at the close of the day,
I heard a man sing, tho' his head it was grey,
And as he was sing-ing, the tears doon came,
'There'll nev-er be peace till Ja-mie comes hame.'

By yon castle wa' at the close of the day,
I heard a man sing, tho' his head it was grey,
And as he was singing, the tears doon came,
'There'll never be peace till Jamie comes hame.'

The Church is in ruins, the State is in jars;
 Delusions, oppressions, and murderous wars,
 We darena weel say't, but we ken wha's to blame—
 'There'll never be peace till Jamie comes hame.'

My seven braw sons for Jamie drew sword,
 But now I greet round their green beds in the yerd;
 It brak the sweet heart o' my faithfu' auld dame—
 'There'll never be peace till Jamie comes hame.'

Now life is a burden that bows me down,
 Sin I tint my bairns, and he tint his crown;
 But till my last moments my words are the same—
 'There'll never be peace till Jamie comes hame.'

No. 303. I hae been at Crookieden.

Tune: The old highland laddie. Scots Musical Museum, 1792, No. 332.

Lively

I hae been at Crookieden— My bonnie laddie - die, Highland laddie, Viewling Willie and his men— My bonnie laddie, Highland laddie!
 There our foes that burnt and slew— My bonnie laddie, Highland laddie, There at last they gat their due— My bonnie laddie, Highland laddie.

I HAE been at Crookieden—
My bonie laddie, Highland laddie,
Viewing Willie and his men—
My bonie laddie, Highland laddie!
There our foes that burnt and slew—
My bonie laddie, Highland laddie,
There at last they gat their due—
My bonie laddie, Highland laddie.

Satan sits in his black neuk—
My bonie laddie, Highland laddie,
Breaking sticks to roast the Duke—
My bonie laddie, Highland laddie.
The bloody monster gae a yell—
My bonie laddie, Highland laddie,
And loud the laugh gae rounda'hell—
My bonie laddie, Highland laddie.

No. 304. 'Twas on a Monday morning.

Tune: Charlie, he's my darling. Scots Musical Museum, 1796, No. 428.

'Twas on a Mon-day morn-ing Right ear-ly in the year, That Char-lie came to our town—The young Che-va-lier!

CHORUS. An' Char-lie, he's my dar-ling, my dar-ling, my dar-ling,

Char-lie, he's my dar-ling—the young Che-va-lier!

'Twas on a Monday morning
Right early in the year,
That Charlie came to our town—
The young Chevalier!

CHORUS.
*An' Charlie, he's my darling,
My darling, my darling,
Charlie, he's my darling—
The young Chevalier!*

As he was walking up the street
The city for to view,
O, there he spied a bonie lass
The window looking thro',

Sae light's he jumpèd up the stair,
And tirl'd at the pin;
And wha sae ready as hersel'
To let the laddie in!

He set his Jenny on his kneec,
All in his highland dress;
For brawly weel he ken'd the way,
To please a bonie lass.

It's up yon heathery mountain
An' down yon scroggy glen,
We daurna gang a milking,
For Charlie and his men!

Plaintive

Frae the friends and land I love Driv'n by For-tune's fel-ly spite, Frae my best be-lov'd I rove, Never mair to taste de-light: Nev-er mair maun hope to find Ease frae toil, re-lief frae care; When re-mem-brance wracks the mind, Plea-sures but un-veil des-pair.

FRAE the friends and land I love
Driv'n by Fortune's felly spite,
Frae my best beloved I rove,
Never mair to taste delight;
Never mair maun hope to find
Ease frae toil, relief frae care:
When remembrance wracks the mind,
Pleasures but unveil despair.

Brightest climes shall mirk appear,
Desert ilka blooming shore,
Till the Fates, nae mair severe,
Friendship, Love, and Peace restore;
Till Revenge wi' laurel'd head
Bring our banish'd hame again,
And ilk loyal, bonie lad
Cross the seas, and win his ain.

 mind the wind and rain Sae weel row' d in his tar - lan plaid - ie!

As I came o'er the Cairney mount,
 And down among the blooming heather,
 Kindly stood the milking-shiel
 To shelter frae the stormy weather.

CHORUS. O, my bonie Highland lad,
 My winsome, weel-far'd Highland laddie!
 Wha wad mind the wind and rain
 Sae weel row'd in his tartan plaidie!

Now Phœbus blinkit on the bent,
 And o'er the knowes the lambs were bleating;
 But he wan my heart's consent
 To be his ain at the neist meeting.

No. 307. *The sun he is sunk in the west.*Tune : Go from my window, love, do. Scots Mus. Museum, 1803, No. 581.

The sun he is sunk in the west, All crea-tures re -
 - ti - rèd to rest, While here I sit, all sore be - set With sor - row, grief, and woe; And its O fic - kle For - tune, O!

THE sun he is sunk in the west,
 All creatures retirèd to rest,
 While here I sit, all sore beset
 With sorrow, grief, and woe;
 And it's O fickle Fortune, O!

The prosperous man is asleep,
 Nor hears how the whirlwinds sweep;
 But misery and I must watch
 The surly tempest blow:
 And it's O fickle Fortune, O!

There lies the dear [partner] of my breast;
 Her cares for a moment at rest;
 Must I see thee, my youthful pride,
 Thus brought so very low?—
 And it's O fickle Fortune, O!

There lie my sweet [babies] in her arms; [alarms;
 No anxious fear their [little] hearts
 But for their sake, my heart does ache,
 With many a bitter throe:
 And it's O fickle Fortune, O!

I once was by Fortune carest:
 I once could relieve the distrest;
 Now life's poor [pittance] hardly earn'd,
 My fate will scarce bestow;
 And it's O fickle Fortune, O!

No comfort, no comfort I have!
 How welcome to me were the grave!
 But then my wife and children dear—
 O, whither would they go?
 And it's O fickle Fortune, O!

O whither, O [whither] shall I turn
 All friendless, forsaken, forlorn?
 For in this world Rest or Peace
 I never more shall know!
 And it's O fickle Fortune, O!

THERE was a lad was born in Kyle,
But whatna day o' whatna style,
I doubt it's hardly worth the while
To be sae nice wi' Robin.

Our monarch's hindmost year but ane
Was five-and-twenty days begun,
'Twas then a blast o' Janwar win'
Blew hansel in on Robin.

The gossip keekit in his loof,
Quo'scho 'wha lives will see the proof,
This waly boy will be nae coof;
I think we'll ca' him Robin.

'He'll hae misfortunes great an'sma',
But ay a heart aboon them a';
He'll be a credit till us a';
W'll a' be proud o' Robin.

'But sure as three times three mak nine,
I see by ilka score and line,
This chap will dearly like our kin',
So leeze me on thee, Robin.'

Guid faith, quo'scho, I doubt you, sir,
Ye gar the lasses lie aspar,
But twenty fauts ye may hae waur, —
So blessins on thee, Robin!

No. 309. *Is there for honest poverty?*Tune: For a' that. Scots Musical Museum, 1790, No. 290.

Boldly

Is there for hon-est pov-er-ty That hings his head, an' a' that?
 The cow-ard slave, we pass him by— We dare be poor for a' that!
 For a' that, an' a' that, Our toils ob-scure, an' a' that, The rank is but the guinea's stamp, The man's the gowd for a' that.

Is there for honest poverty
 That hings his head, an' a' that?
 The coward slave, we pass him by—
 We dare be poor for a' that!
 For a' that, an' a' that,
 Our toils obscure, an' a' that,
 The rank is but the guinea's stamp,
 The man's the gowd for a' that.

What tho' on hamely fare we dine,
 Wear hodden grey, an' a' that?
 Gie fools their silks, and knaves their wine—
 A man's a man for a' that!
 For a' that, an' a' that,
 Their tinsel show, an' a' that,
 The honest man, tho' e'er sae poor,
 Is king o' men for a' that.

Ye see yon birkie ca'd a lord,
 Wha struts, and stares, an' a' that;
 Tho' hundreds worship at his word,
 He's but a coof for a' that.
 For a' that, an' a' that,
 His ribband, star, an' a' that,
 The man o' independent mind,
 He looks an' laughs at a' that.

A prince can mak a belted knight,
 A marquis, duke, an' a' that,
 But an honest man's aboon his might—
 Gude faith, he mauna fa' that!
 For a' that, an' a' that,
 Their dignities, an' a' that,
 The pith o' sense an' pride o' worth
 Are higher rank than a' that.

Then let us pray that come it may—
 As come it will, for a' that—
 That sense and worth, o'er a' the earth
 Shall bear the gree, an' a' that;
 For a' that, an' a' that,
 It's comin yet for a' that,
 That man to man the world o'er,
 Shall brothers be for a' that.

No. 310. I dream'd I lay where flowers were springing.

Tune : I dream'd I lay. Scots Musical Museum, 1788, No. 146.

The musical score is written in a single system with five staves. The key signature has two flats (B-flat and E-flat), and the time signature is 3/4. The melody is simple and lyrical, with a clear cadence at the end. The lyrics are printed below the notes, with hyphens indicating syllables that span across notes.

I dream'd I lay where flowers were spring-ing Gai-ly in the sun - ny beam; List'ning to the wild birds sing-ing, By a fall - ing crys - tal stream: Straight the sky grew black and dar - ing; Thro' the woods the whirl - winds rave; Trees with ag - èd arms were war - ring O'er the swell - ing, drum - lie wave.

I DREAM'D I lay where flowers were springing
 Gaily in the sunny beam;
 List'ning to the wild birds singing,
 By a falling crystal stream:

Straight the sky grew black and daring ;
 Thro' the woods the whirlwinds rave ;
 Trees with agèd arms were warring
 O'er the swelling, drumlie wave.

Such was my life's deceitful morning,
 Such the pleasures I enjoyed ;
 But lang or noon loud tempests, storming,
 A' my flowery bliss destroy'd,
 Tho' fickle Fortune has deceived me—
 She promis'd fair, and perform'd but ill ;
 Of mony a joy and hope bereav'd me—
 I bear a heart shall support me still.

 and danc'd it round Be - low the gal - lows tree.

FAREWELL, ye dungeons dark and strong,
 The wretch's destinie !
 McPherson's time will not be long
 On yonder gallows-tree.

CHORUS. *Sae rantingly, sae wantonly,
Sae dauntingly gaed he,
He play'd a spring, and danc'd it round
Below the gallows tree.*

O, what is death but parting breath!
On many a bloody plain
I've dared his face, and in this place
I scorn him yet again!

Untie these bands from off my hands,
And bring to me my sword,
And there's no a man in all Scotland
But I'll brave him at a word.

I've liv'd a life of sturt and strife;
I die by treacherie:
It burns my heart I must depart,
And not avengèd be.

Now farewell light, thou sunshine bright,
And all beneath the sky!
May coward shame distain his name,
The wretch that dare not die!

No. 312. O, raging Fortune's withering blast.

(Tune unknown.)

O, RAGING Fortune's withering blast
Has laid my leaf full low,
O, raging Fortune's withering blast
Has laid my leaf full low.

My stem was fair, my bud was green,
My blossom sweet did blow;
The dew fell fresh, the sun rose mild,
And made my branches grow.

But luckless Fortune's northern storms
Laid a' my blossoms low!—
But luckless Fortune's northern storms
Laid a' my blossoms low!

No. 313. *The gloomy night is gath'ring fast.*Tune: Roslin Castle. Bremner's Scots Songs (2nd set), 1757, p. 27.

Slow

The gloo - my night is gath - 'ring fast, Loud roars the wild, in - con - stant blast; Yon mur -
 - ky cloud is foul with rain, I see it driv - ing o'er the plain; The hun - ter now has left the moor, The scat - ter'd co - veys meet se - - cure; While here I wan - der, prest with care, A - long the lone - ly banks of Ayr.

The gloomy night is gath'ring fast,
 Loud roars the wild, inconstant
 blast;
 Yon murky cloud is foul with rain,
 I see it driving o'er the plain;
 The hunter now has left the moor,
 The scatter'd coveys meet secure;
 While here I wander, prest with care,
 Along the lonely banks of Ayr.

The Autumn mourns her rip'ning corn
 By early Winter's ravage torn;
 Across her placid, azure sky,
 She sees the scowling tempest fly:
 Chill runs my blood to hear it rave;
 I think upon the stormy wave,
 Where many a danger I must dare,
 Far from the bonie banks of Ayr.

'Tis not the surging billows roar,
'Tis not that fatal, deadly shore ;
Tho' death in ev'ry shape appear,
The wretched have no more to fear :
But round my heart the ties are bound,
That heart transpierc'd with many a wound ;
These bleed afresh, those ties I
tear,
To leave the bonie banks of Ayr.

Farewell, old Coila's hills and dales,
Her heathmoors and winding vales ;
The scenes where wretched fancy
roves,
Pursuing past unhappy loves !
Farewell my friends ! farewell my foes !
My peace with these, my love with those :—
The bursting tears my heart declare
Farewell the bonie banks of Ayr !

By a river hoarsely roaring,
Isabella stray'd deploring :—

'Farewell, hours that late did measure
Sunshine days of joy and pleasure !
Hail, thou gloomy night of sorrow—
Cheerless night that knows no morrow !

'O'er the past too fondly wandering,
On the hopeless future pondering,
Chilly Grief my life-blood freezes,
Fell Despair my fancy seizes.

Load to Misery most distressing,
Gladly how would I resign thee,
And to dark oblivion join thee !'

 We heard nocht but the roaring linn
 Amang the braes sac scroggie;

But the houlet cried frae the castle wa',
 The blitter frae the boggie,
 The tod reply'd upon the hill;
 I trembled for my hoggie.
 When day did daw, and cocks did crawl,
 The morning it was foggie,
 An unco tyke lap o'er the dike,
 And maist has kill'd my hoggie!

 A cushat crooded o'er me,
 That echo'd through the trees.

Tune: The lazy mist. Scots Musical Museum, 1790, No. 232.

Slow

The la - zy mist hangs from the brow of the hill, Con -
 - ceal - ing the course of the dark wind - ing rill; How lan - guid the scenes, late so spright - ly, ap - pear, As Au - tumn to Win -
 - ter re - signs the pale year! The for - ests are leaf - less, the mea - dows are brown, And all the gay fop - pery of Sum - muse, How quick Time is fly - ing, how keen Fate pur - sues!

THE lazy mist hangs from the brow of the hill,
 Concealing the course of the dark winding rill;
 How languid the scenes, late so sprightly, appear,
 As Autumn to Winter resigns the pale year!
 The forests are leafless, the meadows are brown,
 And all the gay foppery of Summer is flown.
 Apart let me wander, apart let me muse,
 How quick Time is flying, how keen Fate pursues!

How long I have liv'd, but how much liv'd in vain!
 How little of life's scanty span may remain,
 What aspects old Time in his progress has worn!
 What ties cruel Fate in my bosom has torn!

How foolish, or worse, till our summit is gain'd!
 And downward, how weaken'd, how darken'd, how pain'd!
 Life is not worth having with all it can give—
 For something beyond it poor man, sure, must live.

The scented birk and hawthorn white
Across the pool their arms unite,
Alike to screen the birdies' nest
And little fishes' caller rest:
The sun blinks kindly in the biel',
Where blythe I turn my spinnin wheel.

On lofty aiks the cushats wail,
 And Echo cons the doolfu' tale.
 The lintwhites in the hazel braes,
 Delighted, rival ither's lays;
 The craik among the claver hay,
 The pairrick whirrin o'er the ley,
 The swallow jinkin round my shiel,
 Amuse me at my spinnin-wheel.
 Wi' sma' to sell and less to buy,
 Aboon distress, below envÿ,
 O, wha wad leave this humble state
 For a' the pride of a' the great?
 Amid their flaring, idle toys,
 Amid their cumbrous, dinsome joys,
 Can they the peace and pleasure feel
 Of Bessie at her spinnin-wheel?

No. 323. *My father was a farmer.*Tune: The Weaver and his shuttle (see No. 67).

My father was a farmer
 Upon the Carrick border, O,
 And carefully he bred me
 In decency and order, O ;
 He bade me act a manly part,
 Tho' I had ne'er a farthing, O,
 For without an honest, manly heart,
 No man was worth regarding, O.

Then out into the world
 My course I did determine, O ;
 Tho' to be rich was not my wish,
 Yet to be great was charming, O :
 My talents they were not the worst,
 Nor yet my education, O ;
 Resolved was I at least to try
 To mend my situation, O.

In many a way, and vain essay
 I courted Fortune's favour, O ;
 Some cause unseen still stept between
 To frustrate each endeavour, O :
 Sometimes by foes I was o'er-power'd,
 Sometimes by friends forsaken, O,
 And when my hope was at the top,
 I still was worst mistaken, O.

Then sore harass'd, and tir'd at last
 With Fortune's vain delusion, O,
 I dropt my schemes like idle dreams,
 And came to this conclusion, O :—
 The past was bad, and the future
 hid ;
 It's good or ill untrièd, O ;
 But the present hour was in my power,
 And so I would enjoy it, O.

No help, nor hope, nor view had I,
 Nor person to befriend me, O ;
 So I must toil, and sweat, and broil,
 And labour to sustain me, O :

To plough and sow, to reap and mow,
 My father bred me early, O ;
 For one, he said, to labour bred,
 Was a match for Fortune fairly, O.

Thus all obscure, unknown, and poor,
 Thro' life I'm doom'd to wander, O,
 Till down my weary bones I lay
 In everlasting slumber, O ;
 No view nor care, but shun whate'er
 Might breed me pain or sorrow, O ;
 I live to-day as well's I may,
 Regardless of to-morrow, O.

But, cheerful still, I am as well
 As a monarch in a palace, O,
 Tho' Fortune's frown still hunts me
 down,
 With all her wonted malice, O :
 I make indeed my daily bread,
 But ne'er can make it farther, O ;
 But, as daily bread is all I need,
 I do not much regard her, O.

When sometimes by my labour
 I earn a little money, O,
 Some unforeseen misfortune
 Comes gen'rally upon me, O :
 Mischance, mistake, or by neglect,
 Or my good-natur'd folly, O ;
 But, come what will, I've sworn it still,
 I'll ne'er be melancholy, O.

All you who follow wealth and power
 With unremitting ardour, O,
 The more in this you look for bliss,
 You leave your view the farther, O.
 Had you the wealth Potosi boasts,
 Or nations to adore you, O,
 A cheerful, honest-hearted clown
 I will prefer before you, O !

No. 324. *When chill November's surly blast.*Tune: Peggy Bawn. Scots Musical Museum, 1803, No. 509.Slow

When chill No - vem-ber's sur - ly blast Made fields and for - ests bare,

One ev'n - ing, as I wan-der'd forth, A - long the banks of Ayr,

I spy'd a man whose a - gèd step Seem'd wea - ry, worn with care;

His face was fur-row'd o'er with years, And ho - ary was his hair.

WHEN chill November's surly blast
 Made fields and forests bare,
 One ev'ning, as I wander'd forth,
 Along the banks of Ayr,
 I spy'd a man whose agèd step
 Seem'd weary, worn with care;
 His face was furrow'd o'er with years,
 And hoary was his hair.

'Young stranger, whither wand'rest thou?'

Began the reverend Sage;

'Does thirst of wealth thy step constrain,

Or youthful pleasures rage?

Or haply, prest with cares and woes,
 Too soon thou hast began
 To wander forth, with me to mourn
 The miseries of man.

'The sun that overhangs yon moors,
 Outspreading far and wide,
 Where hundreds labour to support

A haughty lordling's pride:—

I've seen yon weary winter-sun
 Twice forty times return;
 And ev'ry time has added proofs,
 That man was made to mourn.

'O man! while in thy early years,
 How prodigal of time!
 Mis-spending all thy precious hours,
 Thy glorious, youthful prime!
 Alternate follies take the sway;
 Licentious passions burn;
 Which tenfold force gives nature's law,
 That man was made to mourn.

'Look not alone on youthful prime,
 Or manhood's active might;
 Man then is useful to his kind,
 Supported is his right:
 But see him on the edge of life,
 With cares and sorrows worn;
 Then age and want—O ill-matched pair!—
 Show man was made to mourn.

'A few seem favourites of fate,
 In pleasure's lap carest ;
 Yet think not all the rich and great
 Are likewise truly blest ;
 But oh ! what crowds in every land

All wretched and forlorn,
 Thro' weary life this lesson learn,
 That man was made to mourn.

'Many and sharp the num'rous ills
 Inwoven with our frame !
 More pointed still we make ourselves
 Regret, remorse, and shame !
 And man, whose heav'n-erected face
 The smiles of love adorn,—
 Man's inhumanity to man
 Makes countless thousands mourn !

'See yonder poor, o'erlabour'd wight,
 So abject, mean, and vile,
 Who begs a brother of the earth
 To give him leave to toil ;
 And see his lordly fellow-worm
 The poor petition spurn,
 Unmindful, tho' a weeping wife
 And helpless offspring mourn.

'If I'm design'd yon lordling's slave—
 By Nature's law design'd—
 Why was an independent wish
 E'er planted in my mind ?
 If not, why am I subject to
 His cruelty, or scorn ?
 Or why has man the will and pow'r
 To make his fellow mourn ?

'Yet, let not this too much, my son,
 Disturb thy youthful breast ;
 This partial view of humankind
 Is surely not the last !
 The poor, oppressèd, honest man
 Had never, sure, been born,
 Had there not been some recompense
 To comfort those that mourn.

'O death ! the poor man's dearest
 friend,
 The kindest and the best !
 Welcome the hour my aged limbs
 Are laid with thee at rest !
 The great, the wealthy fear thy blow,
 From pomp and pleasure torn ;
 But oh ! a blest relief to those
 That weary-laden mourn !'

No. 325. The wintry west extends his blast.

Tune: M^oPherson's rant (see No. 311).

THE wintry west extends his blast,
 And hail and rain does blaw ;
 Or, the stormy north sends driving forth
 The blinding sleet and snaw :
 While tumbling brown, the burn comes down,
 And roars frae bank to brae ;
 And bird and beast in covert rest,
 And pass the weary day.

'The sweeping blast, the sky o'ercast,'
 The joyless winter day
 Let others fear, to me more dear
 Than all the pride of May :
 The tempest's howl it soothes my soul,
 My griefs it seems to join ;
 The leafless trees my fancy please,
 Their fate resembles mine.

Thou Power Supreme whose mighty scheme
 These woes of mine fulfil,
 Here firm I rest, they must be best,
 Because they are Thy will !
 Then all I want—O do Thou grant
 This one request of mine !—
 Since to enjoy Thou dost deny,
 Assist me to resign.

No. 326. But lately seen in gladsome green.

Tune : East Indian air. Scots Musical Museum, 1796, No. 486.

Slow

The musical score is written on four staves in G major. The first staff begins with a treble clef, a key signature of one sharp (F#), and a 3/4 time signature. It features a triplet of eighth notes. The second staff continues the melody with a 3/4 time signature and a triplet. The third staff has a 2/4 time signature and a triplet. The fourth staff returns to a 3/4 time signature and a triplet. The lyrics are printed below the notes.

But late - ly seen in gladsome green, The woods re - joic'd the day; Thro' gen - tle show'rs the laughing flow'rs In dou - ble pride were gay: But now our joys are fled On win - ter blasts a - wa, Yet mai - den May in rich ar - ray A - gain shall bring them a'.

But lately seen in gladsome green,
 The woods rejoic'd the day;
 Thro' gentle show'rs the laughing flow'rs
 In double pride were gay:
 But now our joys are fled
 On winter blasts awa,
 Yet maiden May in rich array
 Again shall bring them a'.

But my white pow, nae kindly thowe
 Shall melt the snaws of age;
 My trunk of eild, but buss and bield,
 Sinks in Time's wintry rage.
 O, age has weary days
 And nights o' sleepless pain!
 Thou golden time o' youthfu' prime,
 Why comes thou not again?

No. 328. *He clenched his pamphlets in his fist.*Tune: Killiecrankie (see No. 256).

LORD ADVOCATE.

HE clenched his pamphlets in his fist,
 He quoted and he hinted,
 Till in a declamation-mist
 His argument, he tint it;
 He gapèd for't, he grapèd for't,
 He fand it was awa, man;
 But what his common sense came short,
 He ekèd out wi' law, man.

MR. ERSKINE.

Collected, Harry stood awee,
 Then open'd out his arm, man;
 His lordship sat, wi' ruefu' e'e,
 And ey'd the gath'ring storm, man:
 Like wind-driv'n hail it did assail,
 Or torrents owre a linn, man;
 The Bench sae wise lift up their eyes,
 Half-wauken'd wi' the din, man.

No. 329. *Orthodox! orthodox! wha believe in Tune: Come, let us prepare. Watts's Musical Miscellany, 1730, iii. p. 72.

Boldly

Or - tho - dox! or - tho - dox! Wha be - lieve in John Knox, Let me sound an a - larm to your conscience— A her - e - tic blast
 Has been blawn i' the wast, That 'What is not sense must be non -
 - sense': Or - tho - dox! That what is not sense must be non - sense.'

ORTHODOX! orthodox!
 Wha believe in John Knox,
 Let me sound an alarm to your conscience—
 A heretic blast
 Has been blawn i' the wast,
 That 'What is not sense must be nonsense':
 Orthodox! That what is not sense must be nonsense.

Doctor Mac! Doctor Mac!
 You should streek on a rack,
 To strike evil-doers wi' terror;
 To join Faith and Sense,
 Upon ony pretence,
 Was heretic, damnable error,
 Doctor Mac—was heretic, damnable error.

Town of Ayr, town of Ayr,
 It was mad, I declare,
 To meddle wi' mischief a-brewing;
 Provost John is still deaf,
 To the Church's relief,
 And Orator Bob is its ruin—
 Town of Ayr! And Orator Bob is its ruin.

D'rymple mild, D'rymple mild,
 Tho' your heart's like a child,
 And your life like the new-driven snaw;
 Yet that winna save ye,
 Auld Satan must have ye
 For preaching that three's ane and twa—
 D'rymple mild! For preaching that three's ane and twa.

Calvin's sons, Calvin's sons,
 Scour your spiritual guns,
 Ammunition you never can need;
 Your hearts are the stuff
 Will be powther enough,
 And your skulls are a storehouse o' lead—
 Calvin's sons! And your skulls are a storehouse o' lead.

Rumble John! Rumble John!
 Mount the steps with a groan,
 Cry:—'The book is wi' heresy cramm'd';
 Then out wi' your ladle,
 Deal brimstone like adle,
 And roar ev'ry note o' the damn'd—
 Rumble John! And roar ev'ry note o' the damn'd.

Simper James! Simper James,
 Leave the fair Killie dames,
 There's a holier chase in your view;
 I'll lay on your head
 That the pack ye'll soon lead,
 For puppies like you there's but few—
 Simper James! For puppies like you there's but few.

Singet Sawnie! Singet Sawnie,
 Are ye huirding the penny,
 Unconscious what evils await?
 Wi' a jump, yell, and howl,
 Alarm ev'ry soul,
 For the foul thief is just at your gates,
 Singet Sawnie! For the foul thief is just at your gates.

Poet Willie! Poet Willie,
 Gie the Doctor a volley,
 Wi' your 'Liberty's chain' and your wit;
 O'er Pegasus' side
 Ye ne'er laid a stride,
 Ye but smelt, man, the place where he —
 Poet Willie! Ye but smelt, man, the place where he —

Barr Steenie! Barr Steenie,
 What mean ye, what mean ye?
 If ye'll meddle nae mair wi' the matter,
 Ye may hae some pretence,
 To havins and sense,
 Wi' people wha ken ye nae better—
 Barr Steenie! Wi' people wha ken ye nae better.

Jamie Goose! Jamie Goose,
 Ye hae made but toom roose,
 In hunting the wicked Lieutenant;
 But the Doctor's your mark,
 For the Lord's haly ark
 He has cooper'd and ca'd a wrang pin in't,— Jamie Goose! He has cooper'd and ca'd a wrang pin in't.

Davie Bluster! Davie Bluster,
 For a saint if ye muster,
 The corps is no nice o' recruits;
 Yet to worth let's be just,
 Royal blood ye might boast,
 If the Ass were the king o' the brutes,—
 Davie Bluster! If the Ass were the king o' the brutes.

Cessnock side! Cessnock side,
 Wi' your turkey-cock pride,
 Of manhood but sma' is your share;
 Ye've the figure, 'tis true,
 Even your faes will allow,
 And your friends daurna say ye hae mair—
 Cessnock side! And your friends daurna say ye hae mair.

Muirland Jock! Muirland Jock,
 Whom the Lord gave a stock
 Wad set up a tinkler in brass,
 If ill manners were wit,
 There's no mortal so fit
 To prove the poor Doctor an ass—
 Muirland Jock! To prove the poor Doctor an ass.

Andro Gouk! Andro Gouk,
 Ye may slander the Book,
 And the Book not the waur, let me tell ye;
 Tho' ye're rich, and look big,
 Yet, lay by hat and wig,
 And ye'll hae a calf's head o' sma' value—
 Andro Gouk! And ye'll hae a calf's head o' sma' value.

Daddy Auld! Daddy Auld,
 There's a tod in the fauld,
 A tod meikle waur than the clerk;
 Though ye do little skaith,
 Ye'll be in at the death,
 And gif ye canna bite, ye may bark,
 Daddy Auld! And gif ye canna bite, ye may bark.

Holy Will, Holy Will,
 There was wit in your skull
 When ye pilfer'd the alms o' the poor;
 The timmer is scant,
 When ye're taen for a saunt,
 Wha should swing in a rape for an hour—
 Holy Will! Wha should swing in a rape for an hour.

Poet Burns! Poet Burns,
 Wi' your priest-skelping turns,
 Why desert ye your auld native shire?
 Your Muse is a gipsy—
 E'en tho' she were tipsy,
 She could ca' us nae waur than we are,—
 Poet Burns! Ye could ca' us nae waur than we are.

PRESENTATION VERSES TO CORRESPONDENTS.

Factor John! Factor John,
 Whom the Lord made alone,
 And ne'er made anither, thy peer,
 Thy poor servant, the Bard,
 In respectful regard,
 He presents thee this token sincere,
 Factor John! He presents thee this token sincere.

Afton's Laird! Afton's Laird,
 When your pen can be spar'd,
 A copy of this I bequeath,
 On the same sicker score
 As I mention'd before,
 To that trusty auld worthy, Clackleith,
 Afton's Laird! To that trusty auld worthy, Clackleith.

No. 330. Peg Nicholson was a good bay mare.

Tune: Chevy Chase (see No. 267 or 274).

PEG Nicholson was a good bay mare
 As ever trod on airn;
 But now she's floating down the Nith,
 And past the mouth o' Cairn.

Peg Nicholson was a good bay mare,
 An' rode thro' thick an' thin;
 But now she's floating down the Nith,
 And wanting even the skin.

Peg Nicholson was a good bay mare,
 And ance she bore a priest;
 But now she's floating down the Nith,
 For Solway fish a feast.

Peg Nicholson was a good bay mare,
 An' the priest he rode her sair;
 And much oppress'd, and bruis'd she was,
 As priest-rid cattle are!

No. 331. There livèd a carl in Kellyburn braes.

Tune: Kellyburn braes. Scots Musical Museum, 1792, No. 379.

Briskly

There liv - èd a carl in Kel - ly - burn braes, (Hey and the rue grows bon - ie wi' thyme), And he had a wife was the plague o' his days (And the thyme it is with-er'd, and rue is in prime).

THERE livèd a carl in Kellyburn braes,
 (Hey and the rue grows bonie wi' thyme),
 And he had a wife was the plague o' his days
 (And the thyme it is wither'd, and rue is in prime).

Ae day as the carl gaed up the lang glen,
 (Hey and the rue grows bonie wi' thyme),
 He met wi' the devil, says:—'How do you fen?'
 (And the thyme it is wither'd, and rue is in prime).

'I've got a bad wife, sir: that's a' my complaint
 (Hey and the rue grows bonie wi' thyme),
 For, saving your presence, to her ye're a saint'
 (And the thyme it is wither'd, and rue is in prime).

'It's neither your stot nor your staig I shall crave
 (Hey and the rue grows bonie wi' thyme),
 But gie me your wife, man, for her I must have'
 (And the thyme it is wither'd, and rue is in prime).

'Oh! welcome, most kindly,' the blythe carl said
 (Hey and the rue grows bonie wi' thyme),
 'But if ye can match her,—ye're waur than ye're ca'd'
 (And the thyme it is wither'd, and rue is in prime).

The devil has got the auld wife on his back
 (Hey and the rue grows bonie wi' thyme),
 And, like a poor pedlar, he's carried his pack
 (And the thyme it is wither'd, and rue is in prime).

He's carried her hame to his ain hallan-door
 (Hey and the rue grows bonie wi' thyme),
 Syne bade her gae in for a bitch and a whore
 (And the thyme it is wither'd, and rue is in prime).

Then straight he makes fifty, the pick o' his band
 (Hey and the rue grows bonie wi' thyme),
 Turn out on her guard in the clap o' a hand
 (And the thyme it is wither'd, and rue is in prime).

The carlin gaed thro' them like ony wud bear
 (Hey and the rue grows bonie wi' thyme):
 Whae'er she gat hands on cam near her nae mair
 (And the thyme it is wither'd, and rue is in prime).

A reekit wee deevil looks over the wa'
 (Hey and the rue grows bonie wi' thyme):
 'O, help, master, help! or she'll ruin us a!'
 (And the thyme it is wither'd, and rue is in prime).

The devil he swore by the edge o' his knife
 (Hey and the rue grows bonie wi' thyme),
 He pitied the man that was tied to a wife
 (And the thyme it is wither'd, and rue is in prime).

The devil he swore by the kirk and the bell
 (Hey and the rue grows bonie wi' thyme).
 He was not in wedlock, thank Heaven, but in hell
 (And the thyme it is wither'd, and rue is in prime).

Then Satan has travell'd again wi' his pack
 (Hey and the rue grows bonie wi' thyme),
 And to her auld husband he's carried her back
 (And the thyme it is wither'd, and rue is in prime).

'I hae been a devil the feck o' my life
 (Hey and the rue grows bonie wi' thyme),
 But ne'er was in hell till I met wi' a wife
 (And the thyme it is wither'd, and rue is in prime).

No. 332. *There was three kings into the east.*Tune : Lull me beyond thee. Playford's Dancing Master, 1670, p. 148.

Smoothly

There was three kings in - to the east, Three kings both great and high; And they hae sworn a so - lemn oath John Bar - ley - corn should die. They took a plough and plough'd him down, Put clods up - on his head; And they hae sworn a so - lemn oath John Bar - ley - corn was dead.

THERE was three kings into the east,
Three kings both great and high;
And they hae sworn a solemn oath
John Barleycorn should die.

They took a plough and plough'd him
down,
Put clods upon his head;
And they hae sworn a solemn oath
John Barleycorn was dead.

But the cheerful Spring came kindly
And show'rs began to fall; [on,
John Barleycorn got up again,
And sore surprised them all.

The sultry suns of Summer came,
And he grew thick and strong;
His head weel arm'd wi' pointed spears,
That no one should him wrong.

The sober Autumn enter'd mild,
When he grew wan and pale;
His bending joints and drooping
head
Show'd he began to fail.

His colour sicken'd more and more,
He faded into age;
And then his enemies began
To show their deadly rage.

They've taen a weapon long and sharp,
And cut him by the knee;
Then tied him fast upon a cart,
Like a rogue for forgerie.

They laid him down upon his back,
And cudgell'd him full sore;
They hung him up before the storm,
And turn'd him o'er and o'er.

They fillèd up a darksome pit
With water to the brim ;
They heaved in John Barleycorn,—
There, let him sink or swim !

They laid him out upon the floor,
To work him farther woe ;
And still, as signs of life appear'd
They toss'd him to and fro.

They wasted o'er a scorching flame
The marrow of his bones ;
But a miller used him worst of all,
For he crush'd him 'tween two stones.

And they hae taen his very heart's blood,
And drank it round and round,

And still the more and more they drank,
Their joy did more abound.

John Barleycorn was a hero bold,
Of noble enterprise ;
For if you do but taste his blood,
'Twill make your courage rise.
'Twill make a man forget his woe ;
'Twill heighten all his joy :
'Twill make the widow's heart to sing,
Tho' the tear were in her eye.

Then let us toast John Barleycorn
Each man a glass in hand ;
And may his great posterity
Ne'er fail in old Scotland !

No. 333. When Januar' wind was blawin cauld.

Tune: The lass that made the bed to me. Scots Musical Mus. 1796, No. 448.

When Jan - uar' wind was blaw - in cauld, As to the north I took my way, The mirk - some night did me en - fauld, I knew na where to lodge till day.

WHEN Januar' wind was blawin cauld,
As to the north I took my way,
The mirksome night did me enfauld,
I knew na where to lodge till day.

By my gude luck a maid I met
Just in the middle o' my care ;
And kindly she did me invite
To walk into a chamber fair.

I bow'd fu' low unto this maid,
And thank'd her for her courtesie ;
I bow'd fu' low unto this maid,
An' bade her mak a bed to me.

She made the bed baith large and wide,
 Wi' twa white hands she spread it doun,
 She put the cup to her rosy lips,
 And drank :—'Young man, now sleep ye soun'.'

She snatch'd the candle in her hand,
 And frae my chamber went wi' speed ;
 But I call'd her quickly back again,
 To lay some mair below my head.

A cod she laid below my head,
 And servèd me with due respect,
 And, to salute her wi' a kiss,
 I put my arms about her neck.

'Haud aff your hands, young man,' she said,
 'And dinna sae uncivil be ;
 Gif ye hae onie luvè for me,
 O, wrang na my virginie !'

Her hair was like the links o' gowd,
 Her teeth were like the ivorie,
 Her cheeks like lilies dipt in wine,
 The lass that made the bed to me !

Her bosom was the driven snaw,
 Twa drifted heaps sae fair to see ;
 Her limbs the polish'd marble stane,
 The lass that made the bed to me !

I kiss'd her o'er and o'er again,
 And ay she wist na what to say ;
 I laid her 'tween me an' the wa'—
 The lassie thocht na lang till day.

Upon the morrow, when we raise,
 I thank'd her for her courtesie,
 But ay she blush'd, and ay she sigh'd,
 And said :—'Alas, ye've ruin'd me !'

I clasp'd her waist, and kiss'd her syne,
 While the tear stood twinkling in her e'e ;
 I said :—'My lassie, dinna cry,
 For ye ay shall mak the bed to me.'

She took her mither's Holland sheets,
 An' made them a' in sarks to me ;
 Blythe and merry may she be,
 The lass that made the bed to me !

The bonie lass made the bed to me,
 The braw lass made the bed to me ;
 I'll ne'er forget, till the day I die,
 The lass that made the bed to me !

'O father, O father, an ye think it fit,
 We'll send him a year to the college yet ;
 We'll sew a green ribbon round about his hat,
 And that will let them ken he's to marry yet.')

Lady Mary Ann was a flower in the dew,
 Sweet was its smell, and bonie was its hue,
 And the longer it blossom'd the sweeter it grew,
 For the lily in the bud will be bonier yet.

Young Charlie Cochran was the sprout of an aik ;
 Bonie and bloomin and straught was its make,
 The sun took delight to shine for its sake,
 And it will be the brag o' the forest yet.

The simmer is gane when the leaves they were green,
 And the days are awa that we hae seen ;
 But far better days I trust will come again,
 For my bonie laddie's young, but he's growin yet.

The wind blew in the hallan ae night,
Fu' snell out o'er the moor, O;
'Rise up, rise up, auld Luckie,' he says,
'Rise up and bar the door, O;'

They made a paction 'tween them twa,
They made it firm and sure, O,
Whae'er sud speak the foremost word,
Should rise and bar the door, O.

Three travellers that had tint their gate,
As thro' the hills they foor, O;
They airted by the line o' light
Fu' straught to Johnie Blunt's door, O.

They haur'd auld Luckie out o' her bed,
And laid her on the floor, O;
But never a word auld Luckie wad say,
For barrin o' the door, O.

Up - on the Lo-monds I lay, I lay, Up - on the Lo-monds

I lay, I lay, I look - èd down to bon - ie

Loch - ie - ven And saw three bon - ie perch - es play.

CHORUS. The Campbells are comin, Oho! Oho!
The Campbells are comin, Oho! Oho!
The Campbells are comin to bonie Lochleven,
The Campbells are comin, Oho! Oho!

UPON the Lomonds I lay, I lay,
 Upon the Lomonds I lay, I lay,
 I lookèd down to bonie Lochleven
 And saw three bonie perches play.

Great Argyle he goes before;
 He maks his cannons and guns to roar,
 Wi' sound o' trumpet, pipe and drum;
 The Campbells are comin, Oho! Oho!

The Campbells they are a' in arms,
 Their loyal faith and truth to show,
 Wi' banners rattling in the wind,
 The Campbells are comin, Oho! Oho!

So Jock - ie had sil - ler and San - dy had plea - sure.

Twa bonie lads were Sandy and Jockie,
Jockie was lo'ed but Sandy unlucky,
Jockie was laird baith of hills and of vallies,
But Sandy was nought but the king o' gude fellows.
Jockie lo'ed Madgie, for Madgie had money,
And Sandy lo'ed Mary for Mary was bonie,
Ane wedded for love, ane wedded for treasure,
So Jockie had siller and Sandy had pleasure.

No. 339. *Our lords are to the mountains gane.*Tune : Druimíonn dubh (see No. 32).

OUR lords are to the mountains gane,
A hunting o' the fallow deer ;
And they hae gripit Hughie Graham,
For stealing o' the bishop's mare.

And they hae tied him hand and foot,
 And led him up thro' Stirling town;
 The lads and lassies met him there,
 Cried 'Hughie Graham thou art a loun.'

'O lowse my right hand free,' he says,
 'And put my braid sword in the same,
 He's no in Stirling town this day,
 Daur tell the tale to Hughie Graham.'

Up then bespake the brave Whitefoord,
 As he sat by the bishop's knee;
 'Five hundred white stots I'll gie you,
 If ye'll let Hughie Graham gae free.'

'O haud your tongue,' the bishop says,
 'And wi' your pleading let me be;
 For tho' ten Grahams were in his coat,
 Hughie Graham this day shall die.'

Up then bespake the fair Whitefoord,
 As she sat by the bishop's knee,
 'Five hundred white pence I'll gie you,
 If ye'll gie Hughie Graham to me.'

'O haud your tongue now lady fair,
 And wi' your pleading let it be;
 Altho' ten Grahams were in his coat,
 It's for my honor he maun die.'

They've taen him to the gallows knowe,
 He lookèd to the gallows tree,
 Yet never color left his cheek,
 Nor ever did he blin' his e'e.

At length he lookèd round about,
 To see whatever he could spy,
 And there he saw his auld fathèr,
 And he was weeping bitterly.

'O haud your tongue, my father dear
 And wi' your weeping let it be;
 *For tho' they rob me o' my life,
 They cannot o' the Heaven hie.

And ye may gie my brother John
 My sword that's bent in the middle clear,
 And let him come at twelve o'clock,
 And see me pay the bishop's mare.

* Variation in Museum: 'Thy weeping's sairer on my heart
 Than a' that they can do to me.'

'And ye may gie my brother James
My sword that's bent in the middle brown,
And bid him come at four o'clock,
And see his brother Hugh cut down.

'Remember me to Maggy, my wife,
The niest time ye gang o'er the moor,
Tell her she staw the bishop's mare,
Tell her she was the bishop's whore.

'And ye may tell my kith and kin
I never did disgrace their blood ;
And when they meet the bishop's cloak,
To make it shorter by the hood.'

Tune : As I cam down, &c. Scots Musical Museum, 1792, No. 326.

Slow

As I cam down by yon cas - tle wa', And in by yon gar - den green, O, there I spied a bon - ie, bon - ie lass, But the flower - bor - ders were us be - tween.

As I cam down by yon castle wa',
And in by yon garden green,
O, there I spied a bonie, bonie lass,
But the flower-borders were us between.

A bonie, bonie lassie she was,
As ever mine eyes did see :
'O, five hundred pounds would I give,
For to have such a pretty bride as thee.'

'To have such a pretty bride as me,
Young man ye are sairly mistaen ;
Tho' ye were king o' fair Scotland,
I wad disdain to be your queen.'

'Talk not so very high, bonie lass,
 O talk not so very, very high :
 The man at the fair that wad sell,
 He maun learn at the man that wad buy.

'I trust to climb a far higher tree,
 And herry a far richer nest :
 Tak this advice o' me bonie lass,
 Humility wad set thee best.'

Very slow

'O, where hae ye been, Lord Ron - ald, my son?
 O, where hae ye been, Lord Ron - ald, my son?' 'I hae been wi' my sweet-heart, mo-ther, make my bed soon, For I'm wea - ry wi' the hunt-ing, and fain wad lie down,'

'O, WHERE hae ye been Lord Ronald, my son?
 O, where hae ye been Lord Ronald, my son?'
 'I hae been wi' my sweetheart, mother, make my bed soon,
 For I'm weary wi' the hunting, and fain wad lie down.'

'What got ye frae your sweetheart, Lord Ronald, my son?
 What got ye frae your sweetheart, Lord Ronald, my son?'
 'I hae got deadly poison, mother, make my bed soon,
 For life is a burden that soon I'll lay down.'

No. 342. *As I went out ae May morning.*Tune: As I went out, &c. Scots Musical Museum, 1792, No. 397.Lively

As I went out ae May morn - ing, A May morn -
 - ing it chanc'd to be; There I was a - ware of a weel - far'd maid, Cam lin - kin o'er the lea to me.

As I went out ae May morning,
 A May morning it chanc'd to be;
 There I was aware of a weel-far'd maid,
 Cam linkin o'er the lea to me.

O, but she was a weel-far'd maid,
 The boniest lass that's under the sun;
 I spier'd gin she could fancy me,
 But her answer was, 'I am too young.

'To be your bride I am too young,
 To be your loun wad shame my kin,
 So therefore pray young man begone,
 For you never, never shall my favour win.'

But amang yon birks and hawthorns green,
 Where roses blaw and woodbines hing,
 O, there I learn'd my bonie lass,
 That she was not a single hour too young.

The lassie blush'd, the lassie sigh'd,
 And the tear stood twinklin in her e'e;
 'O kind Sir, since ye hae done me this wrang,
 It's pray when will ye marry me.'

'It's of that day tak ye nae heed,
 For that's a day ye ne'er shall see;
 For ought that pass'd between us twa,
 Ye had your share as weel as me.'

She wrang her hands, she tore her hair,
 She crièd out most bitterlie,
 'O, what will I say to my mammie
 When I gae hame wi' a fause storie.'

'O, as ye maut, so maun ye brew,
 And as ye brew, so maun ye tun :
 But come to my arms, my ae bonie lass,
 For ye never shall rue what ye now hae done.'

No. 343. There was a battle in the north.

Tune : A country lass. Scots Musical Museum, 1792, No. 346.

The musical notation is written on a single staff in G minor (one flat) and 3/4 time. It consists of two lines of music. The first line contains the first four measures of the melody, and the second line contains the remaining four measures, ending with a double bar line. The lyrics are placed below the notes.

There was a bat - tle in the north, And nobles there was many, And they hae kill'd Sir Char-lie Hay, And they laid the wyte on Geor-die.

THERE was a battle in the north,
 And nobles there was many,
 And they hae kill'd Sir Charlie Hay,
 And they laid the wyte on Geordie.

O, he has written a lang letter—
 He sent it to his lady :—
 'Ye maun cum up to Enbrugh town
 To see what words o' Geordie.'

When first she look'd the letter on,
 She was baith red and rosy ;
 But she had na read a word but twa,
 Till she wallow't like a lily.

'Gar get to me my gude grey steed,
 My menzie a' gae wi' me ;
 For I shall neither eat nor drink
 Till Enbrugh town shall see me.'

And she has mountit her gude grey steed,
 Her menzie a' gaed wi' her ;
 And she did neither eat nor drink
 Till Enbrugh town did see her.

And first appear'd the fatal block,
 And syne the aix to head him,
 And Geordie comin down the stair
 And bands o' airn upon him.

But tho' he was chain'd in fetters strang
 O' airn and steel sae heavy,
 There was na ane in a' the court
 Sae bra' a man as Geordie.

O, she's down on her bended knee,
 I wat she 's pale and weary ;
 'O pardon, pardon, noble king
 And gie me back my Dearie!

'I hae born seven sons to my Geordie dear
 The seventh ne'er saw his daddie :
 O, pardon, pardon, noble king,
 Pity a waefu' lady!'

'Gar bid the headin-man mak haste!'
 Our king reply'd fu' lordly :
 'O noble king, tak a' that 's mine
 But gie me back my Geordie.'

The Gordons cam and the Gordons ran
 And they were stark and steady ;
 And ay the word amang them a',
 Was, 'Gordons keep you ready.'

An aged lord at the king's right hand
 Says : 'Noble king, but hear me:—
 Gar her tell down five thousand pound,
 And gie her back her Dearie.'

Some gae her marks, some gae her crowns,
 Some gae her dollars many ;
 And she 's tell'd down five thousand pound,
 And she 's gotten again her Dearie.

She blinkit blythe in her Geordie's face,
 Says : 'Dear I've bought thee, Geordie,
 But there sud been bluidy bouks on the green
 Or I had tint my laddie.'

He claspit her by the middle sma,
 And he kist her lips sae rosy,
 'The fairest flower o' woman-kind
 Is my sweet bonie Lady.'

No. 344. *O, I forbid you maidens a'.*Tune: Tam Lin. Scots Musical Museum, 1796, No. 411.Andante

O, I FORBID you maidens a',
That wear gowd on your hair,
To come or gae by Carterhaugh,
For young Tam Lin is there.

There's nanethat gaes by Carterhaugh
But they leave him a wad;
Either their rings, or green mantles,
Or else their maidenhead.

Janet has belted her green kirtle
A little aboon her knee;
And she has broded her yellow hair
A little aboon her bree;
And she's awa to Carterhaugh
As fast as she can hie!

But when she cam to Carterhaugh,
Tam Lin was at the well,
And there she fand his steed standing,
But away was himsel.

She hadna pu'd a double rose,
A rose but only twae,
Till up then started young Tam Lin
Says, 'Lady thou's pu' nae mae.

'Why pu's thou the rose, Janet,
And why breaks thou the wand!
Or, why comes thou to Carterhaugh
Withoutten my command?'

'Carterhaugh it is my ain;
My daddie gave it me,
I'll come and gang by Carterhaugh,
And ask nae leave at thee.'

Janet has kilted her green kirtle
A little aboon her knee,
And she has snooded her yellow hair
A little aboon her bree,
And she is to her father's ha'
As fast as she can hie.

Four and twenty ladies fair
Were playing at the ba',
And out then cam the fair Janet
Ance the flower among them a'.

Four and twenty ladies fair
Were playing at the chess,
And out then cam the fair Janet
As green as ony glass.

Out then spak an auld grey knight
Lay o'er the castle wa';
And says: 'Alas! fair Janet for thee
But we'll be blamèd a'.'

'Haud your tongue, ye auld fac'd knight,
Some ill death may ye die,
Father my bairn on whom I will,
I'll father nane on thee.'

Out then spak her father dear,
And he spak meek and mild,
'And ever alas! Sweet Janet,' he says—
'I think thou gaes wi' child.'

'If that I gae wi' child, father,
Mysel maun bear the blame,
There's ne'er a laird about your ha',
Shall get the bairn's name.'

'If my love were an earthly knight,
As he's an elfin gray,
I wadna gie my ain true-love
For nae lord that ye hae.

'The steed that my true-love rides on
Is lighter than the wind ;
Wi' siller he is shod before,
Wi' burning gowd behind.'

Janet has kilted her green kirtle
A little aboon her knee ;
And she has snooded her yellow hair
A little aboon her bree ;
And she's awa to Carterhaugh
As fast as she can hie.

When she cam to Carterhaugh,
Tam Lin was at the well ;
And there she fand his steed standing,
But away was himsel.

She hadna pu'd a double rose,
A rose but only twae ;
Till up then started young Tam Lin
Says, 'Lady thou's pu' nae mae.

'Why pu's thou the rose, Janet,
Amang the groves sae green,
And a' to kill the bonie babe
That we gat us between ?'

'O, tell me tell me, Tam Lin,' she says,
'For 's sake that died on tree,
If e'er ye was in holy chapel,
Or Christendom did see.'

'Roxbrugh he was my grandfather
Took me with him to bide,
And ance it fell upon a day,
That wae did me betide.

'And ance it fell upon a day,
A cauld day and a snell,
When we were frae the hunting come
That frae my horse I fell.

'The Queen o' Fairies she caught me
In yon green hill to dwell,
And pleasant is the fairy-land :—
But, an eerie tale to tell !

'Ay, at the end o' seven years
We pay a tiend to hell !
I am sae fair and fu' o' flesh
I'm fear'd it be mysel.

'But the night is Hallowe'en, lady,
The morn is Hallowday ;
Then win me, win me, an ye will,
For weel I wat ye may.

'Just at the mirk and midnight hour
The fairy folk will ride ;
And they that wad their true-love win
At Milecross they maun bide.'

'But how shall I thee ken, Tam Lin,
Or how my true-love know,
Amang sae mony unco knights
The like I never saw.'

'O first let pass the black, lady,
And syne let pass the brown ;
But quickly run to the milk-white
steed,
Pu' ye his rider down.

'For I'll ride on the milk-white steed,
And ay nearest the town,
Because I was an earthly knight
They gie me that renown.

'My right hand will be glov'd, lady,
My left hand will be bare,
Cockt up shall my bonnet be
And kaim'd down shall my hair ;
And thae 's the tokens I gie thee—
Nae doubt I will be there :

'They'll turn me in your arms, lady,
Into an esk and adder,
But hold me fast and fear me not—
I am your bairn's father.

'They'll turn me to a bear sae grim,
And then a lion bold ;
But hold me fast and fear me not,
As ye shall love your child.

'Again they'll turn me in your arms
To a red het gaud of airn ;
But hold me fast and fear me not,
I'll do to you nae harm.

'And last they'll turn me in your arms
 Into the burning lead :
 Then throw me into well water ;
 O ! throw me in wi' speed.

'And then I'll be your ain true love,
 I'll turn a naked knight ;
 Then cover me wi' your green
 mantle,
 And cover me out o' sight.'

Gloomy, gloomy was the night,
 And eerie was the way,
 As fair Jenny in her green mantle,
 To Milecross she did gae.

About the middle o' the night,
 She heard the bridles ring ;
 This lady was as glad at that
 As any earthly thing.

First she let the black pass by,
 And syne she let the brown ;
 But quickly she ran to the milk-white
 steed,
 And pu'd the rider down.

Sae weel she minded what he did say
 And young Tam Lin did win ;
 Syne cover'd him wi' her green
 mantle,
 As blythe's a bird in Spring.

Out then spak the queen o' fairies,
 'Out of a bush o' broom ;
 'Them that has gotten young Tam
 Lin
 Has gotten a stately groom.'

Out then spak the queen o' fairies,
 And an angry queen was she :
 'Shame betide her ill-far'd face,
 And an ill death may she die,
 For she's taen awa the boniest knight
 In a' my companie.

'But had I kend, Tam Lin,' she says
 'What now this night I see,
 I wad hae taen out thy twa grey een,
 And put in twa een o' tree.'

No. 345. Aften hae I play'd at the cards and the dice.

Tune : The rantin laddie. Scots Musical Museum, 1796, No. 462.

Slow

Af - ten hae I play'd at the cards and the dice,
 For the love of a bon - ie ran - tin lad - die ;
 But now I maun sit in my fa - ther's kitch-en
 neuk, And ba - lou a bas - tard ba - bie.

AFTEN hae I play'd at the cards and the dice,
 For the love of a bonie rantin laddie;
 But now I maun sit in my father's kitchen neuk,
 And balou a bastard babie.

For my father he will not me own,
 And my mother she neglects me,
 And a' my friends hae lightlied me,
 And their servants they do slight me.

But had I a servant at my command—
 As aft times I've had many,
 That wad rin wi' a letter to bonie Glenswood—
 Wi' a letter to my rantin laddie.

'Oh, is he either a laird or a lord,
 Or is he but a cadie,
 That ye do him ca' sae aften by name,
 Your bonie, bonie rantin laddie.'

'Indeed he is baith a laird and a lord,
 And he never was a cadie,
 For he is the Earl o' bonie Aboyne,
 And he is my rantin laddie.'

'O ye'se get a servant at your command,
 As aft times ye've had many,
 That sall rin wi' a letter to bonie Glenswood—
 A letter to your rantin laddie.'

When Lord Aboyne did the letter get,
 O, but he blinket bonie;
 But or he had read three lines of it,
 I think his heart was sorry.

'O, wha is he daur be sae bauld,
 Sae cruelly to use my lassie?'

[But I'll tak her to bonie Aboyne
 Where oft she did caress me.]

'For her father he will not her know,
 And her mother she does slight her;
 And a' her friends hae lightlied her,
 And their servants they neglect her.'

'Go raise to me my five hundred men,
 Make haste and make them ready;
 With a milkwhite steed under every ane
 For to bring hame my lady.'

As they came in through Buchan-shire,
 They were a company bonie,
 With a gude claymore in every hand
 And O, but they shin'd bonie.

Slow

Our young la - dy's a hunt - in gane, Sheets nor blan - kets has she taen, But she's born her auld son or she cam hame, And she's row'd him in her a - pron.

OUR young lady's a huntin gane,
 Sheets nor blankets has she taen,
 But she's born her auld son or she cam hame,
 And she's row'd him in her apron.

Her apron was o' the hollan fine,
 Laid about wi' laces nine;
 She thought it a pity her babie should tyne,
 And she's row'd him in her apron.

Her apron was o' the hollan sma',
 Laid about wi' laces a',
 She thought it a pity her babe to let fa';
 And she row'd him in her apron.

* * * * *

Her father says within the ha',
 Among the knights and nobles a':—
 'I think I hear a babie ca'
 In the chamber among our young ladies.'

'O father dear! it is a bairn,
 I hope it will do you nae harm,
 For the laddie I lo'ed, and he'll lo'e me again,
 For the rowin't in my apron.'

O, is he a gentleman, or is a clown,
 That has brought thy fair body down?
 I would not for a' this town
 The rowin't in thy apron.'

'Young Terreagles is nae clown,
He is the toss of Edinborrow town,
And he'll buy me a braw new gown
For the rowin't in my apron.'

'It's I hae castles, I hae towers,
I hae barns, and I hae bowers;
A' that is mine it shall be thine
For the rowin't in thy apron.'

No. 347. 'O, for my ain king,' quo' gude Wallace.

Tune: Gude Wallace. Scots Musical Museum, 1796, No. 484.

Slowish

'O, for my ain king,' quo' gude Wal-lace, 'The right -
- fu' king of fair Scot-land, Be-tween me and my sove-reign blude, I think I see some ill seed sawn.'

'O, FOR my ain king,' quo' gude Wallace,
'The rightfu' king of fair Scotland,
Between me and my sovereign blude,
I think I see some ill seed sawn.'

Wallace out over yon river he lap,
And he has lighted low down on yon plain,
And he was aware of a gay ladie,
As she was at the well washing.

'What tydins, what tydins, fair lady,' he says,
'What tydins hast thou to tell unto me—
What tydins, what tydins, fair lady,' he says,
'What tydins hae ye in the south countrie?'

'Low down in yon wee Ostler-house
There is fyfteen Englishmen,
And they are seekin for gude Wallace;
It's him to take, and him to hang.'

'There's nocht in my purse,' quo' gude Wallace,
 'There's nocht, not even a bare pennie;
 But I will down to yon wee Ostler-house
 Thir fyfteen Englishmen to see.'

And when he cam to yon wee Ostler-house
 He bad benedicite be there;
 [The Englishmen at the table sat
 The wine-fac'd captain at him did stare.]

'Where was ye born, auld crookit carl,
 Where was ye born—in what countrie?'
 'I am a true Scot born and bred,
 And an auld crookit carl just sic as ye see.'

'I wad gie fyfteen shillings to onie crookit carl—
 To onie crookit carl just sic as ye,
 If ye will get me gude Wallace,
 For he is the man I wad very fain see.'

He hit the proud captain along the chaft blade,
 That never a bit o' meal he ate mair;
 And he sticket the rest at the table where they sat,
 And he left them a' lyin sprawlin there.

'Get up, get up, gudewife,' he says,
 'And get to me some dinner in haste;
 For it will soon be three lang days
 Sin I a bit o' meat did taste.'

The dinner was na weel readie,
 Nor was it on the table set,
 Till other fyfteen Englishmen
 Were a' lighted about the yett.

'Come out, come out, now gude Wallace
 This is the day that thou maun die;'
 'I lippen nae sae little to God,' he says,
 'Altho' I be but ill wordie.'

The gudewife had an auld gudeman,
 By gude Wallace he stiffly stood;
 Till ten o' the fyfteen Englishmen
 Before the door lay in their blude.

The other five to the greenwood ran,
 And he hang'd these five upon a grain;
 And on the morn wi' his merry men a'
 He sat at dine in Lochmaben town.

No. 348. *Near Edinburgh was a young son born.*Tune: Hynde Horn. Motherwell's Minstrelsy, No. 13.

The musical score is written on three staves in G major (one sharp) and common time (C). The melody is on the first staff, and the accompaniment is on the second and third staves. The lyrics are written below the staves.

Near Ed - in - burgh was a young son born,— Hey li - le - call - ed young Hyn horn, An' it's hey down down, deedle air - o.

NEAR Edinburgh was a young son born,—

Hey lilelu an' a how low lan',

An' his name it was callèd young Hynhorn,

An' it's hey down down, deedle airo.

Seven long years he served the king,—

Hey lilelu, &c.

And it's a' for the sake of his daughter Jean,—

An' it's hey down, &c.

The king an angry man was he,—

He sent young Hynhorn to the sea.

* * * * *

An' on his finger she put a ring,

[Wi' three shining diamonds set therein.]

When your ring turns pale and wan,

Then I'm in love wi' another man.

* * * * *

Upon a day he look'd at his ring,

It was as pale as any thing.

He's left the sea, and he's come to the lan',

And there he met an auld beggar man.

'What news, what news, my auld beggar man,

What news, what news by sea or by lan'?'

'Nae news, nae news,' the auld beggar said,

'But the king's daughter Jean is going to be wed.'

'Cast off, cast off, thy auld beggar weed,

An' I'll gie thee my gude grey steed.'

* * * * *

When he cam to our gude king's yett,
 He sought a glass o' wine for young Hynhorn's sake.
 He drank out the wine and he put in the ring,
 And he bade them carry't to the king's dochter Jean.

* * * * *

'O gat ye't by sea, or gat ye't by lan',
 O gat ye't aff a dead man's han'?

'I gat na't by sea, I gat na't by lan',
 But I gat it out of your own fair han'.'

 Has put their heads in bees, Sir;
 They're a' fa'en out among themsel's—
 Deil tak the first that grees, Sir.

No. 350. O, that I were where Helen lies.

Tune: Where Helen lies. Blaikie's MS., 1692.

O, THAT I were where Helen lies!
 Night and day on me she cries;
 O, that I were where Helen lies
 In fair Kirkconnel lee.

O Helen fair! beyond compare,
 A ringlet of thy flowing hair,
 I'll wear it still for evermair
 Until the day I die.

Curs'd be the hand that shot the shot,
 And curs'd the gun that gave the crack,
 Into my arms bird Helen lap,
 And died for sake o' me.

O think na ye but my heart was sair,
 My love fell down and spake nae
 mair,
 There did she swoon wi' meikle care
 On fair Kirkconnel lee.

I lighted down, my sword did draw,
 I cutted him in pieces sma';
 I cutted him in pieces sma'
 On fair Kirkconnel lee.

O Helen chaste, thou wert modest*
 If I were with thee I were blest, Where thou lies low, and takes thy rest
 On fair Kirkconnel lee.

I wish my grave was growing green,
 A winding sheet put o'er my een,
 And I in Helen's arms lying
 In fair Kirkconnel lee!

I wish I were where Helen lies!
 Night and day on me she cries;
 O, that I were where Helen lies
 On fair Kirkconnel lee.

No. 351. *O heard ye of a silly harper?*Tune: The Lochmaben harper. Glenriddell's MS., 1791.

O, heard ye of a sil - ly har-per, Liv'd long in Loch-ma-bentown?

How he did gang to fair England To steal King Hen-ry's wan-ton brown,

How he did gang to fair Eng-land To steal King Hen-ry's wan-ton brown.

O, HEARD ye of a silly harper
 Liv'd long in Lochmaben town?
 How he did gang to fair England
 To steal King Henry's wanton brown. } bis

But first he gaed to his gudewife
 Wi' a' the speed that he could thole:—
 'This wark,' quo' he, 'will never work
 Without a mare that has a foal.' } bis

Quo' she, 'thou has a gude grey mare
 That'll rin o'er hills baith low and hie;
 Gae tak the grey mare in thy hand,
 And leave the foal at hame wi' me.' } bis

'And tak a halter in thy hose,
 And o' thy purpose dinna fail,
 But wap it o'er the wanton's nose,
 And tie her to the grey mare's tail. } bis

'Syne ca' her out at yon back yeate,
 O'er moss and muir and ilka dale,
 For she'll ne'er let the wanton bite,
 Till she come hame to her ain foal.' } bis

So he is up to Engiand gane,
 Even as fast as he can hie,
 Till he came to King Henry's yeate—
 And wha was there but King Henry? } bis

'Come in,' quo' he, 'thou silly blind harper,
 And of thy harping let me hear':
 'O! by my sooth,' quo' the silly blind harper,
 'I'd rather hae stabling for my mare.' } bis

The king looks o'er his left shoulder,
 And says unto his stable groom ;—
 'Gae tak the silly poor harper's mare, } bis
 And tie her 'side my wanton brown.'

And ay he harpèd, and ay he carpit,
 Till a' the lords gaed through the floor ;
 They thought the music was sae sweet } bis
 That they forgat the stable door.

And ay he harpit, and ay he carpit,
 Till a' the nobles were sound asleep ;
 Then quietly he took aff his shoon } bis
 And safely down the stair did creep.

Syne to the stable door he hies
 Wi' tread as light as light could be,
 And when he open'd and gaed in, } bis
 There he fand thirty good steeds and three.

He took the halter frae his hose,
 And of his purpose did na fail ;
 He slipt it o'er the wanton's nose, } bis
 And tied it to his grey mare's tail.

He ca'd her out at yon back yeate
 O'er moss and muir & ilka dale ;
 And she loot ne'er the wanton bite, } bis
 But held her still gaun at her tail.

The grey mare was right swift o' fit,
 And did na fail to find the way,
 For she was at Lochmaben yeate } bis
 Fu' lang three hours ere it was day.

When she came to the harper's door,
 There she gae many a nicher and snear ;
 'Rise,' quo' the wife, 'thou lazy lass, } bis
 Let in thy master and his mare.'

Then up she raise, pat on her claes,
 And lookit out through the lock-hole :
 'O! by my sooth, then,' quo' the lass, } bis
 'Our mare has gotten a braw big foal.'

'Come haud thy peace thou foolish lass,
 The moon's but glancing in thy e'e ;
 I'd wad my hail fee 'gainst a groat } bis
 It's bigger than e'er our foal will be.'

The neighbours too that heard the noise
 Cried to the wife to put her in;
 'By my sooth, then,' quoth the wife } bis
 'She's better than ever he rade on.'

But on the morn at fair daylight,
 When they had ended a' their cheer :
 King Henry's wanton brown was stawn, } bis
 And eke the poor auld harper's mare.

'Alace ! alace !' says the silly blind harper ;
 'Alace ! alace ! that I came here,
 In Scotland I've tint a braw cowte foal, } bis
 In England they've stawn my gude grey mare.'

'Come haud thy tongue, thou silly blind harper,
 And of thy alacing let me be,
 For thou shall get a better mare,
 And weel paid shall thy cowte foal be.
 For thou shall get a better mare,
 And weel paid shall thy cowte foal be.'

No. 352. Nae birdies sang the mirky hour.

Tune : Sweet Willy. Blaikie's MS., 1692.

Slow

Nae bir - dies sang the mir - ky hour A - mang the braes o' Yar - row, But slum - ber'd on the dew -
 . y boughs to wait the wauk - 'ning mor - row.

NAE birdies sang the mirky hour
 Amang the braes o' Yarrow,
 But slumber'd on the dewy boughs,
 To wait the wauk'ning morrow.

'Where shall I gang, my ain true love,
Where shall I gang to hide me ;
For weel ye ken, i' ye're father's bow'r,
It wad be death to find me.'

'O, go you to yon tavern house,
An' there count o'er your lawin,
An' if I be a woman true,
I'll meet you in the dawin.'

O, he's gone to yon tavern house,
An' ay he counted his lawin,
An' ay he drank to her gude health—
Was to meet him in the dawin.

O, he's gone to yon tavern house,
An' counted owre his lawin,
When in there cam three armèd men
To meet him in the dawin.

'O, woe be unto woman's wit,
It has beguilèd many !
She promisèd to come hersel,
But she sent three men to slay me.'

* * * * *

'Get up, get up, now Sister Ann,
I fear we've wrought you sorrow ;
Get up, ye'll find your true love slain
Among the banks of Yarrow.

She sought him east, she sought him west,
She sought him braid and narrow,
Till in the clintin of a craig,
She found him drown'd in Yarrow.

She's ta'en three links of her yellow hair
That hung down long and yellow ;
And she's tied it about sweet Willie's waist,
An' drawn him out of Yarrow.

* * * * *

I made my love a suit of clothes,
I clad him all in tartan ;
But ere the morning sun arose
He was a' bluid to the gartan.

No. 353. *Rob Roy from the Highlands cam.*Tune: Mill, Mill O! (see No. 266).

ROB Roy from the Highlands cam
 Unto the Lawlan' border,
 To steal awa a gay ladie,
 To haud his house in order :
 He cam owre the loch o' Lynn,
 Twenty men his arms did carry ;
 Himsel gaed in an' fand her out,
 Protesting he would marry.

'O, will ye gae wi' me,' he says,
 'Or will ye be my honey ;
 Or will ye be my wedded wife,
 For I love you best of ony' ;
 'I winna gae wi' you,' she says,
 'Nor will I be your honey ;
 Nor will I be your wedded wife,
 You love me for my money.'

* * * * *

But he set her on a coal black steed,
 Himsel lap on behind her,
 An' he's awa to the Hieland hills,
 Whare her frien's they canna find her.

No. 356. *O'er the moor among the heather.*Tune: O'er the moor among the heather. Scots Mus. Museum, 1792, No. 328.

Com - in thro' the craigs o' Kyle, A-mang the bon-ic bloom-ing heather,

There I met a bon - ie las-sie Keep-ing a' her yowes the-gith - er.

CHORUS.

O'er the moor a-mang the heather, O'er the moor a-mang the heather;There I met a bon - ie las-sie Keep-ing a' her yowes the-gith - er.

COMIN thro' the craigs o' Kyle,
 Among the bonie blooming heather,
 There I met a bonie lassie,
 Keeping a' her yowes thegither.
 O'er the moor among the heather;
 O'er the moor among the heather;
 There I met a bonie lassie
 Keeping a' her yowes thegither.

Says I, 'My dear whare is thy hame,
 In moor, or dale, pray tell me whether?'
 She says, 'I tent thae fleecy flocks
 That feed among the blooming heather.'
 O'er the moor among the heather,
 O'er the moor among the heather;
 She says, 'I tent thae fleecy flocks,
 That feed among the blooming heather.'

We laid us down upon a bank,
 Sae warm and sunny was the weather;
 She left her flocks at large to rove
 Among the bonie blooming heather.
 O'er the moor among the heather,
 O'er the moor among the heather;
 She left her flocks at large to rove
 Among the bonie blooming heather.

While thus we lay, she sang a sang,
 Till echo ran a mile and farther;
 And ay the burden o' the sang
 Was, O'er the moor amang the heather.
 O'er the moor amang the heather,
 O'er the moor amang the heather;
 And ay the burden o' the sang
 Was, O'er the moor amang the heather.

She charm'd my heart, and ay sinsyne,
 I could na think on ony ither:
 By sea and sky she shall be mine!
 The bonie lass amang the heather.
 O'er the moor amang the heather,
 O'er the moor amang the heather;
 By sea and sky she shall be mine!
 The bonie lass amang the heather.

No. 357. As I lay on my bed on a night.

Tune: Go from my window, love, do (see No. 307).

As I lay on my bed on a night,
 I thought upon her beauty bright,
 But the moon by night
 Did give no light
 Which did perplex me sore—
 Yet away to my love I did go.

Then under her window I came,
 I gently call'd her by her name;
 Then up she rose,
 Put on her clothes,
 And whisper'd to me slow,
 Saying:—'Go from my window, love, do.'

'My father and my mother are asleep,
 And if they chance to hear you speak,
 There will be nocht
 But great abuse
 Wi' many a bitter blow:—
 And it's Go from my window, love, do.'

No. 358. *The auld man's mare's dead.*Tune: The auld man's mare's dead. Scots Musical Museum, 1796, No. 485.CHORUS. The auld man's mare's dead, The poor man's mare's dead, Theauld man's mare's dead, A mile a-boon Dun-dee. She wascut-lug-git, painch-lip-pit, Steel waim-it, stan-cher-fit-ted,Chan-ler-chaf-tit, lang-neck-it, Yet the brute did die.

CHORUS. *The auld man's mare's dead,
The poor man's mare's dead,
The auld man's mare's dead,
A mile aboon Dundee.*

SHE was cut-luggit, painch-lippit,
Steel-waimit, stancher-fitted,
Chanler-chaftit, lang-neckit,
Yet the brute did die.

Her lunzie-bane were knaggs and neuks;
She had the cleeks, the cauld, the crooks,
The jawpish and the wanton yeuks,
And the howks aboon her e'e.

My master ca't me to the town,
He ty'd me to a staincher round,
He took a chappin to himsel,
But fient a drap gae me.

CHORUS. *The auld man's mare's dead,
The poor man's mare's dead,
The peats and tours and a' to lead
And yet the jad did die.*

No. 359. *She sat down below a thorn.*Tune : Fine flowers in the valley. Scots Musical Museum, 1792, No. 320.Very slow

She sat down be-low a thorn, Fine flow'rs in the val-ley; And there she has her sweet babe born, And the green leaves they grow rare-ly.

SHE sat down below a thorn
 (Fine flowers in the valley),
 And there she has her sweet babe born,
 (And the green leaves they grow rarely).

Smile na sae sweet, my bonie babe
 (Fine flowers in the valley),
 And ye smile sae sweet, ye'll smile me dead,
 (And the green leaves they grow rarely).

She's taen out her little penknife,
 (Fine flowers in the valley),
 And twinn'd the sweet babe o' its life,
 (And the green leaves they grow rarely).

She's howket a grave by the light o' the moon,
 (Fine flowers in the valley);
 And there she's buried her sweet babe in,
 (And the green leaves they grow rarely).

As she was going to the church,
 (Fine flowers in the valley);
 She saw a sweet babe in the porch,
 (And the green leaves they grow rarely).

O sweet babe and thou wert mine,
 (Fine flowers in the valley);
 I wad cleed thee in silk so fine,
 (And the green leaves they grow rarely).

O mother dear when I was thine,
 (Fine flowers in the valley);
 You did na prove to me sae kind,
 (And the green leaves they grow rarely).

HISTORICAL NOTES

NOTE.—The greater number of the Music Books, referred to in the following Notes, are undated. To avoid defacement by innumerable brackets the ascertained year of publication follows the title and precedes the volume or page of the book quoted. The works with and without dates of publication are shown in the Bibliography.

The Notes marked with an asterisk * refer to the Songs now printed for the first time as the works of Burns.

I. LOVE-SONGS: PERSONAL.

a. Various.

No. 1. O, once I lov'd a bonie lass. Burns remarks in his Commonplace Book, prior to copying this song, 'I never had the least thought or inclination of turning poet till I got once heartily in love,' and records it as 'the first of my performances, and done at an early period of life, when my heart glowed with honest warm simplicity; unacquainted, and uncorrupted, with the ways of a wicked world. The performance is, indeed, very puerile and silly; but I am always pleased with it, as it recalls to my mind those happy days when my heart was yet honest and my tongue was sincere' (Commonplace Book, Edin. 1872, 3). The song was written in 1774 (the above note is dated April, 1783), in honour of Nelly Kilpatrick, 'who sang sweetly,' a farm servant, and daughter of a village blacksmith who in former days had lent the boy Burns romantic chap-books to read. Burns did not publish the song, and it was first printed posthumously in the Scots Musical Museum, 1803, No. 551, without the Fal de lal chorus in the original copy.

I cannot trace the tune I am a man unmarried—the favourite reel of the girl—for which Burns wrote the verses; and the music to which the verses were set in the Museum, and there printed for the first time, has not the 'ancient' character assigned to it by Stenhouse, and there is no evidence that Burns knew the tune as printed.

No. 2. In Tarbolton, ye ken. Chambers's Burns, 1851; without title of tune. The farm of the Bennals named in the verses is situated near Afton Lodge, a few miles from Lochlea, where Burns probably lived at the time he celebrated the two daughters of Ronald, who was reputed to be a person of means and gave himself airs. Gilbert Burns, it is said, had wooed Jean, but was rejected on account of his poverty: Robert affected the other, Anna. In 1789 Ronald became a bankrupt, and Burns in conveying the news to his younger brother William did not conceal his feelings when he says, 'You will easily guess, that from his insolent vanity in his sunshine of life, he will now feel a little retaliation from those who thought themselves eclipsed by him; for, poor fellow, I do not think he ever intentionally injured any one.' The tune of the song is unknown.

No. 3. Altho' my bed were in yon muir. This gallant little song has been much neglected, and, so far as I know, has never been printed with its proper melody. The verses are in the Commonplace Book entitled, 'Fragment.

Tune, Galla Water, with a note: 'Done something in imitation of the manner of a noble old Scottish piece called M^cMillan's Peggy, and sings to the tune of Galla Water. My Montgomerie's Peggy was my deity for six or eight months. She had been bred, tho', as the world says, without any just pretence for it, in a style of life rather elegant . . . I began the affair merely in gaité de cœur . . . but it cost me some heart-aches to get rid of the affair. I have even tried to imitate, in this extempore thing, that irregularity in the rhyme which, when judiciously done, has such a fine effect on the ear' (Commonplace Book, 1872, 51). So far as ascertained, Peggy was the housekeeper of Montgomery of Coilsfield. She and Burns attended the same church, and there began the flirtation which ended abruptly as described. The verses were originally printed in Cromek's Reliques of Robert Burns, 1808, 350. Neither Johnson nor George Thomson seem to have known this metrically defective but verbally melodic song. The esteemed German composer of songs, Robert Franz, has set it to an original air. For the origin of tune Galla Water, see No. 137.

The poetic model of Burns's M^cMillan's Peggy is unknown to me.

No. 4. Yestreen I met yu on the moor. Commonplace Book, 1872, 25. 'Tune, Invercauld's Reel, Strathspey.' Printed without the second and last stanzas, and signed 'X' in the Scots Musical Museum, 1788, No. 196. The manuscript is in the British Museum. The song was written at the age of seventeen for Tibbie or Isabella Stein, the daughter of a farmer at Tarbolton, whose land marched with that of Lochlea, the home of Burns. Invercauld's Reel has been a popular air in Scotland since it was printed in Stewart's Reels, 1762, 31. It is an excellent specimen of the dance-music of Scotland, illustrating the use of the 'Scots snap' and having an irregular close. The Museum copy differs from that in the text, which is from Stewart's Collection, in that every alternate quaver is dotted. The music is also in Bremner's Reels, 1768, 107; and M^cGlashan's Strathspey Reels, 1780, 26.

No. 5. If ye gae up to yon hill-tap. In Chambers's Burns, 1851. No tune named. These sarcastic lines on the Tarbolton lasses are an early production. As Burns strolled through the village the old wives came to the door-step to look and wag their wise heads at the passenger. 'Faile' in the third stanza, famous for ale, was notable for an ancient monastery, the friars of which in the sixteenth century were styled 'lymmars' or villains in the Gud and Godlie Ballads.

No. 6. Her flowing locks, the raven's wing. First printed in Cromek's Reliques of Robert Burns, 1808, 445, styled 'Fragment,' and with no indication of a melody. No trustworthy account is attached to the verses, but Cunningham connects them with 'a Mauchline lady,' whom Scott-Douglas conjectures to be Miss Whitefoord, the daughter of a landed proprietor there, and a friend of Burns. The verses can be sung to, and fit, Loch Eroch Side (No. 15).

No. 7. Had I a cave on some wild distant shore. Scottish Airs, 1799, 92. 'Written for this work by Robert Burns. Air, Robin Adair.' MS. at Brechin Castle. This despairing lyric was written for the tune which the poet could not get out of his head, and on the same subject as No. 33. Nowhere has Burns been more successful in English than in the present song. For the tune Aileen a roon or Robin Adair, see No. 45.

No. 8. It was upon a Lammas night. Written about the year 1782, and published in the Kilmarnock Edition, 1786, 222. Tune, Corn rigs are bonie. Who this 'Annie' was has never been satisfactorily settled, for several of the name with whom Burns was more or less acquainted claimed to be the original. According to Scott-Douglas, the daughter of a farmer called Rankine, who lived within two miles of Lochlea, boasted that she was the heroine. The fifth line of the song in the Kilmarnock and first Edinburgh editions runs

'tentless head,' instead of 'tentless heed' in the editions 1783 and 1784. Both the words have a like sound, and rhyme with 'feed.'

Few of Burns's songs are better known than this one. Late in life he said of the last stanza that it was the best he had ever written, and that it came nearest to his beau idéal of poetical perfection. The origin of the tune is disputed. In Playford's Choyce Ayres, 1681, it is entitled A Northern Song. In 180 Loyal Songs, 1685, 195, it is given as Sawney will never be my love again. It was sung in Durfey's The virtuous wife, 1680, beginning, 'Sawney was tall and of noble race.' The music alone is in Apollo's Banquet, 1687, titled Sawney. Words and music are in Durfey's Wit and Mirth, 1698, i. 133, and again in Durfey's Pills, 1719, i. 316.

The first record of the music as a Scottish air is in Craig's Scots Tunes, 1730, 42, entitled Corn rigs is bonny. It afterwards was printed with Ramsay's words, beginning, 'My Patie was a lover gay,' which had the exclusive use of the printed tune, until Burns's gay lyric superseded it. Whether a lost original of Scottish extraction may have existed prior to 1681, as 'a Northern song,' cannot be ascertained. The melody by its intrinsic merit has maintained its popularity to the present day, and it is found in every important collection of Scottish song and dance music of the eighteenth century, such as the Orpheus Caledonius, 1733, No. 18; M^cGibbon's Scots Tunes, 1742, 20; Bremner's Scots Songs, 1757, 21, and many others. The tune with Ramsay's verses is in the Scots Musical Museum, 1787, No. 93. An old rustic song which gave Burns the idea of his Rigs of Barley runs as follows:—

'O, corn rigs and rye rigs,
O, corn rigs are bonie;
And where'er you meet a bonie lass
Preen up her cockernonie.' (Reliques, 1808, 231.)

No. 9. O, leave novéls, ye Mauchline belles. Early verses published in Currie's Burns, 1800, i. 363; and with music in Johnson's Museum, 1803, No. 573. The advice here tendered to the Mauchline belles was neglected by one, at least, of them. The music of the text, originally published in the Museum, is evidently a pipe-tune of good Scottish type. The title of the tune for the verses is marked Donald Blue, which I cannot trace, unless it be that given here under another name. The original imprint of the song has a tal la lay, indicating a refrain.

No. 10. O, wha my babie-clouts will buy? Glenriddell MS. 'Tune, Whar'll bonie Annie lie.' Scots Musical Museum, 1790, No. 277, signed 'Z,' with the tune East Nook of Fife. A note in the MS. runs: 'I composed this song pretty early in life, and sent it to a young girl, a very particular acquaintance of mine, who was at that time under a cloud' (Reliques, 278). In the Law's MS. Burns has written 'Mr. B.'s old words.'

Burns's tune for the song was well known last century in Scotland and the North of England. It obtained the name that Burns quotes, from the first line of Ramsay's song, Where wad bonny Annie ly, in the Tea-Table Miscellany, 1724. It was known under several titles. In a Northumberland MS., dated 1694, it is Rood house rant; in Playford's Dancing Master, 1695, it is Red house. The proper name, so far as Scotland is concerned, is Where will (or shall) our Goodman ly. The music with that title is in Watts's Musical Miscellany, 1731, v. 106; Oswald's Companion, c. 1755, vii. 22; and Aird's Airs, 1782, i. No. 95. In the Reliques, 1808, 295, Burns quotes the following stanza of a silly old song, the original:—

'O whar'll our gudeman lie, gudeman lie, gudeman lie,
O whar'll our gudeman lie, till he shute o'er the simmer?
Up amang the hen-bawks, the hen-bawks, the hen-bawks,
Up amang the hen-bawks, amang the rotten timber.'

The well-known Westmoreland hunting ditty, 'D'ye ken John Peel,' is sung to this old melody Red house or Bonny Annie of the seventeenth century.

No. 11. Now westlin winds and slaught'ring guns. In the Commonplace Book, 1872, 47, entitled Har'ste:—a fragment, are eight lines substantially the same as begins the song which the sister of Burns said was written for Jean Armour. The complete song is in the Kilmarnock edition, 1786, 224, entitled Song, composed in August. Tune, I had a horse, I had nae mair, and the MS. is in the British Museum. Burns changed the heroine to Peggy Thomson, who lived next door to the Kirkoswald School, where Burns studied trigonometry, and she 'upset all my sines and co-sines, and it was in vain to think of doing any more good at school.' She subsequently married a Mr. Neilson, and Burns was on friendly terms with both.

When the song was revised, Burns altered the melody to Port Gordon, as may be seen in the Gray and Law MS. Lists, but Johnson of the Museum neglected the instruction, and attached the melody When the King comes o'er the water, titling it erroneously Come, kiss with me. Thomson, in Scottish Airs, 1799, 93, mutilated the verses, and adapted them to the Irish air Ally Croker. The tune Port Gordon, for which Burns wrote the song, is in Caledonian Pocket Companion, c. 1756, viii. 25. There is a family resemblance, but the air is not the same as When the King comes o'er the water.

No. 12. Full well thou know'st I love thee, dear. Currie, Works, 1800, iv. 265. 'Tune, Rothiemurche.' Thomson's Scottish Airs, 1801, 121. This is the last work from the pen of Burns. Written at Brow on the Solway Firth, where he had gone for sea bathing. He casts his memory back and reverts to the time when he met Charlotte Hamilton and Peggy Chalmers. The poet was conscious that this song was not one of his best, and he explains the reason in his letter [of July 12, 1796] to Thomson: 'I tried my hand on Rothiemurche this morning. The measure is so difficult that it is impossible to infuse much genius into the lines.' In this letter he asks for a loan of five pounds in these words: 'Curs't necessity compels me to implore you for five pounds. . . . Do, for God's sake, send me that sum, and that by return of post. . . . I hereby promise and engage to furnish you with five pounds worth of the neatest song-genius you have seen.' Shortly before, Burns, by request, assigned to Thomson, without any consideration, the absolute copyright of all the songs which he had sent him during the previous three years.

For the tune Rothiemurche, see No. 103.

No. 13. Behind yon hills where Lugar flows. Edinburgh edition, 1787, 322. 'Tune, My Nannie, O.' In the Commonplace Book it is marked for the tune As I came in by London, O, which I cannot trace. In both copies the first line of the song is 'Behind yon hills where Stinchar flows,' but the more euphonious 'Lugar' was afterwards adopted. The original of the song is supposed to be Annie Fleming, the daughter of a Tarbolton farmer, whose society Burns sought because she was a good singer. The song has enjoyed undiminished popularity since its original appearance. Burns sent it to George Thomson in 1793 for his projected musical collection. The editor wished to mend the diction, but Burns abruptly said, 'Now don't let it enter your head that you are under any necessity of taking my verses,' but Thomson accepted the song, and altered the metre of the second stanza. Prior to Allan Ramsay's Nanny, O in the Tea-Table Miscellany, 1724, there was a London broadside entitled The Scotch Wooing of Willy and Nanny to a pleasant New Tune, or Nanny, O, beginning 'As I went forth one morning fair.' But a popular song of the eighteenth century was the model of Burns, a fragment of which is in the Herd MS. as follows, and now printed for the first time:—

‘As I came in by Edinburgh toun,
 And in by the banks o’ the city, O,
 And there I heard a young man cry,
 And was na that great pity, O?
 And still he cried his Nanie, O,
 His weel far’d, comely Nanie, O,
 And a’ the world shall never ken
 The love that I bear Nanie, O.’

Burns wrote his song about 1782, and the copy in his Commonplace Book is dated April, 1784. It is quite improbable that he could have seen the Herd MS. so early as either year named, if he ever saw it at all. For some reason or another the editors of the Centenary Burns do not quote the above lines.

The nationality of the music of My Nanie, O is disputed. The late J. Muir Wood stated that the air is in a Graham MS. of 1694. The earliest printed copy is in Orpheus Caladonius, 1725, No. 38, with Ramsay’s verses; then in Ramsay’s Musick, c. 1726; Watts’s Miscellany, 1730, iii. 126; British Musical Miscellany, 1734, ii. 14; McGibbon’s Scots Tunes, 1742, 27; Oswald’s Caledonian Companion, c. 1753, v. 3; Bremner’s Scots Songs, 1757, 17 (2nd series); and elsewhere. The tune is now permanently associated with Burns’s song. Thomson wished to set it to a different melody; but Burns disapproved, and replied that his subscribers would prefer My Nanie, O set to its own tune, and accordingly it appeared in Scottish Airs, 1793, 4. The popularity of the verses compelled their insertion in Johnson’s Museum, 1803, vi. No. 580; but as the tune had been previously appropriated to Ramsay’s verses in the first volume, Johnson set it to an English air by Thomas Ebdon, a Durham musician, which, however, failed to catch the public ear.

No. 14. True-hearted was he, the sad swain c’ the Yarrow. Thomson’s Scottish Airs, 1798, 46. ‘Written for this work by Robert Burns. Tune, Bony Dundee.’ Written for Miss Jessie Staig, daughter of a Provost of Dumfries, and the lady who afterwards married Major William Miller, a son of the landlord of Ellisland. Mrs. Miller died at the early age of twenty-six. The song was sent to Thomson in April, 1793, to suit Bonie Dundee. Thomson objected to a stiff line in the song; Burns agreed with him, but declined to make any alteration, as ‘it would spoil the likeness, so the picture must stand.’

For the tune, see Song No. 112.

No. 15. Young Peggy blooms our boniest lass. Scots Musical Museum, 1787, No. 78, with its tune Loch Eroch Side. Written for Miss Margaret Kennedy, the daughter of a small landed proprietor, and a relative of Mrs. Gavin Hamilton. She was about seventeen years of age when Burns made her acquaintance. He sent her a copy of the verses, with a letter, in which he says: ‘Flattery I leave to your lovers, whose exaggerating fancies may make them imagine you are still nearer perfection than you really are.’ His good wishes that she should be preserved from all misfortune were very far from being realized, for she fell a victim to a military adventurer of a good family like herself.

Margaret Kennedy was accomplished by birth and education, and one of the first of Burns’s acquaintances out of his sphere of life. The song resembles the artificially polished verses of the eighteenth century, and has not been much thought of. Burns execrated his literary advisers, who compelled him to omit this song in the first Edinburgh edition, and it accounts for its early publication in Johnson’s Museum. The tune is in Agnes Hume’s MS., 1704, entitled Lady Strathden’s.

The words and music are in Sime’s Edinburgh Musical Miscellany, 1793, 360. Loch Eroch Side, or Strathspey, is now better known as the melody of Baroness

Nairne's song The lass of Gowrie. As Loch Eireachd Side it is in M^cGlashan's Reels, 1786, 46. It is also in Aird's Airs, 1788, iii. No. 543. It is probably the original of the air which is now usually set to the song 'I'm o'er young to marry yet.'

No. 16. Altho' thou maun never be mine. Thomson's Scottish Airs, 1799, 75. 'Written for this work by Robert Burns. Air, Here's a health to them that's awa.' Burns's letter enclosing this song to Thomson was written in May, 1796. Rheumatism, cold, and fever were a terrible combination, and Jessie Lewars, an orphan eighteen years of age, voluntarily became his nurse. She acted as an eldest daughter to Mrs. Burns, and as a mother to the poet's children. Her attention to Burns was unflagging and incessant; her devotion much affected him, and he repaid her with a love-song, the only coin he had, and a copy of the four printed volumes of the Scots Musical Museum, now in the possession of the Earl of Rosebery. In his letter to Thomson, he writes: 'I once mentioned to you an air, which I have long admired, Here's a health to them that's awa, hiney, but I forgot if you took any notice of it. I have just been trying to suit it with verses, and I beg leave to recommend the air to your attention once more.' The following couplet in Here's a health is exquisite:—

'Thou art sweet as the smile when fond lovers meet,
And soft as their parting tear, Jessy.'

A corrected copy of the song was found among Burns's papers, containing the last stanza not in the copy sent to Thomson. Burns had previously written a political song for the air (see Song No. 284).

No. 17. The Catrine woods were yellow seen. Scots Musical Museum, 1790, No. 276, with the music of the Braes o' Ballochmyle. This autumn song was written for one of the daughters of Sir John Whitefoord, Reliques, 277. Ballochmyle had been long in the family, but the disastrous failure of the Ayr Bank in 1772, of which Whitefoord was a partner, obliged him to sell the estate. It is situated on the right bank of the river Ayr, with the Catrine woods on the opposite side. Burns had to pass Ballochmyle and the Catrine woods in his solitary circular walks from Mossgiel.

The melody is the composition of Allan Masterton, and is unconsciously modelled on the psalm-tune style. It is in the modern scale throughout, quite distinct from the quaint progressions of the anonymous folk-tunes. Masterton was, however, more successful in setting Burns's verse to music than the other musical friends of the poet.

No. 18. Stay, my charmer, can you leave me? Scots Musical Museum, 1788, No. 129, signed 'B.' Tune, An Gille dubh ciar dubh. Nothing is known of the origin of this song, which is among the Burns's MSS. in the British Museum. It is most likely a souvenir of the Highland tour written for a pretty simple Gaelic air, Anglice, The black-haired lad, in M^cDonald's Highland Vocal Airs, 1784, No. 142.

No. 19. My heart was ance as blythe and free. Scots Musical Museum, 1788, No. 103, signed 'X,' entitled, To the weaver's gin ye go. The following note is in the Interleaved Museum: 'The chorus of this song is old, the rest of it is mine. Here, once for all, let me apologize for many silly compositions of mine in this work. Many beautiful airs wanted words; in the hurry of other avocations, if I could string a parcel of rhymes together anything near tolerable, I was fain to let them pass. He must be an excellent poet indeed, whose every performance is excellent' (Reliques, 1808, 233). This explains the difficulty in precisely ascertaining how much original matter Burns put into songs which previously existed. In the present case he adopted an old chorus; in some songs disjuncted portions were old, in others everything but the title was original. A story connecting Jean Armour with this song is not authenticated.

The tune To the weaver's gin ye go is in Aird's Airs, 1782, ii. No. 16. It is a good melody, with considerable variety; the chorus starts in a merry strain, but gets back to the half-querulous mood of the verse, and ends in the minor. It is named in a broadside of the middle of the eighteenth century.

No. 20. How long and dreary is the night. Scots Musical Museum, 1788, No. 175. Tune, 'A Galick air.' This is the first of two versions. The second was a recast for George Thomson, who importuned Burns to write for Cauld Kail, a tune he disliked. Burns tried three songs for the air, and his middle one, How long and dreary, is the best. In a letter on the subject he said, 'I met with some such words in a collection of songs somewhere, which I altered and enlarged; and to please you, and to suit your favourite air of Cauld Kail, have arranged it anew.' In the Herd MS. there are nine stanzas in a different measure, with some similar ideas to Burns, beginning:—

'The day begins to peep,
And the birds sing sweet and cheery,
But I mann rise and greet
And think upon my deary.'

The beautiful Gaelic air originally published in the Museum is very little known. To the student of folk-music all the Celtic airs selected by Burns are well worth particular attention. They are chiefly sad, and redolent of a race living 'on the shores of a melancholy ocean.'

No. 21. Yon wild mossy mountains. Scots Musical Museum, 1792, No. 331. Signed 'X,' to the tune Phoebe. In the Interleaved Museum Burns refers to the song as belonging to a part of his private history, which was of no consequence to the public. Nothing certain is known of the origin of the verses; but Chambers and Scott-Douglas both agree in thinking that the incident which prompted them occurred during his first journey to Edinburgh in 1786. Burns passed close to Tinto or 'Tintock,' the highest isolated peak of the district. 'Yon wild mossy mountains' are the natural ramparts which flank the upper Clyde.

Burns recommended George Thomson to republish his song, and set it to the Jacobite air, There'll never be peace till Jamie comes hame (not the original melody of the song), of which he writes, 'It is a little irregular in the flow of the lines, but where two short syllables, that is to say, one syllable more than the regular feet—if these two syllables fall to the space of one (crotchet time), composed of two different quavers under a slur, it has, I think, no bad effect to divide them' (Letter, July, 1793). The explanation, although a little clumsily expressed, is very interesting, as it shows that Burns carefully studied his verses from a musical basis, and that he was sensitive to minute differences in musical sound. Johnson had published the song with the proper melody, and Thomson doubtless suggested another tune.

The tune Phoebe, here reprinted, is the composition of James Oswald, musician and publisher of much Scottish music in the middle of the eighteenth century. I find the air in Universal Harmony, 1745, 119, and in his Caledonian Pocket Companion, 1752, iv. 19.

No. 22. Anna, thy charms my bosom fire. Edinburgh edition, 1793, ii. 226; and with music in Scots Musical Museum, 1803, No. 530, and a footnote, 'written for this work by Robert Burns.' According to the Centenary Burns, the lines were first printed in the Star newspaper, April 18, 1789. Scott-Douglas identified 'Anna' as Miss Ann Stewart, who was engaged to be married to the poet's friend, Alexander Cunningham. Burns knew the lady, but not intimately, and the verses were written on account of his friend.

The tune Bonny Mary is the composition of James Oswald, and is in his Curious Collection Scots Tunes, 1740, 15; also in the Caledonian Pocket Companion, 1743, i. 24. It is a good melody of the professional style of the eighteenth century, but I am unable to find any authority under the hand of Burns that he wrote his verses for the air.

No. 23. 'Twas even—the dewy fields were green. The Polyhymnia, No. 18 [1799]; Currie, Works, 1800, i. 125 (no tune named); Thomson's Scottish Airs, 1801, 108, set to an unauthorized tune, Johnny's gray breeks. The 'Lass o' Ballochmyle'—Miss Wilhelmina Alexander—was the sister of the proprietor of the estate of Ballochmyle. The poet saw her for the first time as he was taking a solitary stroll in the evening. He sent her a copy of the verses, with a request that she would permit him to publish them, but she took no notice of the request. Many years after, when the poet had become famous, and she was a maiden past her prime, she had the song and the letter framed, and hung them up in the hall. The letter, dated Nov. 18, 1786, describes the circumstances under which the song had been written. Burns wished this song and Young Peggie blooms (No. 15) inserted in the Edinburgh edition of his works, but the literary tasters dissuaded him from it, and neither was printed.

Ettrick Banks, for which the song was written, is named in a letter to Mrs. Stewart of Stair, which enclosed a copy of the verses. The tune is named in the original publication Polyhymnia. The music is in the Orpheus Caledonius, 1733, No. 45, to pastoral verses beginning:—

'On Ettrick banks in a summer's night,
At gloaming when the sheep drove hame,
I met my lassy bra' and tight,
Cam wading barefoot, a' her lane:
My heart grew light, I ran, I flang
My arms about her lily neck,
And kiss'd and clap'd her there fu' lang,
My words they were na' mony feck.'

This song was afterwards printed in the fourth volume of the Tea-Table Miscellany, 1740. The tune is in Oswald's Curious Collection Scots Tunes, 1740, 28; Mc'Gibbon's Scots Tunes, 1742, 23; Caledonian Pocket Companion, 1751, iii. 16; Scots Musical Museum, 1787, No. 81, and every important collection of vocal music of the latter half of the eighteenth century.

No. 24. As I gaed up by yon gate-end. Aldine edition, 1839. First published anonymously in the Edinburgh Magazine, 1818. It appears that the Aldine editor printed the verses from a MS. which contained only the twelve lines as reprinted here. No tune is named.

No. 25. How pleasant the banks of the clear winding Devon. Scots Musical Museum, 1788, No. 157, signed 'B.' Tune, Bhannerach dhon na chri. The MS. is in the British Museum. 'These verses were composed on a charming girl, a Miss Charlotte Hamilton, who is now married to James Mc'Kitrick Adair, Physician. She is sister to my worthy friend Gavin Hamilton, of Mauchline; and was born on the banks of the Ayr, but was, at the time I wrote these lines [Oct., 1787], residing at Harvieston, Clackmannanshire, on the romantic banks of the little river Devon. I first heard the air from a lady in Inverness, and got the notes taken down for this work' (i.e. the Scots Musical Museum). (Reliques, 1808, 243.)

The tune, Anglice, The brown dairy maid, communicated by Burns, was originally published in the Museum with his song. Another, but different rudimentary melody of the same title is in Mc'Donald's Highland Airs, 1784, No. 105.

No. 26. The flower it blaws, it fades, it fa's. Scots Musical Museum, 1796, No. 471, entitled Lovely Polly Stewart. The MS. is in the British Museum. Polly was the young daughter of William Stewart of Burns's song 'You're welcome, Willie Stewart.' According to Scott-Douglas, without quoting authority, she married her cousin, by whom she had three sons; he fell into some scrape which compelled him to abscond. Polly afterwards contracted a quasi-matrimonial alliance with a farmer named George Welsh, but, as they could not agree, they separated. In 1806 she lived with her father at Maxwellton, who was no longer factor of Closeburn. There Polly picked up an acquaintance with a Swiss soldier named Fleitz, with whom she went abroad, and after many wanderings died at Florence in 1847.

Burns's song was formed on one of the Jacobite ballads made after the rebellion of 1745. The tune is entitled Queensberry House in Bremner's Reels, 1758, 40, and Aird's Airs, 1782, i. No. 101. It is said to be in Walsh's Calendonian Country Dances, c. 1736, under the title The Confederacy. In 1749, on the anniversary of the Battle of Culloden, some English officers in the dress circle of the Canongate Theatre, Edinburgh, called on the orchestra to play Culloden, which incensed the audience, who retaliated by demanding Ye're welcome, Charlie Stewart. A riot ensued, and the officers got the worst of it. The lively air Culloden is very little known; the following is a copy from Johnson's Two Hundred New Country Dances, 1748:—

No. 27. From thee, Eliza, I must go. Kilmarnock edition, 1786, 227. 'Tune, Gilderoy.' Burns recommended Thomson to insert the song in his collection; but in Scottish Airs, 1793, i. 15, he set it to a wrong tune. 'Eliza' was very likely one of the Mauchline belles.

Gilderoy is the tune of a celebrated seventeenth century ballad of the same name. It is a corruption of Gillieroy, the red-haired lad, applied to Patrick Macgregor, a native of the Lomonds, of the same clan, or sept, as the notorious Rob Roy. He pursued the business of a cattle-lifter, and by his courage and audacity raised himself to be the leader of a band of Caterans, who scoured the country from Strathspey to Strathdee. According to the Privy Council Records, Gillieroy and his band sornd through the whole bounds of Strathspey, Braemar, Cromar, and the districts thereabouts, oppressing the common people, violently taking from them their meat, drink, and provisions, and their 'hail goods.' In those days the Argyle family acted as the hereditary police, and Lord Lorn tried to stamp out the system of robbery carried on by the lawless Celts. He captured Gillieroy about July, 1636, and nine other notorious ruffians, who were charged with plundering the house of William Stewart on the romantic isle of Inchcailloch in Loch Lomond, and making a clean sweep of the island and the premises, including the title-deeds of the property. The whole band were convicted and hanged in Edinburgh, Gillieroy and his henchman, John Forbes, having the honour of suffering on a gallows 'a ne degree higher' than the others, and of having their heads stuck on a pole and exhibited at the city gate as a warning to other evil-doers. A few years after the execution a black-letter ballad was printed in London, entitled The Scotch Lover's Lamentation; or Gilderoy's Last Farewell. The verses, in ten double stanzas, are assumed to be written by his paramour, who laments the untimely fate of her 'bonny boy.' In course of time he was canonized and admitted into the Newgate Calendar. His biography is in A compleat History of the Lives and Robberies of the most notorious Highwaymen, Foot-pads, &c., printed in London, 1719. He is there depicted as having set his mother's house on fire, ill-used his sister, fled to France, picked Cardinal Richelieu's pocket in the King's presence, returned to England, hanged a judge, then been taken prisoner, and executed in Scotland.

The popularity of Gilderoy may be judged from the fact that there are at least four different versions of the ballad. The broadside was copied into Collection of Ballads, London, 1723, 271, but a short version of five stanzas was previously published in Westminster Drollery, 1671, 112, entitled A Scotch Song, called Gilderoy. The third and best-known version is that of thirteen stanzas attributed to the pen of Lady Wardlaw, the reputed authoress of Hardy Knute. Here the indelicacies of the older versions are pruned, and this is the one copied into Percy's Reliques, wanting a stanza, and in all modern collections of ballads. The fourth version in seven stanzas, preceding the last-named in order of time, is the best of the series, and is written in vigorous and graphic language. It is in the Orpheus Caledonius, 1733, No. 47, with the tune here set to the verses of Burns.

The ballad had two tunes in England. In Durley's Pills, 1719, v. 39, the original verses are set 'to a new tune,' from which it may be inferred that there was an earlier one. The Scottish tune has no striking family resemblance to that in the Pills, except in the cadence. The Scottish tune is in Ramsay's Musick, c. 1726; in the Caledonian Pocket Companion, 1753, v. 20; M^cGibbon's Scots Tunes, 1742, 26; and in Bremner's Scots Songs, 1757, 10, with the verses beginning, 'Ah! Chloris.'

No. 28. Where, braving angry winter's storms. Scot's Musical Museum, 1788, No. 195, signed 'R.' Tune, N. Gow's Lamentation for Abercainey. The MS. is in the British Museum. Miss Margaret Chalmers was the subject of this and the next song. The acquaintance ripened into intimacy, and an active correspondence began, lasting from October 26, 1787, to September 16, 1788. Peggy Chalmers is described as having large and bright hazel eyes, white, regular teeth, and possessing a charm in her face not always the result or accompaniment of fine features. Her figure was short, but faultless; she spoke easily and well, but preferred listening to others. Some of the letters to her are among the finest Burns wrote. They are remarkable for an easy flowing style, apparently spontaneous, and penned without effort. He took her into his confidence, and discussed his affairs in a frank and confidential manner. She exercised considerable influence over him, and he invariably spoke of her in the highest terms. Dr. Blacklock said that Burns always paid her the most respectful deference. None of her letters have been preserved, but his letters to her are uniformly excellent, and the correspondence ceased only a short time before her marriage with Mr. Lewis Hay, a partner in the distinguished banking house of Sir William Forbes & Co., the founders of Coutts & Co. Mrs. Hay was left a widow in the year 1800, and died in Switzerland in 1843.

This song and the next were sent to the lady with an intimation that he intended to print them. She objected, and he contested the point. Both were sent to the editor of the Museum, the present song being inserted, but the other, My Peggy's Face, was suspended for more than fifteen years.

The tune, Lamentation for Abercainey, is the composition of Niel Gow, and printed in his Collection of Reels, 1784, and Aird's Airs, 1788, iii. No. 542.

No. 29. My Peggy's face, my Peggy's form. Currie, Works, 1800, iv. 398. Thomson's Scottish Airs, 1801, 106, 'Peggy' being altered to 'Mary,' and set to an unauthorized air. Scots Musical Museum, 1803, No. 501, 'written for this work by Robert Burns,' which is strictly accurate. Johnson having been forestalled, printed in the Museum with the song a letter from Burns, in which he states that he has a very strong private reason for wishing the song in the second volume. It is very probable that Peggy Chalmers directly or indirectly was the cause of the delay, as she objected to be publicly criticized. Burns records in his MS. Lists that Johnson took a copy of the Celtic tune, Ha a' chaillich, for which the verses were written, but was in doubt whether the music suited, and referred the matter to the professional musical editor, who evidently decided against the tune. Whether the poet then selected the good melody in the text, My Peggy's face, is not known, but it was originally printed in the Museum with Burns's song, and remains its proper tune. For a copy of Ha a' chaillich, see Dow's Scots Music. A copy is in Glen's Early Scottish Melodies, 1900, 215.

No. 30. By Oughtertyre grows the aik. Scots Musical Museum, 1788, No. 180, signed 'B,' entitled Blythe was she, with the music of Andro and his cutty gun. In Thomson's Scottish Airs, 1799, 61. Burns's second visit to the Highlands was the fulfilment of a promise to Sir William Murray of Ochtertyre, in the lovely valley of the Earn, Perthshire. The poet was entertained for about ten days, and there he met Euphemia Murray, a cousin of his host, aged eighteen years, who was known as the Flower of Strathmore. She was the subject of the present song, and did not appreciate the honour of being put into verse. She married Mr. Smythe of Methven Castle, who became one of the judges of the Court of Session (Reliques, 1808, 254).

The tune Andro and his cutty gun belongs to a brilliant vernacular song of the same name, first printed in the Tea-Table Miscellany, 1740. This song was exceedingly popular in the eighteenth century at all peasants' feasts. It describes an alehouse and the joyous condition of the guests, in the peculiar humour of the social songs of Scotland. Many imitations have been written, but none equals the original, still often printed. The two following stanzas are excellent :—

'When we had three times toom'd our stoup,
And the niest chappin new begun,
In started, to heeze up our hope;
Young Andro wi' his cutty gun.

The carlin brought her kebbuck ben,
With girdle cakes weel toasted brown
Weel does the canny kimmer ken
They gar the scuds gae glibber down.'

The paraphrase of the last four lines is, Well did the old landlady know that cheese and toasted cakes made the ale more palatable, and disappear the quicker.

The tune is in Caledonian Pocket Companion, 1754, vi. 4; Aird's Airs, 1782, ii. No. 37; in the Perth Musical Miscellany, 1786, 133; Calliope, 1788, 410; and Ritson's Scottish Songs, 1794, i. 268. In the Merry Muses there is a version of Andro and his cutty gun, beginning :—

'When a' the lave gaed to their bed,
And I sat up to clean the shoon,
O wha think ye cam jumpin ben
But Andro and his cutty gun?'

No. 31. A rosebud, by my early walk. Scots Musical Museum, 1788, No. 189, signed 'B.' The MS. is in the British Museum. The 'Rosebud' was a little girl of twelve years, the only child of William Cruikshank, Classical Master in the High School of Edinburgh, with whom Burns resided after his return from the Highland tour. The poet stayed with Cruikshank from September, 1787, to February, 1788, with the exception of a few days' visit to Sir William Murray at Ochertyre. During this period he was principally occupied in writing songs for the second volume of the Museum. The 'Rosebud' for her years was an accomplished player on the harpsichord, and Burns was intensely interested in her singing and playing the songs he was preparing for publication. In this way he tested his verses with the melodies. He was so absorbed in this occupation that it was difficult to draw his attention from it. Burns displays his tenderness and love of children in the song, and as a mark of gratitude to the child he freely distributed copies among his friends. 'The air is by a David Sillar, quondam merchant, and now Schoolmaster in Irvine. He is the Davie to whom I address my printed poetical epistle in the measure of the Cherry and the Slae' (Reliques, 1808, 258). I suppose that this is the first reprint of the tune since it was published in the Museum as transmitted by Burns, and it would not be reproduced now if Burns had not made his song for it. It is an attempt in Strathspey style, containing unvocal intervals which unfit it for performance.

No. 32. Musing on the roaring ocean. Scots Musical Museum, 1788, No. 179, signed 'R.' Tune, Druimionn dubh. The MS. of the verses is in the British Museum. Written on account of a Mrs. McLachlan, whose husband was an officer in the East India Company's service, on duty abroad (Reliques, 1808, 254). It may be remarked that, although Burns lived in the view of the sea for many years, its immensity or grandeur does not appear to have impressed him. This is his only sea-song. Mountains and natural scenery he passed over in the same way. His genius lay in studying and dissecting human life. For inorganic matter with the modern pan gloss he cared little or nothing. His diary of the Highland tour contains few or no remarks on the beautiful scenery he passed through. In a fragment in the Herd MS., now first printed below, the same idea occurs as in the third line of Burns. Thus:—

'But he's awa, and very far frae hame,
And sair, sair I fear I'll ne'er see him again;
But I will weary Heav'n to keep him in its care,
For O! he's good—and good men are rare.'

The tune Druimionn dubh, Anglice, The black cow, is in Corri's Scots Songs, 1783, ii. 29, and McDonald's Highland Airs, 1784, No. 89. Sir Samuel Ferguson translated the fragment of an Irish Jacobite lyric on James the Second with the title of the tune. The last stanza is—

'Welcome home, welcome home, druimion dubh, O!
Good was your sweet milk for drinking, I trow;
With your face like a rose, and your dewlap of snow,
I'll part from you never, ah, druimion dubh, O!'

Another but different air of the same title is in the Caledonian Pocket Companion, c. 1756, viii. 12.

No. 33. She's fair and fause that causes my smart. Scots Musical Museum, 1792, No. 398, signed 'R.'; and Thomson's Scottish Airs, 1798, 40. The MS. is in the British Museum. This sprang from the heated imagination of the poet about the middle of January, 1789, on reading an account of the marriage of Miss Ann Stewart, the subject of Song No. 22. She had been engaged to his intimate friend, Alexander Cunningham, W. S., and jilted him. As soon as Burns heard the news, he wrote an indignant letter of condolence to his friend, who however survived the disappointment, and married four years later.

The tune The lads of Leith is in the Caledonian Pocket Companion, 1752, iv. 31. It is a graceful combination of the major and the minor modes. Mr. Glen states that the music is in Walsh's Caledonian Country Dances some years earlier than the above date.

No. 34. Now Spring has clad the grove in green. Thomson's Scottish Airs, 1799, 91. 'Written for this work by Robert Burns.' The MS. is in the Thomson Collection. This address of condolment with Alexander Cunningham is on the same subject as the preceding song. Burns intended Stephen Clarke to compose for the verses, but nothing came of it, and the song has no original melody. Thomson obtained a copy of the verses in the beginning of August, 1795, and published them with the old tune of Auld lang syne, disguised under a new title, The hopeless lover, which he lifted bodily from the Scots Musical Museum. There is no doubt about the source, because Johnson's setting of the tune is considerably different from all previous copies. Thomson did precisely the same thing with the popular tune, O, can ye labour tea for Burns's Auld lang syne.

No. 35. O, wilt thou go wi' me, sweet Tibbie Dunbar. Scots Musical Museum, 1790, No. 207, entitled 'Tibbie Dunbar. Tune, Johnny M^cGill.' The MS. is in the British Museum. In Law's Museum MS. List, Burns has written 'Mr. Burns's old words.' Nothing is known of the subject of the verses, which were written to illustrate the melody. Riddell's Note (not Burns's) in the Interleaved Museum is 'This tune is said to be the composition of John M^cGill, fiddler, in Girvan.' An old song in the Merry Muses is marked for the tune, the first stanza of which is :—

'Duncan Macleerie and Janet his wife,
They gaed to Kilmarnock to buy a new knife;
But instead of a knife they coft but a bleerie :
"We're very weel sair'd," quo' Duncan Macleerie.'

The nationality of the tune is disputed; on some slender evidence it is claimed as Irish. In Scotland it is now best known with MacNeil's song, Come under my plaidie. The music is in Campbell's Reels, 1778, 31, and Aird's Airs, 1782, ii. No. 119.

No. 36. Fate gave the word—the arrow sped. Scots Musical Museum, 1790, No. 271, signed 'B,' entitled 'A mother's lament for the death of her son. Tune, Finlayston house.' Thomson's Scottish Airs, 1798, 45. 'Mr. Burns's words' (Law's MS. List). These lines were written for Mrs. Ferguson of Craigdarroch, who had lost a promising son, eighteen years of age, in November, 1787. 'I have just arrived [Mauchline] from Nithsdale, and will be here a fortnight. I was on horseback this morning (for between my wife and my farm there is just forty-six miles) by three o'clock. As I jogged on in the dark, I was taken with a poetic fit' (Letter to Mrs. Dunlop, September 27, 1788).

The eulogistic Note in the Interleaved Museum on the tune and its composer is by Robert Riddell, and not written by Burns, as Cromek makes it appear in Reliques, 1808, 303. Posterity has not endorsed Riddell's opinion of the melody. John Riddell had no doubt the gift of melody; in his collection of Scots Reels, 1782 (the tune is on page 55), there are some good specimens of folk-music. He died at Ayr on April 5, 1795, aged seventy-six years.

No. 37. The day returns, my bosom burns. Scots Musical Museum, 1790, No. 224, signed 'R.' Tune, Seventh of November. 'Mr. B.'s words' (Law's MS. List). The MS. is in the British Museum. Thomson's Scottish Airs, 1798, 28, with the music. 'I composed this song out of compliment to one of the happiest and worthiest of married couples in the world, Robert Riddell, Esq., of Glenriddell, and his lady. At their fireside I have enjoyed more pleasant evenings than at all the houses of fashionable people in this country put together; and to their kindness and hospitality I am indebted for many of the happiest hours of my life' (Reliques, 1808, 269). The leaf of the Interleaved Museum where this has been written is now wanting. Living alone in an old weather-worn house, on the banks of the Nith, the poet was particularly grateful for the Riddell hospitality. This country gentleman was the brother-in-law of Maria Riddell, whom we shall come across by-and-by. He was an antiquarian and amateur musician. It was in his house that the appalling Bacchanalian contest took place commemorated in The Whistle. A letter of September 16, 1788, to Peggy Chalmers, fixed the date when The day returns was written. 'Johnson's collection of songs is going on in the third volume; and, of consequence, finds me a consumpt of a great deal of idle metre. One of the most tolerable things I have done in that way is two stanzas that I made to an air a musical gentleman of my acquaintance composed for the anniversary of his wedding-day, which happens on the seventh of November.'

The tune of Riddell's is in his New Music, 1787. Burns was generally and generously wrong when he adopted the melodies of his personal friends. There are some exceptions, but his amiability obscured his judgement in most cases.

No. 38. Ye gallants bright, I rede ye right. Scots Musical Museum, 1790, No. 215, signed 'X,' entitled Beware o' bonie Ann. Written in 1788, according to Stenhouse; but Scott-Douglas, with better authority, places it a year later—February, 1789—when the poet was in Edinburgh. 'I composed this song out of compliment to Miss Ann Masterton, the daughter of my friend, Allan Masterton, the author of the air of Strathallan's Lament, and two or three others in this work' (Reliques, 1808, 266). The lady of the song subsequently married a medical doctor of Bath, and died in 1834.

The tune Bonie Ann is the composition of Allan Masterton. Internal evidence proves it to be a modern melody.

No. 39. I gaed a waefu' gate yestreen. Scots Musical Museum, 1790, No. 294, entitled The blue-eyed lassie. 'Mr. Burns's words' (Law's MS. List). This charming song was written on the daughter of Andrew Jeffrey, the parish minister of Lochmaben. He admired Burns, who stayed in his house on several occasions whilst on his Excise excursions. The poet presented the song to Jean Jeffrey—then about fifteen years of age—with a copy of O, Willie brew'd a peck o' maut, shortly after dining in William Nicol's cottage at Moffat, which the irascible schoolmaster had rented as a summer residence, on account of his daughter's health. Miss Jeffrey was a minor poet; her memoirs and a collected edition of her writings were published in 1850. She became a Mrs. Renwick of New York, and died there about 1850.

Few of Burns's lyrics surpass this one, and it is a pity the poet did not choose a more suitable melody out of the Scottish garner, instead of adopting the composition of Robert Riddell contained in his New Music, 1787. It is by no means the worst of that musical amateur's melodies, but it is spoiled by the prodigious compass of more than two octaves, which renders it unsingable. In a letter to Mrs. Dunlop of October 29, 1788, Burns states that the song was written for Riddell's composition.

No. 40. Blythe hae I been on yon hill. Thomson's Scotish Airs, 1799, 58, 'Written for this work by Robert Burns. Air, The Quaker's Wife.' The second song for Miss Lesley Baillie. Burns thought this one of his finest songs, and enthusiastically affirms that the lady was positively the most beautiful young woman in the world. He transmitted the verses to Thomson about June, 1793. And of the tune The Quaker's Wife, he says: 'Mr. Fraser plays it slow, and with an expression that quite charms me. I got such an enthusiast in it that I made a song for it, which I here subjoin, and enclose Fraser's set of the tune. If they hit your fancy, they are at your service; if not, return me the tune, and I will put it in Johnson's Museum.' The music in the text is from Bremner's Reels, 1759, 53, entitled Merrily dance the Quaker. In a letter of October, 1793, Burns stated that 'an old gentleman, a deep antiquarian,' knew The Quaker's Wife as a Gaelic air by the name of Leiger 'm choss, and that the words of the West Country fragment of the song were as follows:—

'Leiger 'm choss, my bonie wee lass,
Leiger 'm choss, my dearie;
A' the lee-lang winter night,
Leiger 'm choss, my dearie.'

A song of Burns for the tune is in Merry Muses, beginning:—

'Come rede me dame, come tell me dame,
My dame come tell me truly,' &c.

No. 41. Yestreen I had a pint o' wine. Stewart's Edition, 1802; Cromek's Scottish Songs, 1810, i. 61. Tune, Banks of Banna. The Globe Tavern, Dumfries, was the head quarters of Burns when he was there on Excise business, while the niece of the landlady, Anna Park—the lass with the gowden locks—was drawer and general waitress. A copy of the verses, with some verbal alterations, is in the Merry Muses.

Burns considered this his best love-song, although he never intended to publish it; and several years after it was written he tried to persuade George Thomson to insert a different version in his collection with the tune The Banks of Banna. Thomson did not print the new version, which is now unknown.

The tune—an Irish melody in Corri's Scots Songs, 1783, 14; in Musical Miscellany, Perth, 1786, 75; and Calliope, 1788, 1—is best known by the song 'Shepherds, I have lost my love,' in The Charmer, Edinburgh, 1782, ii. 176, written by the Right Honourable George Ogle, who represented Dublin in 1799, and voted against the Union. The scene of his more celebrated song Molly Asthore, written in his youth, is also that of The Banks of Banna.

No. 42. Wishfully I look and languish. Scots Musical Museum, 1792, No. 341, signed 'R,' entitled The bonny wee thing; Thomson's Select Melodies, 1825, vi. 22. The MS. is in the British Museum. 'Composed on my little idol, the charming lovely Davies' (Reliques, 1808, 303). Burns met Deborah Davies at the house of her relative Robert Riddell of Glenriddell; a young lady of short stature and much beauty. Two letters to her are in the Burns correspondence.

The tune is a fine type of the pathetic music of Scotland. In a rudimentary form it is in Straloch's MS., dated 1627, entitled Wo betyd thy wearie bodie. It is in the Caledonian Pocket Companion, 1758, ix. 1. A different melody is in Bremner's Reels, 1758, 40, entitled The Bonnie wi' thing.

No. 43. O, how shall I, unskilfu', try. Scots Musical Museum, 1792, No. 349, entitled Lovely Davies. Tune, Miss Muir. The MS. is in the British Museum. The song was sent to Miss Davies in the autumn of 1791. She was engaged to be married to a Captain Delaney, who went abroad on foreign duty, and after a short-lived correspondence his letters to her ceased. The rift in the lute seriously affected her health, and Burns delicately refers to the subject in his letter in these words: 'So strongly am I interested in Miss Davies's fate and welfare in the serious business of life, amid its chances and changes, that to make her the subject in a silly ballad is downright mockery of these ardent feelings; 'tis like an impertinent jest to a dying friend.' The following sentence is quite Burnsian: 'When I meet with a person after my own heart . . . I positively can no more resist from rhyming on the impulse than an Aeolian harp can refuse its tones to the streaming air.'

The tune of the song, a great favourite of Burns, is in Oswald's Companion, c. 1756, viii. 11, entitled Port Athol, or, as in the Museum, Miss Muir. In the poet's copy of Oswald's collection he has styled the tune 'exquisite.'

No. 44. O, saw ye bonie Lesley? Thomson's Scottish Airs, 1798, 33, 'written for this work by Robert Burns.' Air, The Collier's bonie lassie. Written in honour of Miss Lesley Baillie. A copy was sent in a letter to Mrs. Dunlop, August 22, 1792. 'Mr. B[ailie] with his two daughters, accompanied by Mr. H— of G—, passing through Dumfries a few days ago, on their way to England, did me the honour of calling on me; on which I took my horse (though God knows I could ill spare the time), and accompanied them fourteen or fifteen miles, and dined and spent the day with them. 'Twas about nine when I left them; and riding home, I composed the following ballad. . . . You must know that there is an old ballad beginning with My bonie Lizzy Baillie, I'll rowe thee in my plaidie, &c., so I parodied it as follows, which is literally the first copy.' The old ballad referred to is in Herd's Scottish Songs, 1776, ii. 3, and in the Scots Musical Museum, 1796, No. 456 (the first stanza omitted), with the following pretty melody, which Burns communicated to the editor:—

On November 8, 1792, Burns sent a copy of his song to George Thomson, who without authority altered the last line of the second stanza.

The tune, The collier's dochter or The collier's bonie dochter, is very well known on both sides of the Border. It is in Leyden's MS., c. 1690; in Playford's Original Scotch Tunes, 1700; Sinkler's MS., 1710; Stewart's Reels, 1762, 43; and entitled the Nine pint Cogie in McFarlane's MS., 1741, and with the words by Ramsay in the Orpheus Caledonius, 1725, No. 44. See Notes on Nos. 208 and 232.

No. 45. While larks with little wing. Currie, Works, 1800, iv. 88, entitled 'Phyllis the fair. Tune, Robin Adair.' Phyllis was the sister of Bonie Jean, of Song No. 49. The verses were written in August, 1793, and sent to Thomson with this note: 'I likewise tried my hand on Robin Adair, and you will probably think with little success; but it is such a damned cramp, out-of-the-way measure, that I despair of doing anything better to it.' . . . Burns, although dissatisfied with Phyllis the fair, did not carry out his intention of writing a Scots song for Robin Adair.

The tune Robin Adair or Eire a ruin is a captivating melody entitled Aileen a roon in the Caledonian Pocket Companion, 1753, v. 21, and McLean's Scots Tunes, 1772, 28. Professional vocalists usually load it with tawdry decorations, and throw rhythm overboard.

Burns has a note on the nationality of the air in his letter to Thomson of August, 1793. 'I have met with a musical Highlander in Breadalbane's Fencibles, which are quartered here, who assures me that he well remembers his mother singing Gaelic songs to both Robin Adair and Gramachree. They certainly have more of the Scots than the Irish taste in them. This man came from the vicinity of Inverness, so it could not be any intercourse with Ireland that could bring them; except what I shrewdly suspect to be the case—the wandering minstrels, harpers, or pipers, used to go frequently errant through the wilds both of Scotland and Ireland, and so some favourite airs might be common to both.' The air is Irish, so far as ascertained.

No. 46. Farewell, thou stream that winding flows. Thomson's Scottish Airs, 1799, 80, 'Written for this work by Robert Burns.' Air, The last time I came o'er the moor. This is the English version of a song written for Thomson in honour of Mrs. Maria Riddell, and after the quarrel with her he cancelled her name and replaced it by 'Eliza' as in the text. Of the first version which he sent to Thomson in April, 1793, he says: 'I had scarcely put my last letter into the post-office when I took up the subject of "The last time I came o'er the moor," and e'er I slept, drew the foregoing.' Eighteen months later he rewrote it as in the text, but was not enthusiastic on the result, and asked why Thomson could not take Ramsay's song in the Tea-Table Miscellany for the English specimen.

The tune in the Skene MS., c. 1630, is entitled Alas! yat I came ovr the moor and left my love behind me. Although Burns knew not the Skene MS., he makes the following note on his song: 'Where old titles of songs convey any idea at all, it will generally be found to be quite in the spirit of the air' (Reliques, 204). The music is in the Orpheus Caledonius, 1725, No. 6; Ramsay's Musick, c. 1726; Watts's Musical Miscellany, 1729, i. 142; M^cGibbon's Scots Tunes, 1742, 34; Caledonian Pocket Companion, 1745, ii. 24; Bremner's Scots Songs, 1757, 9; Scots Musical Museum, 1787, 18; Kitson's Scottish Songs, 1794, i. 114. In all cases the tune published differs considerably from that in the Skene MS., which is here reprinted from the transcription in Daune's Ancient Scottish Melodies, 1838, 217.

No. 47. A slave to love's unbounded sway. Scots Musical Museum, 1803, No. 574, signed 'B.' 'Written for this work by Robert Burns,' and confirmed by Stenhouse. How this song was written has not been ascertained. Scott-Douglas surmised that Jessie Lewars, who nursed Burns in his last illness, was the subject of it.

The tune, The Cordwainer's or Shoemaker's March, is in Aird's Airs, 1782, i. No. 176. It is a good melody in the minor mode, framed on the modern scale with sharp sixths and sevenths. The following Russian air, resembling the tune in the leading passages, is taken from Graham's Songs of Scotland, 1848:—

No. 48. Turn again, thou fair Eliza! Fair Eliza! Scots Musical Museum, 1792, No. 368, signed 'B,' entitled Fair Eliza, 'a Gaelic air.' Thomson's Scottish Airs, 1798, 42, with a wrong tune. In one of the few existing letters to James Johnson, the publisher of the Scots Musical Museum, the following extract is from that of November 15, 1788: 'Have you never a fair goddess that leads you a wild-goose chase of amorous devotion? Let me know a few of her qualities, such as whether she be rather black or fair, plump or thin, short or tall, &c., and choose your air, and I shall task my muse to celebrate her.' Some years later he made a similar application to George Thomson, but that gentleman replied that his name was Geordie, and his wife Katherine, both too unmusical to be put into verse. The song Fair Eliza was written for Johnson, as the original line in the MS. in the British Museum is Turn again, thou fair Rabina, a name previously suggested by Johnson.

The tune in the Museum is an adaptation of a Perthshire melody which Burns heard in his Highland tour. In evidence of Burns's attention to musical details for his songs, his instructions to Johnson for the tune of this song may be cited from the MS. in the British Museum: 'The song will not sing to your tune; but there is a Perthshire tune in M^cDonald's collection of Highland Airs which is much admired in this country; I intended the verses to sing to that air. It is on page 17, and No. 112. There is another air in the same collection, an Argyleshire air, which with a trifling alteration will do charmingly. It is on page 20, and No. 133. The alterations are: in the fourth bar of the first and third strains, which are to be the tune, instead of the crotchet C, and the quavers G and E, at the beginning of the bar make an entire minim in E, I mean E, the lowest line,' &c. &c. Johnson printed the song with both the melodies here cited by Burns, and that in our text is the last-named in M^cDonald's Airs, 1784, No. 133, slightly varied in Johnson's Museum.

No. 49. There was a lass, and she was fair. Currie, Works, 1800, iv. 79; Thomson's Scottish Airs, 1805, 152. The MS. is in Brechin Castle. Written for Jean, daughter of John M^cMurdo of Dumfries. Stephen Clarke, the professional musical editor of the Museum, was engaged as singing-master to the family, and Burns and he often met about this time. A portion of the song was sent to Thomson in April, 1793, with the copy of an unprinted air. The complete song was transmitted on July 2, when Burns states that 'Mr. Clarke, who wrote down the air from Mrs. Burns's wood-note wild, is very fond of it, and has given it celebrity by teaching it to some young ladies of the first fashion here. If you do not like the air enough to give it a place in your collection, please return me the air; the song you may keep, as I remember it.' Later, he urged Thomson to make a point of publishing the song to its own tune, in his next number, informing him that the old name of the air was There was a lass, and she was fair.

Thomson rejected the 'beautiful little air' which Burns sent, and printed the song to Willie was a wanton wag. The traditional air of the song is now irrecoverably lost. A well-known tune, Bonny Jean (of Aberdeen), which fits these verses of Burns, is in the Orpheus Caledonius, 1725, No. 18, and many other publications of the eighteenth century, but it is not the melody which Burns meant.

No. 50. O Philly, happy be that day. Currie, Works, 1800, iv. 201. 'Tune, The sow's tail.' Scottish Airs, 1805, 160. Thomson suggested verses for the Jacobite air, The sow's tail to Geordie. Burns replied that he was delighted with the tune, and proposed to write verses for it, which he completed on November 19, 1794.

The original Jacobite song is a bitter vulgar satire on the 'wee wee German lairdie' and 'Madame Kilmansegge,' whom George I brought with him from Hanover. The Countess of Darlington, née Kilmansegge, was a very large-sized noblewoman, known in England as 'The Elephant.' The Scots, even less polite, compared her to a more undignified animal in the song, which now occupies the book-shelves of the student of manners. One stanza out of eight in Hogg's Jacobite Relics, 1819, i. 91, may be quoted:—

'It's Geordie, he came up the town,
Wi' a bunch o' turnips on his crown;
"Aha!" quo she, "I'll pull them down,
And turn my tail to Geordie."

Chorus:—The sow's tail is till him yet,' &c. &c.

The tune—very popular in Scotland in the eighteenth century—is a remarkably easy-flowing melody. It has dropped out of use, and ought to be better known. The music is in M^cGlashan's Scots Measures, 1781, 39, and Aird's Airs, 1782, ii. No. 182.

No. 51. Adown winding Nith I did wander. Currie, Works, 1800, iv. 99. The second song on Phillis Macmurdo, written to gratify the poet's friend and musical adviser, Stephen Clarke. In August, 1793, Burns wrote to Thomson: 'Another favourite air of mine is The Muckin' o' Geordie's Byre. When sung slow with expression, I have wished that it had better poetry: that I have endeavoured to supply.' Thomson riding his favourite hobby, suggested that the verses should be entirely English, but Burns declined, and replied: 'I'll rather write a new song altogether than make this English. The sprinkling of Scotch in it, while it is but a sprinkling, gives it an air of rustic naivete, which time will rather increase than diminish.' Thomson did not print the song. The following stanza in the original copy was suppressed by Burns, as he thought it weak:—

'The primrose is o'er for the season,
But mark where the violet is blown;
How modest it peeps from the covert,
So modesty sure is her own.'

The melody has been popular for nearly two hundred years. The tune is stated to be in Crockall's MS. 1709; it is in the Orpheus Caledonius, 1725, No. 33, to a song beginning:—

'My daddie's a delver of dykes,
My minnie can card and spin,
And I'm a bonnie young lass
And the siller comes linkin in,' &c.

The tune is also in the Caledonian Pocket Companion, c. 1745, ii. 35, and the Scots Musical Museum, 1787, No. 96. A fragment is in Herd's Scots Songs, 1769, 311:—

'The mucking of Geordie's byre,
And shooping the grupe sae clean,
Has gar'd me weit my cheeks
And greit with baith my een.

CHORUS. '*It was ne'er my father's will,
Nor yet my mother's desire,
That e'er I should file my fingers
Wi' mucking of Geordie's byre.*

'The mouse is a merry beast,
And the moudiewart wants the een:
But the warld shall ne'er get wit
Sae merry as we hae been.'

No. 52. Here is the glen and here the bower. Thomson's Scottish Airs, 1798, 27, set to the air The Flowers of Edinburgh. The MS. is in the Thomson Collection. Sent in a letter to Thomson in June, 1794: 'I know you value a composition, because it is made by one of the great ones, as little as I do. However, I got an air, pretty enough, composed by Lady Elizabeth Heron of Heron, which she calls the Banks of Cree. Cree is a beautiful romantic stream, and as her ladyship is a particular friend of mine, I have written the following song to it. The air, I fear, is not worth your while; else I would send it to you.' The air, if it ever saw the light, cannot now be identified. The song is supposed to have been written for Mrs. Maria Riddell.

No. 53. O, wert thou in the cauld blast. Currie, Works, 1800, iv. 381, entitled Address to a lady. Thomson's Scottish Airs, 1818, 219. The story of this song is on the authority of Chambers. One day Burns, weak and pained, called on Jessie Lewars. He offered, if she would play to him her favourite tune, to write verses for it. She played Lenox love to Blantyre on the harpsichord until he was familiar with it by ear. The song, O wert thou in the cauld blast, a carefully polished work of art, was the result. Instead of adhering to the text and melody, Thomson changed the metre and printed the song to a different tune. The hand which penned it was soon to lose its cunning. On the tomb of Franz Schubert, the most prolific German composer, who died at an earlier age than Burns, is inscribed 'Music has here entombed a rich treasure, but still fairer hopes.' As a song-writer the same might probably be said of Burns, whose life and career resemble in many points those of the composer. A generous countryman said of Schubert that, if he had lived, he would have put the whole German language into music. Of Burns it may be said that, if he had lived, he would have put the whole of Scottish music into verse.

The first theme of Lenox love to Blantyre ends in the minor and the second on the major mode, like many other Scottish tunes. It has an extended compass—a serious drawback to popularity. The peculiar title was obtained from an estate acquired by Lord Blantyre. Frances Theresa Stewart, daughter of Walter Stewart, son of the second Lord Blantyre, born about 1647, was the original of the emblem of Britannia on the coinage. She married Charles Stuart, fourth Duke of Richmond and Lenox, and died in 1702, leaving considerable property to her nephew Alexander, fifth Lord Blantyre, requesting that an estate should be purchased in East Lothian, to be named Lenox love to Blantyre. The tune with this title is in Sinkler's MS. 1710. It is also in Bremner's Reels, 1757, 17; Stewart's Reels, 1761, 9; Campbell's Reels, 1778, 13; and in the Scots Musical Museum, 1796, No. 483, to the old song The wren shoe lyes in care's bed.

b. Ellison Begbie.

No. 54. Ilk care and fear, when thou art near. The last two stanzas and the chorus with the tune Braes o' Balquhiddier are in the Scots Musical Museum, 1788, No. 193. The complete song is in Cromek's Reliques, 1808, 441. The MS., wanting the first stanza, is in the British Museum with a note by Burns directing that the chorus is to the first or lowest part of the tune. Burns has stated that Bonie Peggie Alison or Ellison Begbie, was a juvenile production; but he never directly revealed the episode which occasioned this and the two following songs of his early years. The Braes o' Balquhiddier, one of his favourite reels, is said to be in Walsh's Caledonian Country Dances for 1742. It is in Bremner's Reels, 1758, 37; Aird's Airs, 1782, ii. No. 181, and elsewhere. It is a model specimen of the dance-music of Scotland of the early part of the eighteenth century. The modern air I'm over young to marry yet (not the same as the old tune of that name) is a variation of the Braes o' Balquhiddier.

No. 55. On Cessnock banks a lassie dwells. Twelve stanzas marked Tune, If he be a butcher neat and trim, first imperfectly printed in Cromek's Reliques, 1808, 442, and complete from the MS., in the Aldine edition, 1839. The verses are founded on a love passage in the poet's youth. The first four letters to an unknown correspondent, E., dated 1780 and 1781, and printed in Currie, Works, 1800, ii, 1, with a fifth printed by Scott-Douglas in 1878, were addressed to Ellison or Alison Begbie, the daughter of a farmer in the parish of Galston. At the time Burns knew her, she lived near Cessnock Water, about two miles from Lochlea. She was in the same rank of life as the poet, who began the correspondence partly as practice in the art of letter-writing. Burns's sister described Ellison Begbie as much above the small ordinary farmer's daughter, naturally gifted both in mind and person, accomplished in manners, and with a fair stock of personal attractions. Cromek took down his verses from the recitation of a lady in Glasgow, whom he said Burns affectionately admired. Probably she was the object of them.

The Tune, The butcher boy, is taken from the Scots Musical Museum, 1792, No. 304. I have not seen it in any earlier publication.

No. 56. O Mary, at thy window be. This exquisite lyric, which Burns of many moods rather disparaged in his later years, written in honour of Ellison Begbie, was originally published by Currie (Works, 1800, iv. 41), marked for the Tune, Bide ye yet; but in the copy sent to Thomson, March 20, 1793, the song is directed for the music of Duncan Davison. In the letter is the following statement: 'The song is one of my juvenile works. I leave it among your hands. I do not think it very remarkable, either for its merits or demerits. It is impossible to be always original, entertaining and witty.' It was published with the tune The Glasgow lasses, in Scottish Airs 1818, v. 219, and it is invariably printed in modern collections with The Miller, another unauthorized air. For the tune Duncan Davison or Ye'll ay be welcome back again, see Note 176.

c. Highland Mary (Mary Campbell).

No. 57. Will ye go to the Indies, my Mary? Currie, Works, 1800, iv. 12. This is the first song of the Highland Mary series, written when Burns proposed to emigrate. It lay unseen for nearly four and a half years, after which time he sent it to George Thomson. His letter of October, 1792, enclosing the song, contains one of his few references to Mary Campbell. 'In my very early years,' he writes, 'when I was thinking of going to the West Indies, I took the following farewell (i.e. the song) of a dear girl. It is quite trifling, and has nothing of the merits of Ewe-bughts; but it will fill up this page. You must know that all my earlier love-songs were the breathings of ardent passion, and though it might have been easy in after times to have given them a polish, yet that polish, to me whose they were, and who perhaps alone cared for them, would have defaced the legend of the heart, which was so faithfully inscribed on them. Their uncouth simplicity was, as they say of wines, their race.' Thomson had a poor opinion of the song, and missed the opportunity of the original publication by sending it to Currie. He printed it more than a quarter of a century later in his Select Melodies, 1822, i. 8.

The fine old verses for air Ewe-bughts Marion were published in Ramsay's Tea-Table Miscellany, 1724, and copied into Percy's Reliques, 1765. Percy misled the public by making it believe that all the pieces of poetry in his collection were in the MS. he described. Ewe-bughts Marion is not there, nor found anywhere else in the peculiar orthography of his Reliques. It is one of the remarkable pastorals for which Scotland is famous. The tune has been very much altered since its original publication in the Orpheus Caledonius, 1733, No. 15. It is in the modern style in Stewart's Scots Songs, 1781, 31; in the Musical Miscellany, Perth, 1786, 33; in Aird's Airs, 1788, iii. No. 476; and in the Museum, 1787, No. 85. In the Interleaved Museum, Burns says, 'I am not sure if this old and charming air be of the South, as is commonly said, or the North of Scotland. There is a song, apparently as ancient as Ewe-bughts Marion, which sings to the same tune, and is evidently of the North.' It begins thus:—

'The Lord of Gordon had three dochters,
Mary, Margret, and Jean;
They wad na stay at bonie Castle-Gordon
But awa to Aberdeen.' (Reliques, 1808, 229.)

The complete ballad, which Ritson obtained from a stall copy, was originally published in his Scottish Songs, 1794, ii. 169, and partly reprinted in Johnson's Museum, 1796, No. 419. If the fourth Earl of Huntley is referred to, then Burns's denomination, the 'Lord of Gordon,' is correct, and that in Ritson's and subsequent copies, the 'Duke of Gordon,' is wrong, for the Dukedom of Gordon was not created until 1684. George Gordon succeeded his grandfather

Alexander, the third Earl of Huntley, in 1523, and had three daughters as in the ballad. Jean married the Earl of Bothwell, who divorced her in 1568 to marry Mary, Queen of Scots. Her second husband was the Earl of Sutherland, who died in 1594, and surviving him (she must have had a tough constitution) she married Captain Alexander Ogilvie of Boyne, who died in 1606. As Jean is described in the ballad as 'bonny Jeanie Gordon,' evidently young, and having three children in three years by Captain Ogilvie, history and the ballad do not fit one another very well.

No. 58. Flow gently, sweet Afton, among thy green braes. Scots Musical Museum, 1792, No. 386, signed 'B,' entitled Afton Water. A MS. is in the British Museum, entitled Sweet Afton. The origin of this well-known, beautiful lyric is disputed. Currie relates that it was written on Afton Water, and in compliment to Mrs. Stewart; Gilbert Burns states that Mary Campbell was the heroine; Scott-Douglas agrees with this, but in the Centenary Burns it is asserted that it has no connexion with Highland Mary, but was written as a compliment to the river Afton which flows into the Nith near New Cumnock; and that the verses were sent to Mrs. Dunlop on February 5, 1789. This is doubtless correct; but it may be, and very likely is, a reminiscence of Mary Campbell. In 1791 Burns sent a copy to Mrs. Stewart of Stair. Stenhouse states that Burns communicated the melody to the Museum.

No. 59. Nae gentle dames, tho' ne'er sae fair. Scots Musical Museum, 1788, No. 117, signed 'X,' entitled The Highland Lassie O'. Scotch Airs, 1798, 37, with a wrong tune. The MS. is in the British Museum. 'This was a composition of mine in very early life, before I was known at all in the world. My Highland Lassie was a warm-hearted, charming young creature as ever blessed a man with generous love. After a pretty long tract of the most ardent reciprocal attachment, we met by appointment, on the second Sunday of May, in a sequestered spot by the Banks of Ayr, where we spent the day taking a farewell, before she should embark for the West Highlands, to arrange matters among her friends for our projected change of life. At the close of Autumn following she crossed the sea to meet me at Greenock, where she had scarce landed when she was seized with a malignant fever, which hurried my dear girl to the grave in a few days, before I could even hear of her illness' (Reliques, 1808; 237). This note has an important bearing on the Highland Mary episode, and it is necessary to warn the reader that the leaf from which Cromek is supposed to have copied it is now wanting in the Interleaved Museum. The questions arise, Was the note ever there? and, if so, why was it cut out, who abstracted it, and where is it now? For the Marion controversy see the Edinburgh edition, 1877, iv. 120-130.

The tune, M^o Lauchlin's Scots Measure, is in Original Scotch Tunes, 1700, and is unsuitable for Burns's gay song from its extended compass, which no ordinary voice can reach, and its skipping intervals. Another copy of the music is in the Caledonian Pocket Companion, 1754, vi. 28, entitled The Inverness Scots Measure, and in Aird's Airs, 1782, ii. No. 95.

No. 60. Thou ling'ring star with less'ning ray. Scots Musical Museum, 1790, No. 279, entitled My Mary, dear departed shade. Tune, Captain Cook's death, &c. This lyric is believed to have been written in October, 1789, the third anniversary of the death of Mary Campbell. There is no comment on the song by the poet in his notes. Many curious conjectures have been made as to the circumstances of the Highland Mary attachment, and Cromek was the first to connect this song with her. He relates how that on a night in October, Burns lay in the barn-yard on the lee-side of a corn-stack to protect himself from the keen frosty wind, and remained there until the dawn wiped out the stars, &c., &c. Lockhart, Life, chap. vii, on the authority of Mrs. Burns, gives a more circumstantial account of the origin of the song, quite as sensational as the other. That Burns was the victim of great emotion and hypochondria at this period may be learned from his correspondence. In a letter of December 13, 1789, full of melancholy, he laments the death of a dear young friend, and speaking of heaven, he says, 'There should I, with speechless agony of rapture, again recognize my ever dear Mary, whose bosom was fraught with truth, honor, constancy, and love.'

The tune is the sentimental composition of Miss Lucy Johnson, who became Mrs. Oswald of Auchencruive. That old beau, Kirkpatrick Sharpe, describes her as 'giving double charm to a minuet and dignifying a country dance.' No attempt will be made here to disturb the opinion that the tune is very beautiful, mais chacun à son goût.

No. 61. Ye banks and braes and streams around. Scottish Airs, 1799, 83, 'Written for this Work by Robert Burns.' 'Tune, Katherine Ogle.' This song on Mary Campbell is described to Thomson, November 14, 1792: 'It pleases myself; I think it is in my happiest manner; you will see at first glance that it suits the air. The subject of the song is one of the most interesting passages of my youthful days, and I own that I would be much flattered to see the verses set to an air which would ensure celebrity. Perhaps, after all, 'tis the still glowing prejudice of my heart that throws a borrowed lustre over the merits of the composition.' He requested Thomson to print the song in his first volume, but his wish was not gratified.

The tune Katherine Ogle was a favourite of Burns. Thomson suggested that the old song should be dressed, but Burns declined any connexion with such poor stuff. The song in the Tea-Table Miscellany, 1724, is an amended version of 'As I went forth to view the plain,' taken from Wit and Mirth, or Pills to purge melancholy. The nationality of both words and music are disputed. The tune is in Playford's Dancing Master, 1688, with the title, Lady Catherine Ogle, a new dance. In Apollo's Banquet, 1686, it is printed twice; the first time with the same title as in the Dancing Master, and in the second part of the collection as A Scotch Tune. Tom Durfey wrote verses for it entitled A New Scotch Song, beginning Walking down the Highland town, and printed in his Pills, 1719, ii. 200, and elsewhere as Bonny Katherine Loggy: a Scotch song. The verses are a poor imitation of the Scots' vernacular. The music is also in Bruce's MS., 1706, and Graham's MS., 1694, both quoted by the late J. Muir Wood; Craig's Scots Tunes, 1730, 20; Orpheus Caledonius, 1725, No. 22; Watts's Musical Miscellany, 1729, ii. 166; M^cGibbon's Scots Tunes, 1742, 20; Caledonian Pocket Companion, 1752, iv. 2, and elsewhere. The title of the air, as in the Dancing Master, was obviously in honour of Lady Catherine Ogle, youngest daughter, and one of the co-heirs of the Duke of Newcastle and Baron Ogle. She died in 1691.

d. Jean Armour (Mrs. Burns).

No. 62. Tho' cruel fate should bid us part. Scots Musical Museum, 1788, No. 118, signed 'R.' The MS. is in the British Museum, with no direction for the tune. There is, however, another MS. of the verses marked for the air She rose and loot me in, which Johnson could not adopt, as it had already been appropriated in the first volume of the Museum. So he set the verses of Burns to The Northern Lass.

Both the words and air of the original song She rose and let me in are disputed. According to Chappell, the complete song is in a New Collection of Songs, London, 1683, the words by Thomas Durfey and 'set by Mr. Thomas Farmer.' It is also in Durfey's Pills, 1719, i. 324. The earliest copy of the music in a Scottish collection is in Sinkler's MS., 1710, and the words in Ramsay's Miscellany, 1725. Both are in the Orpheus Caledonius, 1733, No. 14, and the music is much improved. It is repeated in the Caledonian Pocket Companion, 1743, i. 21. There is no copy of either the words or the music known in Scotland before the early part of the eighteenth century, and the claim for the verses being the work of Sir Francis Beltrées, a Renfrewshire knight, falls to the ground. The tune is a good melody of the scholastic kind, without any traits of the untutored music of Scotland. It is here taken from the Orpheus Caledonius.

No. 63. Altho' my back be at the wa'. Scots Musical Museum, 1796, No. 480, signed 'Z,' entitled Here's his health in water, with the music of The job of journey work. In writing about the Jacobite song of Lewie Gordon, Burns refers to the pathos of the line, 'Tho' his back be at the wa'.' See Hogg's Jacobite Relics, 1821, 176. It would be difficult to prove that Burns's verses refer to Jean Armour, but they must remain here as the best place for them.

The music in the text is from Burns's MS. in the British Museum, from which Johnson got his tune which was first printed in Aird's Airs, 1788, iii. No. 401. The second movement of an Irish melody The little red fox, which may be seen in Stanford's Irish Melodies, 1894, 36, has a remarkable likeness to the swing of The job of journey work, and further light is wanted on the origin of the melody for which Burns wrote his song.

No. 64. When first I came to Stewart Kyle. Commonplace Book, 1872, 47, entitled 'A fragment. Tune, I had a horse and I had nae mair.' Printed in Cromek's Reliques, 1808, 346. Burns's mother stated that he first met Jean Armour at a peasants' ball, or some similar entertainment. The poet was attended by his collie dog, which followed him about the room, and got in the way of the dancers; whereupon he remarked to his partner that he wished he could find a lass who would like him as well as his dog. A few weeks afterwards the acquaintance was renewed, which ripened into marriage.

I cannot trace the music of I had a horse further back than the copy in Johnson's Museum, 1788, No. 185, printed with the old song, which Burns said was founded on an incident in the life of a John Hunter, whose great-grandchild related the story to Burns. The verses, published in Herd's Scots Songs, 1769, 323, begin:—

'I had a horse, and I had nae mair,
I gat him frae my daddy;
My purse was light, and my heart was sair,
But my wit it was fu' ready.
And sae I thoct upon a wile,
Outwittens of my daddy,
To fee mysell to a lowland laird,
Who had a bonny lady,' &c.

No. 65. In Mauchline there dwells. Glenriddell MS. Published in Currie, Works, 1800, iii. 380, entitled The Mauchline belles. Tune, Bonnie Dundee. The first of these 'belles' was Helen Miller, who married a Dr. Mackenzie. The second, Miss Markland, married Burns's friend and future colleague in the Excise, James Findlay. Jean Smith married James Candlish, another friend of Burns, and was the mother of Dr. Candlish who succeeded Dr. Chalmers as leader of the Free Kirk of Scotland. Betty Miller, sister of Helen above referred to, became a Mrs. Templeton. Miss Morton married a merchant in Mauchline; while the last was Jean Armour, who became the poet's wife. For the tune, see No. 112.

No. 66. O thou pale Orb that silent shines. Kilmarnock edition, 1786, 150. The verses in the text are three stanzas of The Lament, which Burns, in Gray's MS. Lists, directed as follows: 'For the tune in the Scotch Queen, Oswald, take the first and the last two stanzas of the poem entitled The Lament in Burns's poems.' These directions Burns sent to Johnson of the Museum, but they were not followed, and the verses are now printed for the first time with the proper melody. For the tune in the Scots Musical Museum a song of Mrs. M^cLehose was inserted, for which Burns wrote a stanza to complete the verses. See Song No. 76.

The tune Scots Queen is in Oswald's Companion, c. 1759, xii. 1, and the Scots Musical Museum, 1788, No. 190.

The primary cause of Burns's arrangements for emigrating in 1786 arose out of the amour with Jean Armour, to which the beautiful poem The Lament refers. The state of mind of the poet, at this time bordering on madness, is described in his Autobiography.

No. 67. Again rejoicing Nature sees. Edinburgh edition, 1787, 327. Tune, Jockey's gray breeks, with a footnote on the chorus: 'This chorus is part of a song composed by a gentleman in Edinburgh, a particular friend of the author's.' According to Scott-Douglas, the chorus was written by the poet himself, and to conceal the reference to Jean Armour he changed the name to 'Menie.' At this time, the beginning of 1787, he was in Edinburgh correcting the proofs of the first Edinburgh edition.

The tune, a variation of The weaver and his shuttle, a title not in any Scottish collection, is taken from the Caledonian Pocket Companion, c. 1745, ii. 32. The music is also in Oswald's Curious Scots Tunes, 1742, ii. 6, Aird's Airs, 1782, i. No. 59, and in the Perth Musical Miscellany, 1786, 256. The old song for the tune has never been printed, and it is doubtful whether more exists than the following fragment in Herd's MS. :—

'I'll hae Johnny's gray breeks
 For a' the ill he's done me yet
 And I'll hae Johnny's gray breeks
 For a' the ill he's done me yet.
 He's done me ill and against my will,
 And a' the country kens o' that!
 Yet I'll hae Johnny's gray breeks
 For a' the ill he's done me yet.'

No. 68. Tho' women's minds like winter winds. Scots Musical Museum, 1790, No. 290, signed 'X,' and with the tune For a' that. 'This song is mine, all except the chorus' (Reliques, 282). In a footnote Cromek states that it is part of the bard's song in The Jolly Beggars. Doubtless; but it would be more proper to say that the song was rewritten for publication in the Museum, and for one of the favourite melodies of Burns. In the Law MS. it is marked 'Mr. B.'s old words.' The third stanza was originally printed in the Pickering edition of Burns. For the tune, see Nos. 275 and 309.

No. 69. Of a' the airts the wind can blaw. Scots Musical Museum, 1790, No. 235, signed 'R,' entitled I love my Jean. Tune, Miss Admiral Gordon's Strathspey. 'Mr. Burns sent the words' (Law's MS. List). The MS. is in the British Museum. This and the following five songs are the honeymoon series, written in the last seven or eight months of 1788, and referring to his wife or his matrimonial life. Of a' the airts is justly one of the best-known and most popular songs of Scotland. 'The air is by Marshall; the song I composed out of compliment to Mrs. Burns. N.B. It was during the honeymoon' (Reliques, 1808, 273). It was written at Ellisland in June; his wife was then staying at Mossiel with his mother and sisters. The song is very rarely printed correctly, and in many copies are added two spurious double stanzas, the work of John Hamilton, a music publisher. Allan Cunningham was responsible for leading the public astray, by asserting that they were in Burns's MS. In Thomson's Select Melodies, 1823, v. No. 10, a new set of sixteen lines are marked, 'Added by Mr. Richardson for this work.'

The tune is the composition of William Marshall, butler to the Duke of Gordon. Stenhouse assumed that Marshall borrowed part of the air from The lowlands of Holland, but Mr. John Glen of Edinburgh has proved the opposite. The latter tune was not printed before 1790, while Miss Admiral Gordon's Strathspey was published in Marshall's Collection of Reels, 1781. It is in M^cGlashan's Reels, 1786, 4. The rudiments of this fine melody can be seen in the Skene MS., c. 1630, under the title Alace! I lie my alon I'm lik to die auld. (Daune's Ancient Scottish Melodies, p. 227.)

No. 70. O, how can I be blythe and glad? In Scots Musical Museum, 1792, No. 317, signed 'X,' entitled The bonie lad that's far awa', without the second stanza. Complete in Cromek's Reliques, 1808, 432. This song is supposed to be sung by Jean Armour, lamenting the absence of her husband. Burns has left no memorandum of the song, but the MS. is in the British Museum, minus the second stanza. Burns got the idea from verses in Herd's Scottish Songs, 1776, ii. 1, which in its turn was an abridgement of a black-letter ballad of fifteen stanzas, c. 1690, entitled The inconstant shepherd, or the Forsaken Lass's Lamentation. London: Printed for C. Bates at the Sun and Bible, Pye Corner. To an excellent new Tune. Herd, with slight variation, copied the first, fourth and eighth stanzas into his collection. The ballad is exceptionally good for a street publication, the following being the first stanza :—

'O, how can I be merry or glad,
Or in my mind contented be;
When the bonny, bonny lad whom I love best
Is banish'd out of my company?
Tho' he is banish'd for my sake,
And his true love I still remain,
He has caused me many a night for to wake
And adieu to my true love once again!

I cannot identify the 'excellent new tune' of this ballad, but it may have been O'er the hills and far away (see Song No. 257). Songs with this refrain were common in the seventeenth and eighteenth centuries. The tune in the text from the Museum was originally published there, and was probably communicated by Burns.

No. 71. I hae a wife o' my ain. Scots Musical Museum, 1792, No. 352, signed 'B.' The MS. is in the British Museum. The style and humour of this irresistible song is delightful, and the nationality unmistakable. The energetic verses were framed on an old model :—

'I hae a wife o' my awn,
I'll be haddin to naebody;
I hae a pat and a pan,
I'll borrow frae naebody.'

Burns owed nothing to this or any other previous verses.

The tune confirms the evidence of the existence of songs now lost. The title I hae a wife o' my ain, clearly the first line of a song, is in Walsh's Caledonian Country Dances; in Bremner's Reels, 1759, 45; in Stewart's Reels, 1761, 12; and in Campbell's Reels, 1778, 73. Schumann composed an original lilt on Scottish lines, entitled Niemand, for a translation of Burns's song.

No. 72. It is na, Jean, thy bonie face. Scots Musical Museum, 1792, No. 333. The MS. is in the British Museum, without direction for music. This eulogy on his wife was written near the close of the year 1788. 'These were originally English verses: I gave them their Scots' dress' (Interleaved Museum). There is more philosophy than passion in them. Burns may have got the idea from a popular song of last century, by George Etheridge, beginning It is not Celia, in our power, otherwise nothing of another similar song has been discovered.

The tune, The maid's complaint, is by James Oswald, printed in Curious Collection Scots Tunes, 1740, 14, and in the Caledonian Pocket Companion, 1752, iv. 30.

No. 73. Louis, what reek I by thee? Scots Musical Museum, 1796, No. 414, signed 'R,' entitled Louis, what reek I by thee? The MS. is not known. Scott-Douglas assumes that the verses were written in December, 1788, after the poet's wife and family joined him at Ellisland. The hand of Burns is apparent in the vigorous language of the verses. The signature in the Museum confirms the authorship.

Stenhouse, without quoting authority, states that Burns communicated the tune to the editor of the Museum. I have not discovered it in any earlier Scottish collection of music. The first two lines in the relative major key are the opening bars of The British Grenadiers.

No. 74. O, were I on Parnassus' hill. Scots Musical Museum, 1790, No. 255, signed 'R.' Tune, My love is lost to me. 'Mr. B.'s words' (Law's MS. List). Thomson's Scottish Airs, 1798, No. 29. Nearly all Burns's letters of the latter part of the year 1788 contain some reference to his married life. To Peggy Chalmers, dated September 16, he relates that his wife never spent five minutes on any book, except the Old and New Testaments, the Psalms of David, and his own poems, which she has perused very devoutly, and all the ballads in the county, 'as she has the finest woodnote wild I ever heard.' A surfeit of probable models of the song are in the Centenary Burns. 'This air is Oswald's: the song I made out of compliment to Mrs. Burns' (Interleaved Museum). The tune My love is lost to me, or O Jean, I love thee, is in the Caledonian Pocket Companion, 1753, v. 25, and in Calliope, 1788, 176. The extended compass of the air has interfered with its popularity.

No. 75. Out over the Forth, I look to the north. Scots Musical Museum, 1796, No. 421. The MS. is in the British Museum, with the title I look to the north. In a letter to Cunningham, Burns quotes four lines of the song, and asks his correspondent how he liked them as a sample he had 'on the tapis.' He wrote on the copy for the Museum, 'The enclosed tune is a part of Gow's Charles Graham's welcome hame, but I do not think the close of the second part of the tune happy. Mr. Clarke, on looking over Gow's air, will conceive a better;' which Clarke did. The tune is in Gow's Second Collection, 1788, 20.

e. 'Clarinda' (Mrs. M^cLehose).

No. 76. For thee is laughing Nature gay. Museum, 1788, No. 190, entitled 'To a blackbird. By a lady,' and signed 'M.' Tune, Scots Queen. The MS. is in the British Museum. Burns wrote only the four lines beginning, 'For thee is laughing Nature gay'; the rest are by Mrs. M^cLehose. For the tune, see No. 66.

No. 77. Your friendship much can make me blest. Second stanza of a song in Scots Musical Museum, 1788, No. 186, entitled 'Talk not of love, it gives me pain. By a lady.' Tune, Banks of Spey. Signed 'M.' The MS. is in the British Museum. About the beginning of December, 1787, Burns met Mrs. M^cLehose for the first time. She was parted from her husband, a Glasgow solicitor, who had gone to the West Indies. Handsome and good-looking, sentimental and religious, and about the same age as Burns, she wished to become better acquainted with the poet, and invited him to take tea at her house. He was prevented from keeping the engagement by an accident which confined him to his lodgings for two months. A formal correspondence began in the orthodox fashion, but it progressed so rapidly that in a fortnight she signed herself Clarinda and he followed suit with Sylvander. Sometimes two or three letters a day were interchanged, and the whole episode lasted three and a half months. The writing for the most part is stilted sentiment, and although there is the appearance of much enthusiasm and passion, there is an absence of reality about the whole affair. But Burns showed that he could compete with Abelard or Sterne in that style of epistolography. On the lady's part it was a more serious affair, and during all her long life she cherished the memory of Burns.

Mrs. M^cLehose wrote verses, and Burns assisted her with his criticism. The eight lines in the text were added to twelve written by her, four of which were omitted in the Museum.

The tune, rather commonplace, was taken from M^cGibbon's Scots Tunes, 1755, 23; it is also in Caledonian Pocket Companion, xi. 10. A different Banks of Spey is in M^cGlashan's Reels, 1786, 3.

No. 78. Thine am I, my faithful fair. Thomson's Scottish Airs, 1799, 59. 'Written for this work by Robert Burns.' The MS. is in Brechin Castle. There is no record of this song before 1793, but it probably is one of the Clarinda series. On sending it to Thomson the only remark Burns makes is: 'The verses I hope will please you as an English song to the air' (i. e. The Quaker's wife). In 1795, two lines were altered to fit Jean Lorimer. He was at that time under the 'Chloris' enchantment, and he threatened to anathematize Thomson if he did not make the proposed alterations. The song was published as desired, but to the melody Up in the morning early, without authority.

For the tune, The Quaker's wife, or Merrily dance the Quaker, see Song No. 40.

No. 79. Behold the hour, the boat arrive! Currie, Works, 1800, iv. 111. 'Tune, Oran gaoil'; Thomson's Scottish Airs, 1805, 154. A song altered in December, 1791, to connect it with Mrs. M^cLehose, who was about to leave for the West Indies. The original begins:—

'Behold, the fatal hour arrive,
Nice, my Nice, ah, farewell.'

The tune Oran Gaoil is referred to in a letter to George Thomson of August, 1793. 'They have lately in Ireland, with great pomp, published an Irish air as they say, called Caun du delish. The fact is, in a publication of Corri's a great while ago, you find the same air called a Highland one, with a Gaelic song set to it. Its name there, I think, is Oran Gaoil, and a fine air it is.' More than a year afterwards he returns to the subject. 'The other one in your collection Oran gaoil, which you think is Irish, they claim as theirs by the name of Caun du delish, but look into your publications of Scottish Songs, and you will find it as a Gaelic Song, with the words in that language, a wretched translation of which original words is set to the tune in the Museum. Your worthy Gaelic priest gave me that translation, and at his table I heard both the original and the translation sung by a large party of Highland gentlemen, all of whom had no other idea of the tune than that it was a native of their own country.' The authorities referred to by Burns are Corri's Scots Songs, 1783, ii. 29, and the Scots Musical Museum, 1790, No. 273. The old Jew, in the Caledonian Pocket Companion, c. 1753, v. 19, has only a remote resemblance to this admirable Celtic melody.

No. 80. Clarinda, mistress of my soul. Scots Musical Museum, 1788, No. 198, entitled Clarinda. Signed 'B.' Written early in 1788, during the Clarinda craze. Thomson inserted them in his Select Melodies, 1822, iii. 13, altering some of the lines without authority. He set them to an original melody of little merit by Stephen Clarke, the friend of Burns.

The tune in the Museum is the composition of Schetki, according to Burns in the Interleaved Museum, where he acknowledges the verses. The music, in the style of a psalm-tune, does not resemble the secular music of the country.

No. 81. Now in her green mantle blythe Nature arrays. Thomson's Scottish Airs, 1799, 99. 'Written for this work by Robert Burns.' On December 9, 1794, Burns wrote to Thomson that he had just framed this song. A short time before he had styled Clarinda a ci-devant goddess of his. His last letter to Mrs. McLehose is dated June 25, 1794. Scott-Douglas makes a curious suggestion that this song is her composition, which Burns abstracted.

The tune for this celebrated lyric, Ther'll never be peace till Jamie comes hame, is a Jacobite melody. Thomson disregarded Burns's direction, and set the song to the Irish tune Coolin. In vocal collections the song is printed with a modern tune. It is now for the first time associated with the music for which it was written, otherwise known as There are few good fellows when Jamie's awa'. See tune No. 302.

No. 82. O May, thy morn was ne'er sae sweet. Scots Musical Museum, 1796, No. 464, signed 'B.' The MS. is in the British Museum. The verses are supposed to commemorate the last interview with 'Clarinda.' Burns entitled the tune The Rashies, which is in Oswald's Companion, 1753, v. 26. The editor of the Museum considerably altered the tune. The music in the text is taken from the copy Burns directed. It is now best known as The wee wee German Lairdie, from a song which originally appeared in Cromek's Nithsdale and Galloway Song, 1810, written probably by Allan Cunningham, although vouched as old by the Ettrick Shepherd. Tibbie Shiel, of St. Mary's Loch, the celebrated hostess of Sir Walter Scott, sung it to The dowie dens of Yarrow. It is set to that well-known ballad in Kidson's Traditional Tunes, 1891, 21; it also did modern service in Yorkshire to a Roxburgh ballad, A lamentable new ditty . . . to a delicate Scottish tune. In the Caledonian Pocket Companion, xi. 23, the tune is repeated under the title When the King comes o'er the water.

No. 83. Ance mair I hail thee. Scots Musical Museum, 1796, No. 499, signed 'R.' The MS. is in the British Museum. An unfinished copy of the verses was sent to 'Clarinda' about the end of December, 1791. Stenhouse has asserted that Burns wrote the song for the tune Wandering Willie, but that is incorrect. On the MS. of the song, Burns wrote as follows: 'Tune, Thro' the lang muir I followed him hame. See this tune, Oswald's Book [vii.] 30.' It is also in Aird's Airs, 1782, i. No. 34.

No. 84. Ae fond kiss, and then we sever! Scots Musical Museum, 1792, No. 347, signed 'X,' entitled Rory Dall's port. This impassioned lyric also belongs to the second cycle of the 'Clarinda' series. The lady had arranged to rejoin her husband in the West Indies, and the verses refer to her departure in December, 1791. Burns sent her copies of a few songs at the same time, saying 'I have just been composing to different tunes, for the Collection of Songs [Johnson's Museum], of which you have three volumes, and of which you shall have the fourth.'

The air Rory Dall's port is in the Caledonian Pocket Companion, c. 1756, viii. 24. In Straloch's MS. 1629, there is a different melody of the same name. Rory Dall was the cognomen of a succession of harpers attached to the family of Macleod of Skye. Port is the generic name for the national Celtic airs of the Highlands of Scotland. A large number of ports are believed to be still floating in the Western Highlands, unrecorded.

No. 85. Sensibility how charming. Scots Musical Museum, 1792, No. 329. Select Melodies, 1822, iii. 36. The MS. is in the British Museum. After Burns relinquished Ellisland and before removing to Dumfries, he made an excursion to Edinburgh, on which occasion he paid a visit to Clarinda. The correspondence between them, which abruptly terminated in 1788 in consequence of his marriage, was resumed in 1791, and this watery song was written in return for some verses she sent to him. Copies were forwarded to Mrs. Dunlop and Mrs. Stewart of Afton. In the Museum MS. the song is directed to be sung to Cornwallis lament for Colonel Moorhouse, a poor composition of the professional type, written by a Malcolm Stewart. No ordinary human voice can reach all the notes in the tune. To account for the great compass of many of the Scottish melodies, it is necessary to know that the falsetto voice was much used among the peasantry.

f. 'Chloris' (Jean Lorimer).

No. 86. From the white-blossom'd sloe. This fugitive fragment is said to have been published in a newspaper in the year 1800. It is in Stewart's edition, 1802; Edinburgh edition, 1877, iii. 205. The authorship has been disputed, but the holograph of Burns is in the possession of Mr. Walter Steven, Montrose. Early last century a second stanza was added, and William Shield composed an original air for the verses and published it as a sheet-song. The lines have been attributed to Charles Dibdin, but Hogarth very properly has not included them in Dibdin's Works. In a modern popular collection of songs, the stanza of Burns is stated to be by John O'Keefe.

No. 87. Wilt thou be my dearie? Scots Musical Museum, 1796, No. 470, signed 'B.' Thomson's Scotish Airs, 1799, 77. The MS. is in the British Museum. Written for Miss Janet Miller of Dalswinton, and referred to as follows in a letter to Alexander Cunningham, dated March 3, 1794: 'Apropos, do you know the much-admired Highland air called The sutor's dochtor? It is a firstrate favourite of mine, and I have written what I reckon one of my best songs to it. I will send it to you, set as I think it should be, and as it was sung with great applause in many fashionable groups by Major Robertson, of Lude, who was here with his corps.' Cunningham showed the song to Thomson, who admired it. Burns inquired if he intended it for publication, but the reply was apparently indefinite, and Burns sent a copy to Johnson for the Museum. A note in the MS. states that the song is to be set to the first part of the tune, entitled The shoemaker's daughter, in Stewart's Reels, 1763, 72; as The sutor's daughter in M^cGlashan's Strathspey Reels, 1780, 6; and in Cumming's Strathspeys, 1780, No. 10, as the Dutchess of Bucclugh's Reell.

No. 88. Why, why tell thy lover. Currie, Works, 1800, iv. 251, entitled 'Fragment. Tune, The Caledonian Hunt's Delight.' This was sent to Thomson with the explanation: 'Such is the peculiarity of the rhythm of this air, that I find it impossible to make another stanza to suit it'; and so the song remained unfinished. Thomson replied that the lines would suit, but preferred bacchanalian verses which he thought fitted the pace and gait of the music. On the margin of the MS. Thomson wrote that he would take the song for some other air (which he never found), and inserted instead the verses of Ye Banks and Braes with the melody.

For the tune, see Song No. 123.

No. 89. Sleep'st thou, or wak'st thou, fairest creature? Currie, Works, iv. 181, entitled 'The lover's morning salute to his mistress. Tune, Deil tak the wars'; Thomson's Scotish Airs, 1805, 157. The MS. is in Brechin Castle. Jean Lorimer is now an imposing figure in the canvass of Burns. The first draft of Sleep'st thou differs materially from that printed, showing that it was revised and polished. Burns hoped that Thomson would insert the song in his next volume. Thomson suggested English verses, but Burns replied: 'I could easily throw this into an English mould; but to my taste, in the simple and tender of the pastoral song, a sprinkling of the old Scottish has an inimitable effect.' He declined to alter what he had written, and Thomson was told that he could reject the song or place it as a secondary one, or set it to the air and put the old song second. The editor wished to insert in Scotish Airs the verses of Deil tak the wars from Durfey's Wit and Mirth, 1698, but Burns fell foul of him for proposing that such rubbish (well-known in Scotland) should be selected for a Scottish collection.

The tune, variously named, is said to be in Leyden's MS., 1690; it is in Atkinson's MS., 1694; Durfey's Pills, 1719, i. 294, entitled A Scotch Song; Oswald's Curious Scots Tunes, 1740, 26; Caledonian Pocket Companion, 1743,

i. 7; M^cGibbon's Scots Tunes, 1768, iv. 117; Perth Musical Miscellany, 1786, 340; and Scots Musical Museum, 1790, No. 262.

No. 90. Sweet fa's the eve on Craigeiburn. Thomson's Scottish Airs, 1798, 32. 'Written for this work by Robert Burns.' This is the second set of the song Sweet closes the evening on Craigeiburn Wood, which had previously been published in Johnson's Museum, 1792, No. 301, and now fitted for his friend John Gillespie, who had fallen in love with Jean Lorimer, or the 'Chloris' of his songs. Burns explained to Thomson how it was penned, and was anxious that it should be published. He says: 'The lady on whom it was made is one of the finest women in Scotland, and in fact, is in a manner to me, what Sterne's Eliza was to him. . . . I assure you that to my lovely friend you are indebted for many of your best songs of mine. . . . The lightning of her eye is the gohead of Parnassus, and the witchery of her smile the divinity of Helicon.'

Burns obtained the melody from 'the singing of a girl,' and communicated it to the Museum when he sent the first version. In the Interleaved Museum he made a note on the tune, which is an excellent specimen of the folk-melody of Scotland.

No. 91. Sæ flaxen were her ringlets. Scots Musical Museum, 1796, No. 447, signed 'B,' entitled 'She says she lo'es me best of a. An Irish air.' Thomson's Scottish Airs, 1805, 190. The MS. is in the British Museum. The song was sent to Thomson, September, 1794, in a letter: 'Do you know a blackguard Irish song, Oonagh's waterfall? The air is charming, and I have often regretted the want of decent verses to it. It is too much, at least for my humble rustic muse to expect that every effort of hers must have merit; still, I think it is better to have mediocre verses to a favourite air, than none at all. On this principle I have all along proceeded in the Scots Musical Museum, and . . . I intend the following song to the air I mentioned, for that work. If it does not suit you as an editor, you may be pleased to have verses to it, that you may sing it before ladies.'

The tune Oonagh's waterfall deserves the praise Burns gave it. It is still well known and popular in Ireland. The music is in the Scots Musical Museum, 1796, No. 447. I do not know where an earlier imprint can be found. Tom Moore copied the melody, and it is still reprinted as in the Museum. Mr. Glen states that it was introduced into Shield's ballad opera Marian, 1788.

No. 92. Can I cease to care? Currie, Works, 1800, iv. 227, entitled 'On Chloris being ill. Tune, Ay, waukin, O;' Thomson's Scottish Airs, 1801, 111, where it is mutilated by garbled verses and a modern set of the air which destroys its character. For the Notes, see No. 147.

No. 93. Their groves o' sweet myrtle. Thomson's Scottish Airs, 1799, 95. 'By Robert Burns. Air, The humours of Glen.' The MS. is in the Thomson collection. Written in April, 1795. Currie was enthusiastic over the song, and predicted that it would be sung by emigrant Scots with equal or superior interest on the banks of the Ganges, or the Mississippi, than on the Tay or the Tweed. His forecast is true, but not in the way intended; for it is equally neglected at home and abroad. Burns wrote to Thomson: 'The Irish air, Humours of Glen, is a great favourite of mine, and except the silly verses in the Poor soldier, there are not any decent verses for it.' The poor soldier is one of O'Keefe's successful operas written about the middle of the eighteenth century. The tune is in M^cLean's Scots Tunes, c. 1772, 31, and in the Scots Musical Museum, 1803, No. 567. A tradition in Ireland assigns the composition to one of the family of Power, about the middle of the eighteenth century, who owned an estate near Clonmel. Glyn or Glen is a small country village midway between Carrick and Clonmel.

No. 94. Mark yonder pomp of costly fashion. Currie, Works, 1800, iv. 233. 'Tune, Deil tak the wars.' Scottish Airs, 1805, 157. The MS. is in the Thomson collection. Another of the English songs concerning which Burns wrote to Thomson that he took credit to himself for answering orders with the punctuality of a tailor making a suit of clothes. For the tune, see No. 89.

No. 95. Ah, Chloris, since it may not be. Aldine edition, 1839. 'Tune, Major Graham.' It may be assumed that this was written in 1794. It was originally printed from the poet's MS. For the tune, see No. 152.

No. 96. I see a form, I see a face. Thomson's Scottish Airs, 1799, 36. 'Written for this work by Robert Burns. Air, This is no my ain house.' The MS. is in the Thomson collection. The first sketch made in July, and finished in August, 1795. Burns remarked that the rhythm of the music puzzled him a good deal, and he thought that changing the first or chorus part would have a good effect.

The tune This is no my ain house, or Abbeyhills rant, is said to be in Blaikie's MS., 1692; Orpheus Caledonius, 1733, No. 32 with words; Aird's Airs, 1782, ii. No. 176, and Caledonian Pocket Companion, xi. 8. Verses are marked to be sung to the tune in Ramsay's Miscellany, 1725; and Herd's Scots Songs, 1769, 190. Thomson is responsible for making considerable variations in the melody.

No. 97. O, bonie was yon rosy brier. Currie, Works, 1800, iv. 242, entitled 'Scottish Song'; Thomson's Scottish Airs, 1801, 115. The MS. is in the Thomson collection. Written for Stephen Clarke, who proposed to set it to an original melody for publication in sheet form. The arrangement was not carried through, and Burns instructed Thomson to print his song with the tune I wish my love were in a mire. Thomson published it with quite a different melody. Of I wish my love were in a mire, That I may pu' her out again, Burns says in the Interleaved Museum: 'I never heard more of the old words of this old song than the title.' The music is said to be in Crockatt's MS., 1709; it is in Orpheus Caledonius, 1725, No. 5; to verses by 'namby-pamby' Phillips beginning 'Blest as the immortal Gods'; Ramsay's Musick, c. 1726; Craig's Scots Tunes, 1730, 31; McGibbon's Scots Tunes, 1742, 15; Caledonian Pocket Companion, 1754, vi. 9; Bremner's Scots Songs (second series), 1757, 7; and Scots Musical Museum, 1787, No. 41.

No. 98. O, wat ye wha that lo'es me. Thomson's Scottish Airs, 1799, 67. 'Written for this work by Robert Burns. Air, Morag.' The precise date when it was written has not been ascertained, but probably in the autumn of 1795, for in January, 1796, in forwarding a copy to Robert Cleghorn, Burns apologizes for not sending it sooner, and excuses himself for the omission. He had lost a young and darling daughter, and immediately after, was attacked by rheumatic fever which kept him many weeks in bed. Cleghorn had previously met Jean Lorimer at Burns's house, and was interested in the poet's model.

The song is marked for the tune Morag, as Burns did not consider that his Young Highland rover fitted that melody. See Song No. 292.

No. 99. There's nane shall ken. Scots Musical Museum, 1796, No. 458. The MS. in the British Museum contains the following holograph note: 'This tune is evidently the old air, We'll gang nae mair to yon town, and I suspect it is not the best set of the air, but in Bowie's and other collections the old tune is to be found, and you can correct this by these copies.' Burns was always at his best in the songs for the Museum. He worked in his natural element unfettered, and was never gravelled in the compulsory use of English to satisfy an editor who wished to suppress the Scottish vernacular. The airy freedom of this little lyric may be compared with the laboured verses of No. 106 for the same tune, written for Thomson. The old song, as quoted by Stenhouse, began:—

‘I’ll gang nae mair to yon town,
O, never a’ my life again;
I’ll ne’er gae back to yon town
To seek anither wife again.’

The tune I’ll gae nae mair to your [yon] town is in Bremner’s Scots Reels, 1757, i. 6; in Campbell’s Reels, 1778, 17; and Aird’s Airs, 1782, i. No. 35; and in Bowie’s Reels, 1789, to which Burns referred the printer of the Museum.

No. 100. Behold, my love, how green the groves. Currie, Works, 1800, iv. 188. Thomson’s Scottish Airs, 1818, 201. The MS. is in the Thomson collection. The original version began ‘My Chloris, mark how green the groves,’ but was altered to that in our text. The first copy was transmitted to Thomson in November, 1794, in a letter stating that Chloris suggested the verses. Burns had previously disapproved of a song chosen by Thomson for the tune My lodging is on the cold ground, and Behold my love was written for it. The popular melody of the name—of either English or Irish origin—was first printed in Vocal Music, London, 1773, 18, and very soon afterwards became popular in Scotland. It ejected an earlier tune which had held its ground for more than a century. The original (that copied in our text) composed by Matthew Lock, is the finer melody of the two. Nell Gwyn, in the play of All Mistaken, 1672, sang it to a parody satirizing Moll Davis her rival, who was short and fat, thus:—

‘My lodging is on the cold boards
And wonderful hard is my fare;
But that which troubles me most is
The fatness of my dear,’ &c.

The tune known by the titles On the cold ground, or I prithee love, turn to me, is in the Dancing Master, 1665; Musick’s Delight, 1666; and Apollo’s Banquet, 1669.

No. 101. ‘Twas na her bonie blue e’e was my ruin. Currie, Works, 1800, iv. 229. ‘Tune, Laddie lie near me.’ The MS. is in the Thomson collection. In a letter to Thomson, dated September, 1793, Burns explains his manner of writing songs and choice of melodies. ‘Laddie lie near me, must lie by me for some time. I do not know the air; and until I am complete master of a tune, in my own singing (such as it is), I never can compose for it. My way is: I consider the poetic sentiment correspondent to my idea of the musical expression; then choose my theme; begin one stanza; when that is composed, which is generally the most difficult part of the business, I walk out, sit down now and then, look out for subjects in nature around me that are in unison and harmony with the cogitations of my fancy, and workings of my bosom, humming every now and then the air with the verses I have framed. When I feel my muse beginning to jade, I retire to the solitary fireside of my study, and then commit my effusion to paper; swinging at intervals on the hindlegs of my elbow-chair, by way of calling forth my own critical strictures as my pen goes on. Seriously, this at home is almost invariably my way.’ In April, 1795, ‘Twas na her bonie blue e’e was’ was completed, but in the following May he suppressed it as unworthy of his pen. A black-letter English ballad of the seventeenth century to a ‘northern tune’ is entitled The longing shepherdess, or Lady lie near me. Ritson discovered a Northumberland ballad which begins:—

‘Down in yon valley, soft shaded by mountains
Heard I a lad an’ lass making acquaintance;
Making acquaintance and singing so clearly,
Lang hae I lain my lane, laddie lie near me.’

The English melody in Playford's Dancing Master, 1650, copied into Chappell's Popular Music, 185, is not the same as that in the Scots Musical Museum, 1790, No. 218. The Scottish tune is also in MacGibbon's Scots Tunes, 1768, iv. 116; and Caledonian Pocket Companion, c. 1760, xii. 5. See Tune and Notes, No. 142.

No. 102. O, poortith cauld and restless love. Thomson's Scottish Airs, 1798, 49. 'Written for this work by Robert Burns,' and in honour of Jean Lorimer, who eloped with a young Cumberland farmer, named Whelpdale, and made a hasty marriage, which she had leisure to repent. After an experience of three weeks, she returned to her father's house. Her husband retired before his creditors, and left the country. The song was sent to Thomson in January, 1793, with a request to set it to the tune Cauld kail, but the editor neglected the instruction. In April, Burns revised the song as in the text, and agreed to change the tune, but he had a very poor opinion of the verses, and told Thomson that 'The stuff won't bear mending, yet for private reasons I should like to see them in print.' Cauld kail had always been associated with rollicking humorous songs, but Burns treated the air as a slow measure.

Among the Cauld kail songs, that not the best perhaps, but the most respectable, written by the Duke of Gordon, the friend of Burns, is on dancing—the engrossing recreation of the Scots. A stanza may be quoted:—

'In cotillions the French excel;
John Bull, in contra-dances,
The Spaniards dance fandangoes well,
Mynheer in All'mande prances;
In foursome reels the Scots delight,
The threesome maist dance wondrous light;
But twasome ding a' out o' sight
Danc'd to the reel o' Bogie.'

Gie the lass her fairin, lad, is a song for the tune in the Merry Muses. One of the earliest of the kind is that in Herd's Scots Songs, 1769, 314, written on the first Earl of Aberdeen, an octogenarian widower, who died in 1720. It begins:—

'Cauld kail in Aberdeen,
And castocks in Strathbogie;
But yet I fear they'll cook o'er soon,
And never warm the cogie.
The lassies about Bogie gicht,
Their limbs they are sae clean and tight,
That if they were but guided right
They'll dance the reel o' Bogie.'

I do not know where an earlier copy of the tune is to be seen than in the Scots Musical Museum, 1788, No. 162. It is in Dale's Scotch Songs, 1794, ii. 61. A song is in a collection of fugitive poetry in the Advocate's Library, which belonged to James Anderson, the eminent antiquary, who died in 1728. It begins:—

'The cald kail of Aberdeen,
Is warming at Strathbogie;
I fear 'twill tine the heat o'er sune,
And ne'er fill up the cogie.'

(Maidment, Songs, 1859, 20.)

This is precisely the rhythm of the tune, for which see No. 225, incorrectly marked 228 in text.

No. 103. Now Nature cleeds the flowery lea. Currie, Works, 1800, iv. 192. Tune, Rothemurche's rant. Scottish Airs, 1801, 121. A MS. is in the Thomson collection. One of the pastoral lyrics which has helped to make Burns famous. It was written for an instrumental air of much beauty, although in this, as in many other cases, Burns failed to win for it the approval of his dilettante editor. A fragment was sent to Thomson in a letter about September, 1794. The poet had gauged Thomson's taste in verses and airs, and it was necessary to anticipate an unfavourable reception for Lassie wi' the lint-white locks, so he says: 'I am sensible that my taste in music must be inelegant and vulgar, because people of undisputed and cultivated taste can find no merit in many of my favourite tunes. Still, because I am cheaply pleased, is that any reason why I should deny myself that pleasure? Many of our strathspeys, ancient and modern, give me exquisite enjoyment, where you and other judges would probably be showing signs of disgust. For instance, I am just now making verses to Rothiemurche's Rant, an air which puts me into raptures; and in fact, unless I be pleased with the tune, I never can make verses to it. . . . Rothiemurche, Clarke says, is an air both original and beautiful; and on his recommendation, I have taken the first part of the tune for a chorus, and the fourth or last part for the song.' In November he completed the song, and describes it to Thomson: 'This piece has at least the merit of being a regular pastoral; the vernal morn, the summer noon, the autumnal evening, and the winter night, are regularly rounded. If you like it, well; if not, I will insert it in the Museum.' He returns to the subject of the tune before closing the letter, as he would not trust the editor to arrange it, and says: 'On second thoughts, I send you Clarke's singing set of Rothemurche, which please return me in your first letter: I know it will not suit you.' Thomson did print it, but copied the tune badly. The tune in the text comprises the first and fourth sections of Rothiemurche's Rant from Bremner's Scots Reels, 1759, 42, according to the direction of Burns. It is all that Burns describes it. The music is also in M^cGlashan's Strathspey Reels, 1780, 17.

No. 104. Come, let me take thee to my breast. Thomson's Scottish Airs, 1799, 93. 'Written for this work by Robert Burns' Another song on 'Chloris,' sent in a letter to Thomson in August, 1793, with the following remark: 'That tune, Cauld Kail, is such a favourite of yours that I once more roved out yester evening for a gloaming shot at the muses; when the muse that presides o'er the shores of Nith, or rather my old inspiring dearest nymph, Coila, whispered me the following,' &c. The last stanza is modelled on his early song Peggy Alison. (See No. 54.) Burns said he would have a song to celebrate the lady of the rejected Poortith cauld and restless love. This second attempt to fit Cauld Kail did not satisfy Thomson any more than the first, and he printed it to the Irish air Ally Croker, much run on at public concerts about the end of the eighteenth century. The song is here for the first time directed to its proper tune, for which see Nos. 102 and 225.

No. 105. Forlorn my love, no comfort near. Currie, Works, 1800, iv. 246, entitled English Song. Tune, Let me in this ae night. The MS. is in the Thomson collection, and was introduced to Thomson as follows: 'I have written it within this hour; so much for the speed of my Pegasus; but what say you to his bottom?' The third stanza was unfavourably criticized; Burns admitted the objection, and rewrote it as in the text. For the tune, see No. 159, under the title Will ye lend me your loom, lass?

No. 106. Now haply down yon gay green shaw. Scots Musical Museum, 1796, No. 458 (second song) signed 'B,' for the tune, I'll gae nae mair to you town. Thomson's Scottish Airs, 1799, 53. MS. in the Thomson collection. A specimen verse of this song, which the poet styled 'doggrell' and suppressed later on, was sent to Thomson in order to try the tune. The following is an extract from a letter dated Ecclefechan, February 7, 1795: 'I came yesternight to this unfortunate, wicked little village. I have gone forward, but snows of ten feet deep have impeded my progress; I have tried to "gae back the gate I cam again," but the same obstacle has shut me up within insuperable bars. To add to my misfortune, since dinner, a scraper has been torturing cat-gut . . . and thinks himself, on that very account, exceeding good company. In fact, I have been in a dilemma, either to get drunk, to forget these miseries, or to hang myself, to get rid of them; like a prudent man (a character congenial to my every thought, word, and deed), I, of two evils, have chosen the least, and am very drunk at your service! . . . Do you know an air We'll gang nae mair to yon town? I think, in slowish time, it would make an excellent song. I am highly delighted with it; and if you should think it worthy of your attention, I have a fair Dame in my eye to whom I would consecrate it.' After writing the stanza of 'doggrell' he went to bed, and Thomson affirms that the handwriting of the poet shows that he had chosen the lesser of the two evils. In April the song was finished, and a month afterwards a copy was sent to Syme, with 'Jeanie' changed to 'Lucy' to fit Mrs. Oswald, of Auchencruive, whom he wished to conciliate for a stinging epigram he had previously written on her.

For the tune, see Song No. 99, entitled in Bremner's Reels, I'll gae nae mair to your town.

No. 107. It was the charming month of May. Scottish Airs, 1799, 69. Written as an English song for Thomson. Burns writes, November, 1794: 'Despairing of my own powers to give you variety enough in English songs, I have been turning over old collections, to pick out songs of which the measure is somewhat similar to what I want; and with a little alteration, so as to suit the rhythm of the air exactly, to give them for your work. Where the songs have hitherto been but little noticed, nor have ever been set to music, I think the shift a fair one. A song which, under the same first verse of the first stanza, you will find in Ramsay's Tea-Table Miscellany and elsewhere, I have cut down for an English dress to your Dainty Davie. You may think meanly of this, but take a look at the bombast original, and you will be surprised that I have made so much of it.' Burns does not underrate the quality of the original song of six stanzas in the Tea-Table Miscellany, 1725, marked to be sung to The happy clown, but he has not improved it much.

For the tune Dainty Davie, see Song No. 308.

No. 108. Let not woman e'er complain. Scottish Airs, 1798, 48. Written for this work by Robert Burns. Air, Duncan Gray. The MS. is in Brechin Castle. Written to meet Thomson's demand for English verses. It is one of the number which Thomson approved—he inserted it in his next volume—but it is devoid of the warm colour of the poet's Scottish songs. Burns pathetically wrote: 'These English songs gravel me to death. I have not that command of the language that I have of my native tongue. In fact, I think my ideas are more barren in English than in Scottish. I have been at Duncan Gray to dress it in English, but all I can do is deplorably stupid.'—Letter, October, 1794. The opinion of Burns on this song need not be disturbed.

For Duncan Gray, see Nos. 173 and 179.

No. 109. Where are the joys I hae met in the morning. Currie, Works, 1800, iv. 121. Tune, Saw ye my father? Thomson's Scottish Airs, 1801, 102. MS. in the Brechin collection. Sent to Thomson in September, 1793, with this note: 'Saw ye my father? is one of my greatest favourites. The evening before last I wandered out, and began a tender song in what I think is its native style. I must premise, that the old way, and the way to give most effect, is to have no starting note, as the fiddlers call it, but to burst at once into the pathos. Every country girl sings Saw ye my father?' Thomson disputed Burns's reading of the air, and thought it should open on an unaccented note. The poet deferred to the editor's opinion, but he was right.

The early song which Burns said delighted him with its descriptive simple pathos is four stanzas in Herd's Scots Songs, 1769, 324, as follows:—

- ‘O saw ye my father, or saw ye my mother,
Or saw ye my true love, John?
I saw not your father, I saw not your mother,
But I saw your true love, John.
- ‘Up Johnnie rose, and to the door he goes,
And gently tirl’d the pin ;
The lassie taking tent, unto the door she went,
And she open’d and let him in.
- ‘Flee, flee up, my bonny grey cock,
And craw whan it is day ;
Your neck shall be like the bonny beaten gold,
And your wings of the silver grey.
- ‘The cock prov’d false, and untrue he was,
For he crew an hour o’er soon ;
The lassie thought it day when she sent her love away,
And it was but a blink of the moon.’

The origin of this beautiful song has been disputed by Chappell (Popular Music, p. 731), who claimed that the original publication of five stanzas is in Vocal Music, or the Songster's Companion, London, 1772, ii. 36. He stated that a Scottified version was reprinted by Herd in 1776, but I have shown that the song was printed in Herd's first edition of 1769. The third stanza in Vocal Music, as follows, can be compared with the above second stanza :—

- ‘Then John he up arose, and to the door he goes,
And he twirl’d, he twirl’d at the pin ;
The lassie took the hint, and to the door she went,
And she let her true love in.’

The English copyist discloses his ignorance of the Scots language in the second line, where the lover tirls the wooden latch or pin of the door to arrest his sweetheart's attention. Twirling is not tirling at all, which in this case is a tremulous vibration of sound like the clicks of an electric instrument transmitting a message. The song in Herd's Scottish Songs, 1776, ii. 203, is extended to seven stanzas and not improved. Pinkerton printed this version in Select Ballads, 1783, 154. Lastly a spurious, so-called traditional, version in Cromek's Nithsdale Song, 1810, 74, is probably the work of Allan Cunningham.

The music of the song as in our text is in Stewart's Scots Songs, 1772, 14, with the original verses of 1769. In the Scots Musical Museum, 1787, No. 76, with the seven stanzas of 1776; and in the Perth Musical Miscellany, 1786, 25.

II. LOVE : GENERAL.

No. 110. My Sandy gied to me a ring. Scots Musical Museum, 1790, No. 204, entitled I love my love in secret. This song is a near copy with alterations of one in Herd's MS. In Law's MS. List for the Museum, Burns wrote : ‘Mr. Burns's old words.’ In Scotland it was customary for lovers who were to be temporarily separated, to break a silver coin at time of parting, each keeping a piece as a pledge to be faithful during absence. The custom is described in Logie o' Buchan :—

- ‘He had but a saxpence, he brak it in twa
And gied me the hauf o't when he gaed awa.’

The oldest form of the well-known tune Logie o' Buchan is derived from I love my love in secret, which is in Guthrie's MS., according to Dauney; in Playford's Original Scotch Tunes, 1700; in Sinkler's MS., Glasgow, 1710; in M^cGibbon's Scots Tunes, 1742, 4; in Caledonian Pocket Companion, c. 1745, ii. 26; and other collections.

No. 111. There's nought but care on ev'ry han'. Of this song all but the last stanza is in the Commonplace Book, under the date Aug., 1784. In its complete form it was published in the Edinburgh edition, 1787, 325, and with the tune in the Scots Musical Museum, 1787, No. 77, as the earliest song of Burns printed with music. In a passage in the Commonplace Book, p. 20, Burns divides young men into two classes—the grave and the merry; and in a later reference to the subject, instead of stating to which class he himself belongs, he quotes the fragment of Green grow the rashes, so that the reader may determine the matter himself. The song is so free and spontaneous in its rhythm and cadence, as to require no music to interpret it. It is as popular now as when first given to the public; not even a century has diminished its lustre. The earlier rustic song which Burns knew, and had in his mind when he wrote his own poem, cannot be printed entire. It is a humorous satire on manners, one stanza running thus:—

‘We’re a’ dry wi’ drinkin’ o’t,
We’re a’ dry wi’ drinkin’ o’t,
The minister kissed the fiddler’s wife,
And could na preach for thinkin’ o’t.’

Two highly-flavoured songs for the tune are in the Merry Muses. In 1794 Thomson proposed to set the verses to the tune Cauld Kail, but Burns objected, saying that as the old song was current in Scotland under the old title, and to the merry old tune of that name, the introduction of his verses with a new tune would mar its celebrity. Cou thou me the raschyes green is named in the Complaynt of Scotland, c. 1549. A tune with this title, which is in a MS. in the British Museum, is quite a different melody from that in the text; but the germ of the present air is in Straloch's MS., 1627, entitled A dance: Green grow the rashes. It was known later as I kist her while she blusht, evidently from the first line or refrain of forgotten verses. In Bremner's Reels, 1759, 64, it is named The Grant's Rant. Its earliest appearance in print is in Oswald's Curious Collection Scots Tunes, 1740, p. 42. It is in Oswald's Companion, 1743, i. 18; Stewart's Reels, 1761, 13, and many other tune-books of the end of the eighteenth century.

No. 112. O, whar gat ye that hauer-meal bannock? Scots Musical Museum, 1787, No. 99, entitled Bonie Dundee, with the tune of the same name. Cromek's Scottish Songs, 1810, ii. 202; Lawrie's Scottish Songs, 1791, ii. 91. Early in 1787, the Earl of Buchan sent a complimentary letter to Burns, who carried it in his pocket for some time, and ultimately used the dingy blank leaf at one of the meetings of the Crochallan Club to pencil the opening lines of Bonie Dundee, which his friend Robert Cleghorn had just sung. A short time afterwards he sent to the latter the verses in the text. Stenhouse says that the first four lines are old; while, according to Scott-Douglas, the first eight lines are in the original song. Neither statement is correct; for only the first two lines of the song are in the original broadside (in the Pepys and other collections), reprinted in Wit and Mirth, London, 1703, as follows:—

‘Where gott'st thou the Haver-meal bonack?
Blind Booby, can'st thou not see;
I'se got it out of the Scotch-man's wallet,
As he lig lousing him under a tree.

'Come fill up my cup, come fill up my can,
Come saddle my horse, and call up my man;
Come open the gates, and let me go free,
And I'se gang no more to bonny Dundee.'

The title is Bonny Dundee; or, Jockey's Deliverance, &c., in Collection of Old Ballads, 1723, 275. It describes, in ten stanzas, the intrigue of a licentious trooper with a parson's daughter. This song was very popular in England, and was often reprinted. It is named in A second tale of a tub, published in 1715, as one which the Blue bonnets sang in London. A fragmentary stanza in Herd's Scotts Songs, 1769, 311, is evidently a purified remnant of the song. Sir Walter Scott adopted the chorus in Up wi' the bonnets o' bonnie Dundee.

The tune is in the Skene MS., c. 1630, entitled Adeu Dundee, here reprinted. It is in Playford's Dancing Master, published in 1688, and afterwards, with the words, in Durfey's Pills, 1719, v. 17. The music, as a dance tune, is in the Caledonian Pocket Companion, 1751, iii. 4, and in many other instrumental collections.

The simplicity of the melody is considerably obscured in all the printed copies. Durfey corrupted it with unmeaning flourishes; it was partly restored in the Caledonian Pocket Companion, but still a good deal removed from the plain smoothness of the original. Copies are also in Craig's Scotts Tunes, 1730, 22, and in McGibbon's Scotts Tunes, 1746, 36.

There are two songs in the Merry Muses for the tune; and Cromek, Scottish Songs 1810, ii. 207, gives the following as the stanza of an old song:—

'Ye're like to the timmer o' yon rotten wood,
Ye're like to the bark o' yon rotten tree,
Ye slip frae me like a knotless thread,
An' ye'll crack your credit wi' mae than me.'

No. 113. Now simmer blinks on flow'ry braes. Scotts Musical Museum, 1788, No. 113, signed 'B,' entitled Birks of Aberfeldy. This is the earliest of the series of songs due to the first tour in the Highlands in company with William Nicol, of the High School of Edinburgh. On August 30, 1787, Burns arrived at Aberfeldy, and wrote in his copy of the Museum, that this song was composed 'standing under the falls of Aberfeldy, at or near Moness.' It is justly esteemed one of the most popular songs in Scotland. The original was known as The Birks of Abergeldie, two stanzas of which are inserted in the Museum, immediately following Burns's verses. The old fragment was copied from Herd's Scottish Songs, 1776, ii. 221, and begins thus:—

'Bonny lassie, will ye go, will ye go, will ye go,
Bonny lassie, will ye go to the Birks o' Abergeldie?
Ye shall get a gown of silk, a gown of silk, a gown of silk,
Ye shall get a gown of silk, and coat of calimancoe.'

In his Scottish Ballads and Songs, 1859, 59, Maidment reprinted verses from an original broadside of the beginning of the eighteenth century, but he considered Herd's fragment older. The Maidment ballad is written throughout in English.

The sustained popularity of the song is due in a great measure to its melody. In the 1690 edition of Playford's Dancing Master the tune is entitled A Scotch Ayre; as Abergeldie it is in Atkinson's MS., 1694; in Sinkler's MS., 1710, as Birks of Ebergeldie. It is also in Original Scotch Tunes, 1700; in Bremner's Reels, 1758, 35; Stewart's Reels, 1761, 3; Caledonian Pocket Companion, c. 1756, viii. 16, and others. Abergeldy, near Balmoral, is now a royal demesne.

No. 114. As I gaed down the water-side. Scotts Musical Museum, 1790, No. 264. The MS. is in the British Museum, with the opening bars of the tune, and a note that Clarke has it (R. B.). 'This beautiful song is in the true old Scotch taste, yet I do not know that ever either air or words were in print before' (Interleaved Museum). 'Mr. Burns's old words' (Law's MS. List). Neither Cromek nor Scott-Douglas correctly stated how much of the song Burns wrote and amended. The last two stanzas are Burns's, and the first two are made out of the original first stanza. 'I am flattered at your adopting Ca' the yowes, as it was owing to me that ever it saw the light. About seven years ago, I was well acquainted with a worthy little fellow of a clergyman, a Mr. Clunye, who sang it charmingly; and, at my request, Mr. Clarke took it down from his singing. When I gave it to Johnson, I added some stanzas to the song, and mended others, but still it will not do for you' (Letter to Thomson, September, 1794). See Song No. 118. Tibby Pagan, an eccentric woman, who sold whisky without a licence, and dispensed a fund of bold humour to her customers, is said to have been the author, but there is no authority for the statement. A collection of her songs and poems was printed in Glasgow about 1805, but Ca' the yowes is not in the volume. Burns deserves to be remembered with gratitude, if for nothing else, as being the discoverer of the melodic gem of this pastoral. There is no second part, and the verse and chorus are sung to the same music.

No. 115. On a bank of flowers in a summer day. Scots Musical Museum, 1790, No. 223. 'Mr. Burns's words.' (Law's MS. List; Thomson's Scottish Airs, 1799, 88). The original verses are English, copied into the last volume of The Tea-Table Miscellany, c. 1740. The author, Mr. Theobald, was a large contributor to the song-books of his day. For the sake of the melody popular in Scotland, Burns recast the original licentious verses, making a new song of them.

The tune The bashful lover is English, the composition of John Galliard, by birth a German, who came to London in early life and remained there. He was the composer of numerous good airs. The music is in Playford's Dancing Master, 1728, entitled The bashful swain; with Theobald's verses in Watt's Musical Miscellany, 1729, i. 30; in the Perth Musical Miscellany, 1786, 83; and in Calliope, 1788, 254.

No. 116. When rosy May comes in wi' flowers. Scots Musical Museum, 1790, No. 220, signed 'Z,' entitled The Gardener wi' his paille; Law's MS. List: 'Mr. B.'s old words;' Thomson's Scottish Airs, 1799, 69. The MS. is in the British Museum. 'This air is the Gardener's March. The title of the song only is old; the rest is mine' (Interleaved Museum). The old song referred to is not known. To accommodate George Thomson, who wished a copy for his collection, Burns altered the fourth line in each stanza, and added a chorus to fit the verses for the tune Dainty Davie (see Song No. 135).

The tune The Gardener's March, appropriated by the guild of gardeners, is in Aird's Airs, 1782, i. No. 177, as stated by Burns on his MS. I doubt whether it is an authentic Scottish melody, and whether it is much older than its appearance in Aird's volume.

No. 117. If thou should ask my love. Scots Musical Museum, 1790, No. 229, entitled Famie, come try me. In Law's MS. List: 'Mr. Burns's old words.' Written from a single line or title of an old song to resuscitate James Oswald's melody, printed in Curious Scots Tunes, 1742, ii. 26; and the Caledonian Pocket Companion, c. 1745, ii. 34. The tune is interesting, but its compass is too great for ordinary voices.

No. 118. Hark the Mavis' e'ening sang. Currie, Works, 1800, iv. 160. Scottish Airs, 1805, 166. The MS. is at Brechin Castle. This second version of Ca' the ewes was sent to Thomson in September, 1794, with a note: 'In a solitary stroll which I took to-day, I tried my hand on a few pastoral lines, following up the idea of the chorus, which I would preserve.' Burns was aware of its inferiority to the original.

Thomson divorced it from its proper melody, and set it to The maid that tends the goats. For the tune, see No. 114. The Clouden is a small tributary of the Nith near Dumfries.

No. 119. When the drums do beat. Scots Musical Museum, 1790, No. 233, entitled The Captain's lady. I have definitely identified Burns with this song in the musical MS. made up for the engraver of the Museum. The poet entitled the tune Mount my baggage, then drew his pen through the words and wrote above them The Captain's lady, as printed in the Museum (Gray's Museum Lists). In Law's MS. List, Burns wrote: 'Mr. Burns's old words.' The following stanza is from an English song of the seventeenth century:—

'I will away, and I will not tarry,
I will away and be a Captain's lady.
A Captain's lady is a dame of honour—
She has her maid ay to wait upon her,
To wait upon her, and get all things ready,
I will away and be a Captain's lady.'

Burns's first title is that of a ballad in the Dalmeny Collection, quoted in the Centenary Burns as The Liggar lady, or the laddie's love to a soldier, to the tune of Mount the baggage. This most prosaic production is apparently the original of Burns's verses.

The tune with the title Mount my baggage is in Caledonian Pocket Companion, 1755, vii. 26, and in Bremner's Reels, 1768, 109; as the Cadie laddie, it is in Walsh's Caledonian Country Dances; and as Mount your baggage in Aird's Airs, 1782, ii. No. 74. A song Kamillies, attributed to one of the Sempills of Beltrees, does not fit the tune. The first stanza and chorus reads thus:—

'My daddie marrie't me too young
To an auld man baith deaf and dumb;
He laid beside me like a rung,
He wadna turn unto his lassie.
Och! laddie munt and go,
Dear sailor, hoise and go;
Och! laddie, munt and go,
Go, and I'se go with thee, laddie.'

(Sempill's Poems, 1849, xcvi.)

No. 120. Young Jockie was the blythest lad. Scots Musical Museum, 1790, No. 287, signed 'Z'; Cromek's Reliques, 1808, 438. Hitherto this song has been accepted on the sole authority of Stenhouse, who stated that the whole of it, with the exception of three or four lines, was written by Burns. I have before me now the MS. music of the tune, and the words which Johnson proposed to insert in the Museum, entitled The devoted maid, by Dr. Blacklock, beginning 'My virgin heart when Jockey woo'd.' Tune, Jockey was the blythest lad in a' our town. The MS. was sent to Burns for his approval. He returned it with a note in the margin, in his own handwriting, 'Take Mr. Burns's old words,' so accordingly the song was changed, and his verses with the title were printed. In Law's MS. List he wrote: 'Mr. Burns's old words.' The Jockies and Jennys of the English parodies of Scots Songs are as common as blackberries in autumn. In The Goldfinch, 1771, is a song beginning 'Young Jockey was the blithest lad,' but it has little resemblance to Burns's song.

The tune is entitled Jockie the blithest in M^cGibbon's Scots Tunes, 1746, 36. It has the gait of an English melody. A different tune with the title Jockey was the blithest lad is in Atkinson's MS., 1694. In the Caledonian Pocket Companion, 1755, vii. 8, there is a corrupted form of the melody.

No. 121. Sweet are the banks—the banks o' Doon. This is the first of three versions of the Banks o' Doon. Originally published in the Edinburgh edition, 1877, ii. 331. There is not much verbal difference between this and the next version sent to John Ballantine. The following is an extract from a letter, dated March 11, 1791, to Alexander Cunningham, enclosing a copy of the song: 'I have this evening sketched out a song which I had a great mind to send you, though I foresee that it will cost you another groat of postage. . . . My song is intended to sing to a strathspey, or reel, of which I am very fond, called in Cumming's Collection of Strathspeys Ballendalloch's Reel, and in other collections that I have met with, it is known by the name of Cambdelmore. It takes three stanzas of four lines each to go through the whole tune. I shall give the song to Johnson for the fourth volume of his publication of Scots Songs which he has just now in hand.' This quotation disposes of the theory of Robert Chambers that The banks o' Doon was written in 1787 for Peggy Kennedy, the unfortunate lady referred to in the note on Song No. 15.

The recovery of the letter to Cunningham reveals the fact that the song was written for a particular tune practically unknown. Neither the words nor the music is in Johnson's Museum, and both are here printed together for the first time. It is entitled Cambdelmore in Bremner's Reels, 1761, 92; and in Stewart's Reels, 1763, 55, as Ballendalloch; as Ballendalloch's Reel in Cumming's Strathspeys, 1780, 7; and Gordon Castle in M^cGlashan's Strathspey Reels, 1780, 26.

No. 122. Ye flowery banks o' bonie Doon. Cromek's Reliques, 1808, 17. The second version of the song, which was enclosed in an undated letter addressed to John Ballantine, Ayr. The following is an extract: 'While here I sit, sad and solitary, by the side of a fire in a little country inn, and drying my wet clothes, in pops a poor fellow of a sodger, and tells me he is going to Ayr. By Heavens! say I to myself, with a tide of good spirits which the magic of that sound, Auld toon o' Ayr, conjured up, I will send my last song to Mr. Ballantine.' The poet at this time was most likely on one of his excise expeditions. Ye flowery banks o' bonie Doon is a distinct improvement on the first version, and Cromek's opinion of it in comparison with the third or popular set has been endorsed by all subsequent commentators. The redundant feet in the second and fourth lines of the popular stanza can easily be spared, and as a poem this short metre version is superb compared with it, although it is now hopeless to expect that the popular version will be displaced.

No. 123. Ye banks and braes o' bonie Doon. In Scots Musical Museum, 1792, No. 374, signed 'B,' entitled The banks o' Doon. Thomson's Scottish Airs, 1798, 43. The MS. is in the British Museum. 'Mr. B.'s old words' (Law's MS. List). Two bathetic stanzas, written by a music publisher, were added to the song, and printed in the Pocket Encyclopædia, Glasgow, 1816, i. 29. Why this, the popular version, was written in a different measure from the other two, has never been accurately ascertained. It is probably true that Burns altered the song against his will, but nowhere does he say so. It is quite certain that he approved the air now so popular (although it may be remarked in passing that the pen is drawn through the title Caledonian Hunt's Delight in the MS. in the British Museum), for in a letter to George Thomson in November, 1794, he recommended it for insertion in Scottish Airs at the cost of excluding another song to make room for it. He relates the story of the tune being composed 'a good many years ago' by an amateur playing on the black keys of the harpsichord. A copy was given to Gow, who entitled it The Caledonian Hunt's delight, and printed it for the first time in his second collection of Strathspey Reels, 1788, that is six years before Burns related its history to Thomson, and four years before it was printed with the verses in the Scots Musical Museum. In 1789, Burns wrote There was on a Time (Song No. 258) for the same tune.

The origin of the air has been called in question, and its nationality disputed. The late William Chappell asserted that the amateur effected nothing more than the alteration of a note here and there of a melody which previously existed. On the difficulty of ascertaining the birth of tunes, Burns has a note in the same letter to Thomson as previously quoted: 'Now to shew you how difficult it is to trace the origin of our airs, I have heard it repeatedly asserted that this was an Irish air; nay, I met with an Irish gentleman, who affirmed he had heard it in Ireland among the old women; while on the other hand, a lady of fashion, no less than a countess, informed me that the first person who introduced the air into this country was a baronet's lady of her acquaintance, who took down the notes from an itinerant piper in the Isle of Man. How difficult then to ascertain the truth, respecting our poesy and music! I myself have lately seen a couple of ballads sung through the streets of Dumfries, with my name at the head of them as the author, though it was the first time I had ever seen them.'

The editor of Graham's Songs of Scotland states that he saw a street song, entitled List, list, to my story, with the water-mark of the year 1801 on the paper, on which the tune, the same as The banks o' Doon, was stated to be an Irish air. The Popular Music of the Olden Time of William Chappell is a monument of industry and research. He had as keen an eye for a date, as a cross-examining barrister, and although he often complains about their absence on musical works, it is a curious fact, that his Popular Music bears no date of publication either on the title-page or elsewhere. He contested the Scottish origin of the Banks o' Doon, because it was in Dale's Collection of English Songs. In this case his claim breaks down, because this collection was issued in 1794, and subsequent to the same publisher's Scotch Songs of that year. Without any evidence he accuses Stephen Clarke of inventing the story related by Burns, and of making the tune himself from Dale's English tune, Lost, lost is my quiet, without the intervention of any amateur to fit it for the Scots Musical Museum. As previously stated, the air was first printed in 1788, six years before it was copied into the Museum, and this date fits the story Burns related to Thomson, in 1794, of the air having been made 'a good many years ago.' Whether it be a Scots, an English, or an Irish air need not be further discussed; it has been preserved for more than a century entirely through Burns's song, first printed with the music in Museum, 1792. In Aird's Airs, 1794, iv. No. 132, Irish is affixed to the tune, entitled Caledonian Hunt's Delight, so that it appears there was a popular belief that the melody was Irish.

No. 124. O stay, sweet warbling woodlark, stay. This, known as Address to the woodlark, is in Thomson's Scotch Airs, 1798, 26. 'Written for this work by Robert Burns.' The MS. is in the Thomson collection. This and twelve other songs were sent to Thomson between April and August, 1795. They are evidence of the poet's remarkable mental activity although in bad health, and engaged in daily hard physical work. The first sketch of the song was copied by Scott-Douglas from a pencil MS. in the poet's handwriting. It is entitled Song.—Composed on hearing a bird sing while musing on Chloris:—

'Sing on, sweet songster o' the brier,
Nae stealthy traitor-foot is near,
O sooth a hapless lover's ear,
And dear as life I'll prize thee.

'Again, again that tender part,
That I may learn thy melting art,
For surely that would touch the heart,
O' her that still denies me.

'O, was thy mistress, too, unkind,
And heard thee as the careless join?
For nocht but Love and Sorrow join'd
Sic notes of woe could wauken.'

Burns agreed with Thomson that the rhythm of Loch Eroch side suited the song, and on this general agreement it was printed with that tune in Scottish Airs. But the proper melody is Whare shall our gudeman lie? or Where'll bonie Annie lie? as marked on the copy of the verses sent to Thomson. For tune, see No. 10.

No. 125. O, saw ye my dearie, my Eppie M^cNab? Scots Musical Museum, 1792, No. 336, signed 'X,' entitled Eppie M^cNab. The MS. is in the British Museum. An old song rewritten and purified for insertion in the Museum. 'The old song with this title has more wit than decency' (Interleaved Museum). The fragment in the Herd MS. is as follows:—

'O, saw ye Eppie M^cNab the day?
O, saw ye Eppie M^cNab the day?
She's down in the yaird
She's kissing the laird
She winna cum hame the day, the day.
'O, see to Eppie M^cNab as she goes,
See to Eppie M^cNab as she goes,
With her corked heel shoon
And her cockets aboon;
O, see to Eppie M^cNab as she goes.'

In the Merry Muses is a 'revised' song for the tune, in which occurs:—

'Her kittle black een they wad thirl ye thro';
Her rosebud lips cry, Kiss me just now,' &c.

The tune is in Curious Scots Tunes, 1742, 46; the Caledonian Pocket Companion, 1754, vi. 18; Bremner's Reels, 1768, 111; and a bad copy in Aird's Airs, 1782, ii. No. 163. From its construction it is much older than the earliest date named.

No. 126. By love and by beauty. Scots Musical Museum, 1790, No. 281, entitled Eppie Adair. The MS. is in the British Museum among the Burns papers, and he there directs that the chorus should be sung to the first part of the tune, and the verse must be repeated to take up the second part.

The air is a very fine specimen of Scottish music in the minor mode; but has probably been evolved into a double tune. The music in the Caledonian Pocket Companion, xi. 19, is entitled My Appie.

No. 127. O, love will venture in. Scots Musical Museum, 1792, No. 373, signed 'B,' entitled The posie. Thomson's Scottish Airs, 1798, 36, 'By Robert Burns.' MS. is in the British Museum. This song is not only chaste and beautiful, but is set to one of the best-constructed and most artistic melodies in the Scottish collections of the eighteenth century, yet it is entirely neglected, and is scarcely known. The lines were suggested to Burns on hearing his wife sing a street ballad There was a pretty May, which Cromek has printed in Reliques, 1808, 215, but neither the Note nor the verses are in the Interleaved Museum. The substance of the Note is in an undated letter to Thomson about October, 1794. From this commonplace thing Burns wrote The posie, which mechanical critics say offends the unity of time, because the flowers named in the song do not bloom in the same season. The subject is a very old one in English poesy. Burns's song may be compared with A nosegaie alwaies sweet, of fifteen stanzas, in the unique volume, A Handfull of pleasant Delites. At London, 1584.' The last two stanzas are:—

'Cowsloppes is for Connell, for secrets vs between,
That none but you and I alone should know the thing we meane;
And if you wil thus wisely do as I think to be best,
Then have you surely won the field, and set my heart at rest.

'I pray you keep this Nosegay wel, and set by it some store :
 And thus farewell, the Gods thee guide, both now and evermore.
 Not as the common sort do vse, to set it in your brest :
 That when the smel is gone away, on ground he takes his rest.'

The tune is an adaptation of Roslin Castle (see Song No. 313). Whether The Posie or Roslin Castle be the original cannot now be ascertained: the former is the simpler of the two.

No. 128. Let loove sparkle in her e'e. Scots Musical Museum, 1792, No. 381, entitled Jocky fou and Jenny fain. The MS. is in the British Museum. Burns added four lines to complete a stanza to Jocky fou and Jenny fain, taken from Ramsay's Tea-Table Miscellany, 1725, and also made verbal alterations in the rest. He wrote on the MS. for the Museum: 'These are the old words, and most excellent words they are. Set the music to them' (R. B.). The first four lines, not written by Burns, are within brackets. The tune is in Craig's Scots Tunes, 1730, 25.

No. 129. How cruel are the parents. Thomson's Scotish Airs, 1799, 51. 'Written for this work by Robert Burns.' Thomson wanted English verses for John Anderson my jo, and he got them on May 9, 1795, such as they are. At the head of the MS. is written, 'Song altered from an old English one,' which is said to be in The Hive, 1733, but it is not in the earlier edition, 1725-7. The verses are in Muse's Delight, 1754, 293, and Burns has adhered to the sentiment of them. In Bickham's Musical Entertainer, 1737, ii. 68, the daughters take the business into their own hands, as follows:—

'When parents obstinate and cruel prove,
 And force us to a man we cannot love;
 'Tis fit we disappoint the sordid elves
 And wisely get us husbands for ourselves.'

This they sing to the music of Henry Carey. For the air of Burns's verses, see No. 212.

No. 130. The smiling Spring comes in rejoicing. Scots Musical Museum, 1792, No. 387, signed 'B,' entitled Bonnie Bell. A MS. of this joyous song, by an amanuensis, is in the British Museum among the Burns papers. Burns does not refer to it in any way, and the only confirmatory evidence, which is quite good, is the initial at the end of the song in Johnson's Museum. Stenhouse says: 'This is another production of Burns, who also communicated the tune to which the words are set in the Museum.' (Illustrations, p. 355.) I have not found any earlier copy of the tune.

No. 131. Where Cart rins rowin to the sea. Scots Musical Museum, 1792, No. 389, signed 'R,' entitled The gallant weaver. 'Mr. B.'s old words' (Law's MS. List). Thomson's Scotish Airs, 1798, 39. The MS. is in the British Museum. The Cart, a stream of moderate pretensions, is known chiefly as furnishing a river to the ancient burgh of Paisley in Renfrewshire. The city of weavers is reported to have given birth to more poets than any town in Scotland. 'The chorus of this song is old, the rest of it is mine. Here, once for all, let me apologize for many silly compositions of mine in this work [Scots Musical Museum]. Many beautiful airs wanted words; in the hurry of other avocations, if I could string a parcel of rhymes together anything near tolerable, I was fain to let them pass. He must be an excellent poet indeed, whose every performance is excellent' (Interleaved Museum).

The tune is in Aird's Airs, 1782, i. No. 174, entitled Weaver's March, or Twenty-first of August. It has not the character of a Scottish melody. The New Swedish Dance, in the Musical Pocket-Book, c. 1715, resembles the tune. Thomson printed Burns's song in his musical collection, and without authority changed the 'weaver' into a 'sailor,' and set it to The auld wife ayont the fire. Mr. John Glen has found the tune in the Dancing Master, 1728, entitled Frisky Jenny, or the Tenth of June.

No. 132. I do confess thòu art sae fair. Scots Musical Museum, 1792, No. 321, signed 'Z.' 'This song is altered from a poem by Sir Robert Ayton, private secretary to Mary and Anne, Queens of Scotland. I think that I have improved the simplicity of the sentiments, by giving them a Scots dress' (Interleaved Museum). The MS. is in the British Museum. Burns's opinion is not shared by posterity, which thinks that the original verses have not been improved. The original in four stanzas of six lines, with music by Henry Lawes, is in Playford's Select Ayres, 1659. The words alone are in Watson's Scots Poems, 1711, 91.

The tune with the title Come ashore, jolly tar is in Aird's Airs, 1782, i. No. 190, and I conjecture that the music in the Museum was copied from that work. In Hogg's Jacobite Relics, 1819, i. 111 is a song The Cuckoo, applied to the Old Pretender. The last stanza is as follows:—

'The Cuckoo's a bonny bird, but far frae his hame;
I ken him by the feathers that grow upon his kame;
And round that double kame yet a crown I hope to see,
For my bonny cuckoo, he is dear to me.'

The tune in Rutherford's Dances, c. 1770, is entitled The Cuckoo's Nest. No one has yet given a rational or satisfactory reason why James VIII was called the Cuckoo. Charles Mackay supposed that the Pretender was expected in spring to chase away the winter of the discontent of his followers. To which I may be permitted to add that when he did come he was not much appreciated, and, like the cuckoo, made a very short stay.

Bunting has claimed the music for Ireland, and states it is in a music-book of the early eighteenth century. The tune is not in the Scottish style.

No. 133. Whare live ye, my bonie lass? Scots Musical Museum, 1792, No. 361, entitled My collier laddie. The MS. is in the British Museum, but the song is not otherwise referred to by Burns in his works. According to Stenhouse, the words and the tune were transmitted by Burns to the editor of the Museum, where both were printed for the first time. There is no earlier record of the music. A song in the Merry Muses is marked for the tune of The collier laddie.

No. 134. In simmer, when the hay was mawn. Scots Musical Museum, 1792, No. 366, signed 'B,' entitled Country Lassie. The MS. is in the British Museum. In a letter to George Thomson, October 19, 1794, Burns admits having written the song. Thomson printed it without authority in Select Melodies, 1822, ii. 24, to the tune of John, come kiss me now.

The Scottish tune, The country lass of the text, is in the Orpheus Caledonius, 1733, No. 38, with English verses written by Martin Parker, which Allan Ramsay copied, with variations, into the Tea-Table Miscellany. The English tune of the same title is that to which Sally in our Alley is now sung, entitled Cold and raw in Dufrey's Pills, 1719, iv. 152. A third tune for the verses was The mother beguiled the daughter. Burns's song does not in the least resemble the English version, nor does the tune in the Orpheus, or in McGibbon's Scots Tunes, 1768, iv. 96, resemble any of the three English tunes named, except in the closing bars of Sally in our Alley.

No. 135. Now rosy May comes in wi' flowers. Scottish Airs, 1799, 69. 'Written for this work by Robert Burns. Air, Dainty Davie.' Sent to Thomson in August, 1793, with this note: 'I have been looking over another and a better song of mine in the Museum (see Song No 116), which I have altered as follows, and which I am persuaded will please you. The words Dainty Davie glide so sweetly in the air that, to a Scots ear, any song to it, without Davie being the hero, would have a lame effect. So much for Davie. The chorus you know is to the low part of the tune.' Thomson objected to the arrangement of the tune, but Burns adhered to his opinion. For tune see No. 308.

No. 136. When o'er the hill the e'ening star. Currie, Works, 1800, iv. 8. Thomson's Scotish Airs, 1805, 295. The MS. is in the Thomson collection at Brechin Castle. This is the first song Burns sent to George Thomson; with 'eastern star' in the first line. In reply, Burns wrote to Thomson: 'Let me tell you that you are too fastidious in your ideas of songs and ballads. I own that your criticisms are just; the songs you specify in your list have, all but one, the faults you remark in them—but who shall mend the matter?—who shall rise up and say, "Go to, I will make a better?"' For instance, on reading over The lea-rig, I immediately set about trying my hand on it, and after all, I could make nothing more of it than the following, which Heaven knows is poor enough' (Letter, October 26, 1792). At Thomson's request Burns rewrote the third stanza and made some verbal changes in the rest. An earlier song, My ain kind dearie, O, in the Museum suggested the verses. In the Interleaved Museum Burns quotes a still older version:—

'I'll rowe thee o'er the lea-rig,
My ain kind dearie, O;
I'll rowe thee o'er the lea-rig,
My ain kind dearie, O.
Altho' the night were ne'er sae wat,
And I were ne'er sae weary, O;
I'll rowe thee o'er the lea-rig,
My ain kind dearie, O.'

A song for the tune is in the Merry Muses, and two different fragments are in the Herd MS. The tune The lea-rig or My ain kind dearie, O, probably belongs to the seventeenth century. It is in the Caledonian Pocket Companion, c. 1756, viii. 20; in Bremner's Reels, 1760, 76; Campbell's Reels, 1778, 18; Aird's Airs, 1782, i. No. 44; and the Scots Musical Museum, 1787, No. 49. The original has neither a fourth nor a seventh of the scale. Burns remonstrated about corrupting the airs in a letter April, 1793, to Thomson, who often disregarded the injunction. The modern form of the melody is given in the text, and was discovered too late to make an alteration.

No. 137. Braw, braw lads on Yarrow braes. Thomson's Scotish Airs, 1793, i. 11. 'Written for this work by Robert Burns. Air, Galla Water.' Framed on an older pastoral song of the Borderland and the romantic country of Tweeddale. Burns wrote his Galla Water in January, 1793, and sent it in a letter to Thomson, with the following remarks illustrating his interest in music: 'I should also like to know what other songs you print to each tune besides the verses to which it is set. In short, I would wish to give you my opinion on all the poetry you publish.' A fragment of an earlier anonymous song is in Herd's Scots Songs, 1769, 312:—

'Braw, braw lads of Galla-water,
O braw lads of Galla-water,
I'll kilt my coats below my knee,
And follow my love thro' the water.
'Sae fair her hair, sae brent her brow,
Sae bonny blue her een, my dearie,
Sae white her teeth, sae sweet her mou',
I aften kiss her till I'm wearie.
'O'er yon bank, and o'er yon brae,
O'er yon moss among the hether,
I'll kilt my coats aboon my knee,
And follow my love thro' the water.'

The tune is in the Caledonian Pocket Companion, c. 1756, viii. 28; Stewart's Scots Songs, 1772, 1, adapted to a song of different metre; Scots Musical Museum, 1788, No. 125, with Herd's verses; in Ritson's Scottish Songs, 1794, i. 84; and Dale's Scotch Songs, iii. 163. It is a model of simplicity and dignity. In many modern copies it is corrupted by closing on the key-note, with the introduction of the leading note.

No. 138. O mirk, mirk is this midnight hour. Thomson's Scottish Airs, 1798, 38. 'Written for this work by Robert Burns. Air, Lord Gregory.' Among the Dalhousie MS. in Brechin Castle. The tragic ballad of Lord Gregory, containing about sixty stanzas, better known as Fair Annie of Lochryan, is the foundation of Burns's verses. The earliest printed fragment is in Herd's Scottish Songs, 1776, i. 149, entitled The bonny lass o' Lochryan. Two double stanzas, with the tune, were engraved in the Scots Musical Museum, 1787, No. 5. This was one of the few historical ballads which made an impression on Burns. Thomson had informed him that Dr. Wolcot had written a song on the subject, and he replied on January 26, 1793, by enclosing a copy of the verses in the text. A few weeks before his death, Burns touched up the song, and sent a copy to his friend Alex. Cunningham.

The tune is not in print before the Scots Musical Museum, 1787, No. 5. According to Stenhouse, it is an old Gallwegian melody. The music is also in Urbani's Scots Songs, 1792, 1; and Dale's Scotch Songs, 1794, iii. 119.

No. 139. There's auld Rob Morris that wons in yon glen. In Thomson's Scottish Airs, 1793, 17. 'Written for this work by Robert Burns.' The original vigorous song of the seventeenth century describes an old man in a dialogue between a girl and her mother, who recommends Rob as a husband. Two stanzas of the rough-cast ditty may be quoted:—

Daughter. 'Auld Rob Morris, I ken him fou weel,
His back sticks out like ony peet creel;
He's out-shin'd, in-knee'd, and ringle-ey'd, too;
Auld Rob Morris is the man I'll ne'er loo.

Mother. 'Tho' auld Rob Morris be an elderly man,
Yet his auld brass will buy a new pan;
Then, dochter, ye should na be sae ill to shoo,
For auld Rob Morris is the man ye maun loo.'

Burns's song is on the same subject, but treated differently. He informed Thomson, on November 14, 1792: 'I have partly taken your idea of Auld Rob Morris, and am going on with the song on a new plan, which promises pretty well.' On December 4 the song was completed. The old words are in the Tea-Table Miscellany, 1724, and Herd's Scots Songs, 1769, 10.

The tune is in Blackie's MS., 1692, under the title Jock the laird's brither. The old song and tune are in the Orpheus Caledonius, 1725, No. 30; in Watt's Musical Miscellany, 1730, iii. 174; Ritson's Scottish Songs, 1794, i. 176, and the Scots Musical Museum, 1788, No. 192. The music alone is in Craig's Scots Tunes, 1730, 45; the Caledonian Pocket Companion, 1754, vi. 9; M^cGibbon's Scots Tunes, 1755, 10, and elsewhere. The compass of the tune is rather extended for the present generation.

No. 140. Here awa, there awa, wandering Willie. Scottish Airs, 1793, 2. 'Written for this work by Robert Burns.' Among the Thomson MS. in Brechin Castle. The original song of the name was printed in Herd's Scots Songs, 1769, 291; and with the tune in the Scots Musical Museum, 1787, No. 57. The first stanza in Herd is:—

'Here awa, there awa, wandering Willie,
Here awa, there awa, here awa hame;
Lang have I sought thee, dear have I bought thee,
Now I have gotten my Willie again.'

In Gray's MS. Lists, Burns quotes the following stanza, which he states must be added, and says it is 'the best in the song.' The stanza has never been printed until now.

'Gin ye meet my love, kiss her and clap her,
And gin ye meet my love, dinna think shame;
Gin ye meet my love, kiss her and clap her,
And shew her the way to had awa hame.'

Burns's song, which he sent to Thomson in March, 1783, is entirely different, except the title. A committee of taste suggested some alterations, which Burns partly adopted. The verses in the text are the final result in April.

The tune in the Caledonian Pocket Companion, c. 1756, viii. 1, is entitled Here awa', Willie; and as Here awa, there awa in M^cGibbon's Scots Tunes, 1768, iv. 108; Bremner's Second Series Scots Songs, 1757, 11; Perth Musical Miscellany, 1786, 17; Calliope, 1788, 136; and Ritson's Scottish Songs, 1794, i. 86.

No. 141. O, open the door some pity to shew. Scottish Airs, 1793, i. 21. 'As altered by Robert Burns.' Sent to Thomson in March, 1793, with the remark, 'I do not know whether this song be really mended.' The original song has hitherto eluded research, and has given rise to some curiosity. The verses and air of the original are in Corri's Scots Songs, 1783, ii. 30; in the Perth Musical Miscellany, 1786, 101; and in Calliope, 1788, 23. The following are the pathetic verses from Corri, marked for an Irish Air :—

'It's open the door some pity to shew,
It's open the door to me, oh!
Tho' you have been false, I'll always prove true,
So open the door to me, oh!

'Cold is the blast upon my pale cheek,
But colder your love unto me, oh!
Tho' you have, &c.

'She's open'd the door, she's open'd it wide,
She sees his pale corpse on the ground, oh!
Tho' you have, &c.

'My true love, she cry'd, then fell down by his side,
Never, never to shut again, oh!
Tho' you have, &c.

It is reminiscent of the old ballad of Lord Gregory, only that it is he who dies claiming admission, and not she. Burns has compressed the last two stanzas into one, using the refrain only in his first stanza, and making verbal alterations, sometimes not for the better. His third stanza is original, and with unerring instinct Carlyle detected Burns's hand in :—

'The wan moon sets behind the white wave,
And time is setting with me, O,' &c.

Thomson made material alterations in the air. In Ireland it is known as Open the door softly. It is in Bunting's Irish Melodies, 1796; and Edward Nagle, who lived about 1760, wrote verses for it, beginning, 'As I wandered abroad in the purple of dawn.' Also, Tom Moore's fine song, 'She is far from the land where her young hero sleeps,' was written for Sarah Curran, the lover of Robert Emmet, the young Irish rebel who was executed. A corrupted setting of the air is No. 584 of the Scots Musical Museum, 1803.

No. 142. Lang hae we parted been. Scots Musical Museum, 1790, No. 218. 'Mr. Burns's old words' (Laird's MS. List). Doubtless there was an old song, but it is uncertain how much of the two stanzas were written by Burns. He stated to Thomson that he did not know the tune Laddie lie near me well enough to write for it. The note by Burns in the Interleaved

Museum, that Laddie lie near me is by Dr. Blacklock, refers to the first song for the tune in the Museum, beginning, 'Hark, the loud trumpet.' Lady lie near me, in Playford's Dancing Master, 1650, is in the same measure, but there is no resemblance to Oswald's tune except in the rhythm. This English tune served many songs, and was popular about the period of the Restoration. The original seems to be a black-letter ballad, entitled, 'The longing Shepherdess, or Lady lie near me, printed by W. Thackeray at the Angel in Duck Lane.' Still less resemblance is there to an English tune, Jenny, come tye my cravat, in Apollo's Banquet, 1687. Wherever the original verses are to be discovered, upon which Burns founded his song, they are not in either of the English songs. See No. 101.

No. 143. By Allan stream I chanc'd to rove. Scotch Airs, 1799, 79. 'Written for this work by Robert Burns. Air, Allan Water.' One of the Thomson MS. How this pastoral was written in (? August, 1793) is described as follows: 'I walked out yesterday evening with a volume of the Museum in my hand, when turning up Allan Water, "What numbers shall the muse repeat," it appeared to me rather unworthy of so fine an air, and recollecting that it is in your list, I sat and raved under the shade of an old thorn, till I wrote one to suit the measure. I may be wrong, but I think it is not in my worst style. You must know that in Ramsay's Tea-Table Miscellany, where the modern song first appeared, the ancient name of the tune, Allan says, is Allan Water, or, My love Annie's very bonie. This last has certainly been a line of the original song; so I took up the idea, and, as you see, have introduced the line in its place, which I presume it formerly occupied; though I give you a choosing line if it should not hit the cut of your fancy.'

The music of Allan Water is in Blaikie's MS., 1692; Atkinson's MS., 1694; Original Scotch Tunes, 1700; Sinkler's MS., 1710; Caledonian Pocket Companion, 1752, iv. 25; McGibbon's Scots Tunes, 1742, 34; and with verses in Orpheus Caledonius, 1733, No. 28; Scots Musical Museum, 1787, No. 43, and Dale's Scotch Songs, 1794, ii. 72. 'This Allan Water, which the composer of the music has honoured with the name of the air, I have been told, is Allan Water, in Strathallan' (Interleaved Museum).

No. 144. I fee'd a man at Martinmas. Scots Musical Museum, 1792, No. 394, entitled O can ye labour lea. The MS. is in the British Museum. An amended version of an equivocal rustic song in the Merry Muses, which differs slightly from that here printed. Cromek, in Select Scottish Songs, 1810, ii. 40, remarks: 'This song has long been known among the inhabitants of Nithsdale and Galloway, where it is a great favourite.'

This is the tune which George Thomson copied from the Scots Musical Museum, and printed for the first time in 1799 as the melody of Burns's Auld lang syne. See Song No. 234.

No. 145. As down the burn they took their way. Currie, Works, 1800, iv. 115. Written at the request of Thomson, to replace a stanza in a song by William Crawford, beginning, 'When trees did bud,' originally printed in the Tea-Table Miscellany, 1724. Burns at first declined to touch the song, but Thomson prevailed, with the unsuccessful result in the text. In Select Melodies, 1822, iii. 11, Thomson replaced Burns's stanza by some vapid lines of his own; as he said Burns 'did not bring the song to the desirable conclusion.'

The tune, with Crawford's verses, is in the Orpheus Caledonius, 1725, No. 50; in Bremner's Scots Songs, 1757, 27; the Perth Musical Miscellany, 1786, 1, and the Scots Musical Museum, 1787, No. 74. The tune alone is in the Caledonian Pocket Companion, 1752, iv. 18, and McGibbon's Scots Tunes, 1742, 33. According to a tradition related by Riddell in the Interleaved Museum, David Maigh, a keeper of the hounds of the Laird of Riddell in Tweeddale, was the composer. Tradition here is probably wrong.

No. 146. O, were my love yon lilac fair. Currie, Works, 1800, iv. 76. Scottish Airs, 1805, 154. The MS. is at Brechin Castle. Only the first eight lines are the work of Burns. Enclosing the poem in a letter of June 25, 1793, Burns writes thus: 'The thought is inexpressibly beautiful, and quite, so far as I know, original. It is too short for a song, else I would forswear you altogether, except you give it a place. I have often tried to eke a stanza to it, but in vain. After balancing myself for a musing for five minutes on the hind-legs of my elbow-chair, I produced the following. [That is, the first eight lines in the text.] The verses are far inferior to the foregoing [The fragment—the last eight lines], I frankly confess; but, if worthy of insertion at all, they might be first in place, as every poet, who knows anything of his trade, will husband his best thoughts for a concluding stroke.' This little lyric was dreadfully mutilated by the editor. Thomson suggested Hughie Graham as the tune, and while Burns agreed that the measure would suit, he was doubtful whether it would properly express the verses. The poet was evidently not familiar with the proper tune, and modelled his stanza from the fragment which he got from Herd's Scottish Songs, 1776, ii. 4.

Thomson's imprint was a curious piece of patchwork; at least five authors were represented in the poetry and music. In his Select Melodies, 1825, vi. 32, the poetry is in three stanzas: the first by Burns as in the text, the second by a Mr. Richardson, and the third is the anonymous original. As to the melody—an imitation of that in the text—the first part is the composition of a lady correspondent, the second part is the work of the editor.

Another old song of three stanzas on the threadbare theme is in the Herd MS., and the middle one runs as follows:—

'O, if my love was a bonny red rose,
And growing upon some barren wa',
And I myself a drap of dew,
Down in that red rose I would fa'.

The song has rarely been printed with its proper melody. In the Scots Musical Museum, 1803, No. 594, it is set to Lord Balgouie's favourite, now better known as Gloomy winter's noo awa, probably because the proper tune had been appropriated to another song in the volume, beginning, 'Gently blaw, ye western breezes.'

A bad setting of the proper tune, Gin my love were yon red rose, is in Macfarlan MS., 1740, entitled Under her apron; and in the Scots Musical Museum, 1803, No. 562.

No. 147. Simmer's a pleasant time. Scots Musical Museum, 1790, No. 213. In Law's MS., 'Mr. Burns's old words.' A fragment from which Burns completed this song is in the Herd MS.:—

'O wat, wat and weary,
Sleep I can get nane
For thinking on my deary.
A' the night I wak,
A' the night I weary,
Sleep I can get nane
For thinking on my deary.'

The origin of this peculiar lyric has exercised the pens of numerous critics. In the same year as it was published in the Museum, a version appeared in Napier's Scots Songs, i. 61, with the best form of the music as in our text, which was communicated from the MS. of Robert Riddell, the friend of Burns. A reprint of Napier's music was published in the Museum of 1792, No. 382. A sheet-song, entitled Jess Macfarlan, with music, was issued in 1793, which Kirkpatrick Sharpe said applied to a nondescript beauty in Edinburgh about 1740.

The melody is remarkable for its brevity and simplicity. Tytler, Ritson, and other antiquarians considered it much earlier than its recorded first appearance.

Ritson stated that the fragment of eight lines printed in his Scottish Songs, 1794, i. 47 (with music as in our text), was dictated to him many years ago by a young gentleman, who had it from his grandfather. Thomson spoiled the character of the music with a modern dress in Select Melodies, 1822, iii. 19. To the Song, No. 92, sup. 'Can I cease to care,' he added a line at the end of each verse in order to fit the rhythm of the music, which he altered to close the air on the tonic. Those editorial 'improvements' were doubtless made to elaborate the music. The setting of the chorus of the air in the text from Napier's Songs differs considerably from that of our No. 92, which I consider is nearer the original air.

No. 148. Go, fetch to me a pint o' wine. Scots Musical Museum, 1790, No. 231, entitled My Bonnie Mary; Thomson's Scottish Airs, 1805, 189, with a wrong tune. The MS. of these brilliant verses is in the British Museum. Sent to Mrs. Dunlop in a letter, dated December 17, 1788: 'Now I am on my hobby-horse, I cannot help inserting two other old stanzas, which please me mightily:' then follows a copy of My Bonnie Mary. Subsequently he writes: 'This air is Oswald's; the first stanza of the song is old, the rest mine' (Interleaved Museum). His object in concealing himself as the author is not very obvious, but probably it was to record his opinion of the verses. The following fragment is printed on the frontispiece of the second volume of Morison's Scottish Ballads, 1790, evidently a part of some undiscovered song:—

'The loudest of thunder o'er louder waves roar
That's naething like leaving my love on the shore.'

An engraving represents the parting of two lovers, and a boat on the beach close by.

Peter Buchan, the editor of Ancient Ballads, 1828, and other collections, professed to have recovered the first four lines of this song written, as he said in 1636, by Alexander Lesley, grandfather of the celebrated Archbishop Sharp. The Rev. Alexander Dyce, the Shakespearian editor, believed Buchan to be absolutely untrustworthy. His opinion would be spoiled by any paraphrase, so here are his words: 'This Buchan, whom I once endeavoured to assist in his poverty, by procuring purchasers of his books, was a most daring forger; scarcely anything that he has published can be trusted to as genuine.' Dean Christie, in his Traditional Ballad Airs, 1876, gets Buchan into a tight place over a statement that Hugh Allan, the author of The pipers o' Buchan, could not write a simple letter. Christie says that Allan, on the contrary, was a good mathematician and theologian, that he taught his father mathematics, which first induced him to study the science. (Traditional Ballad Airs, 1876, i. 38.)

The tune, by James Oswald, is in Universal Harmony, 1745, 108, entitled The stolen Kiss; in the Caledonian Pocket Companion, 1752, iv. 23, The secret Kiss. Burns was not quite satisfied with his choice of a melody, for in September, 1793, he suggested to George Thomson that as it precisely suited the measure of the air, Waes my heart that we should sunder, he might set it to this. Thomson did not act on the advice, but printed it to The old highland laddie, which subsequent compilers have adopted. Burns's alternative melody, Waes my heart that we should sunder, is a characteristic tune printed in Original Scotch Tunes, 1700; also in the Orpheus Caledonius, 1725, No. 9.

No. 149. Young Jamie, pride of a' the plain. Scots Musical Museum, 1796, No. 420. The MS. is in the British Museum, marked for the tune The carlin of the glen, and Stenhouse was the first who claimed the song for Burns. Nothing is known of its history. The tune is said to be in Clark's Flores Musicae, 1773, with the title; but the music is evidently derived from the Scottish form of Barbara Allan, which is in Oswald's Curious Collection, 1740, 3, and Caledonian Pocket Companion, c. 1745, ii. 27.

No. 150. Hee balou, my sweet wee Donald. Scots Musical Museum, 1796, No. 472, entitled The Highland balou. Stenhouse says: 'This curious song is a versification, by Burns, of a Gaelic nursery song, the literal import of which, as well as the air, were communicated to him by a Highland lady. The bard's original MS. is in the Editor's possession.' (Illustrations, p. 416.) The MS., entitled 'Fragment,' is in the British Museum.

The morality of the Highland cateran was that of the chosen people, who thought it no wrong to spoil the 'Egyptians.' The relation of the Celt to the Sassenach, and to the rights of property, are the subject of a conversation between Evan Dhu and Waverley on Donald Bean Lean and his daughter Alice:—

'Oich, for that,' said Evan, 'there is nothing in Perthshire that she need want, if she ask her father to fetch it, unless it be too hot or too heavy.'

'But to be the daughter of a cattle stealer—a common thief!'

'Common thief!—no such thing; Donald Bean Lean never lifted less than a drove in his life.'

'Do you call him an uncommon thief, then?'

'No, he that steals a cow from a poor widow or a stirk from a cottar is a thief; he that lifts a drove from a Sassenach laird is a gentleman drover. And, besides, to take a tree from the forest, a salmon from the river, a deer from the hill, or a cow from a Lowland strath, is what no Highlander need ever think shame upon.' (Waverley, chap. xviii.)

The original tune is in Johnson's Museum. Robert Schumann, the German composer, adopted the theme, and treated it classically in his Liederkreis, opus 25.

No. 151. O, saw ye my dear, my Philly. Currie, Works, 1800, iv. 174, entitled Saw ye my Philly. Tune, When she cam ben she bobbit. The MS. is in Brechin Castle. A prosaic version of Eppie Mc Nab (Song No. 125), furnished to Thomson in October, 1794. Burns advised the editor how the tune should be printed: 'Let me offer at a new improvement, or rather a restoring of old simplicity, in one of your newly-adopted songs:—

'When she cam ben she bobbit (a crotchet stop)
When she cam ben she bobbit; (a crotchet stop)
And when she cam ben, she kissed Cockpen,
And syne denied that she did it' (a crotchet stop).

This is the old rhythm, and by far the most original and beautiful. Let the harmony of the bass at the stops be full, and thin and dropping through the rest of the air, and you will give the tune a noble and striking effect.' Thomson acted on this excellent advice, and adopted the pauses as indicated. Haydn, the celebrated composer who harmonized the tune for Scottish Airs, filled the vocal blanks with a single instrumental chord.

For the tune, see Song No. 191, where Burns did not treat the 'old words' in the way he advised Thomson.

No. 152. My luvie is like a red, red rose. Urbani's Scots Songs, 1794, with an original melody. Scots Musical Museum, 1796, No. 402, signed 'R,' entitled A Red, red rose. Scottish Airs, 1799, 89, 'from an old MS. in the editor's possession.' The make-up of a song which Burns learnt in his youth. Several variants of it are printed in the Hogg and Motherwell's Burns, 1834, ii. 274, and in the Centenary edition. The first four lines Burns altered, the second he left untouched, the third he materially altered, and the last four lines are almost, if not the identical words of the old song. The rest he discarded; and like nearly everything he touched, he transformed dead or commonplace verses into living, emotional song. The MS. is in the British Museum, and contains this note: 'The tune of this song is in Niel Gow's first collection, and is there called Major Graham.' The first three stanzas are in the Museum as No. 402, to the tune Major Graham. One of the chap-books, containing a version of the ballad, belonged to Burns in his youth. Some of the variants are in the metre of Mally Stewart of Song No. 296, as the following opening verses of The Turtle Dove; or True love's farewell, will show:—

'O fare you well, my own true love,
O farewell for a while,
But I'll be sure to return back again
If I go ten thousand miles, my dear,
If I go ten thousand miles.'

Thomson printed My love is like a red, red rose, and with his usual propensity to improve, he chose a tune of double measure, and altered the song to fit it. For example: 'And fare thee weel awhile' becomes 'And fare thee weel a little while,' truly a water-logged addition.

The tune Major Graham is in Aird's Airs, 1788, iii. No. 551, and Gow's Strathspeys, 1784, 6. It is unconsciously framed on the lines of Miss Admiral Gordon's Strathspey, No. 69 supra.

No. 153. The ploughman, he's a bonie lad. Scots Musical Museum, 1788, No. 165. A new or amended version of a rustic song taken from Herd's Scots Songs, 1769, 317, to furnish words for the tune. The second and third stanzas in the Museum, as follows, are taken from Herd, and improved:—

'My ploughman he comes hame at e'en,
He's aften wat and weary:
Cast aff the wat, put on the dry,
And gae to bed, my dearie.

'I will wash my ploughman's hose,
And I will dress his o'erlay;
I will mak my ploughman's bed,
And cheer him late and early.'

The rest, considerably altered by Burns, is in the text.

Another song of the same kind is sequestered in the Merry Muses. The tune The Ploughman is in the Caledonian Pocket Companion, 1752, iv. 6; in Bremner's Reels, 1761, 89; in the Perth Musical Miscellany, 1786, 248, entitled Merry Plowman; and in Aird's Airs, 1782, ii. No. 41. A tune Sleepy body in the Orpheus Caledonius, 1733, No. 50, although in different measure, is substantially the same melody. The music for the chorus of The Ploughman is the same for the verse.

No. 154. Thou hast left me ever, Jamie. Scottish Airs, 1799, 90. 'Written for this work by R. Burns.' After hearing Fraser play the tune Fee him, father, fee him, Burns wrote to George Thomson, in September, 1793: 'I enclose you Fraser's set of this tune; when he plays it slow, in fact he makes it the language of despair. I shall here give you two stanzas in that style, merely to try if it will be any improvement. Were it possible, in singing, to give it half the pathos which Fraser gives it in playing, it would make an admirable pathetic song. I do not give these verses for any merit they have.' Thomson kept the song for six years, altered Jamie into Tam, and what is more deplorable, set it to the tune My boy Tammie.

Thomas Fraser was a native of Edinburgh, and the principal oboe player in the orchestral concerts of the city at the end of the eighteenth century. G. F. Graham, who knew Fraser personally, confirmed Burns's opinion of him as a musician. He died in 1825.

Burns, in the Interleaved Museum, says: 'This song for genuine humour in the verses, and lively originality in the air is unparalleled. I take it to be very old.' The verses of Fee him, father, fee him are in The Charmer, Edinburgh, 1752; the last stanza is:—

'O, fee him, father, fee him, quo' she,
Fee him, fee him, fee him,
He'll had the pleugh, thrash in the barn,
And crack wi' me at e'en, quo' she,
And crack wi' me at e'en.'

The song is also in Herd's Scots Songs, 1769, 78, and with music in Bremner's Scots Songs, 1757, 6. With different words in Clio and Enterpe, 1762, ii. 171, entitled A new Scotch song; and Scots Musical Museum, 1787, No. 9. The tune alone is in M^cGibbon's Scots Tunes, 1768, iv. 98. The earliest publication of verses and music in a corrupted form is in Walsh's Original Scotch Songs, c. 1740.

No. 155. My heart is sair—I darena tell. Scots Musical Museum, 1796, No. 436, signed 'B,' entitled 'For the sake o' Somebody.' The MS. is in the British Museum. In Ramsay's Miscellany, 1725, there is a song of no conspicuous merit with the same title. Burns took the chorus, and made new verses. Here is a stanza of the commonplace verses of Ramsay to show the alteration Burns effected:—

'I am gaun to seek a wife,
I am gaun to buy a plaidie,
I have three stane of woo',
Carling, is thy daughter ready?'

The Jacobites used the indefinite 'somebody' as a synonym for the Pretender, and patchwork verses referring to the royal line are in the Jacobite collections. A stanza runs:—

'If Somebody were come again,
Then Somebody maun cross the main;
And ilka ane will get his ain,
And I will see my Somebody.'

Burns's tenderly pathetic love-song treats the passion in a lofty and dignified manner. An unwieldy melody by Allan Masterton, based on the original tune, was communicated to the editor of the Museum, and rejected. Burns wrote underneath the music that 'it was difficult to set.' Underneath the copy of another cramped tune by Masterton, Burns remarked that 'the notation of the music seemed incorrect, but I send it as I got it' (Gray's MS. Lists).

For a copy of the tune For the sake o' Somebody, Burns directed the editor of the Museum to the Caledonian Pocket Companion, 1752, iv. 30. The music consists of only four bars repeated in the chorus. Since Burns's time a graceful second strain has been grafted on, probably composed by Urbani, who published a selection of Scots Songs between 1793 and 1799. The modern addition is as follows:—

O - hon! for Some - bo - dy! O - hey! for Some - bo - dy!

I could range the world a - round For the sake o' Some - bo - dy!

The tune of a forgotten and now unknown song, entitled I have waked the winter's nights, corresponding to a line in Burns's song, is in a Dutch music book, Friesche Lust-Hof, 1634. The song in the Tea-Table Miscellany may probably have been sung to that tune, or another, Carlin, is your daughter ready? in Aird's Airs, 1782, i. No. 24.

No. 156. The Winter it is past. Scots Musical Museum, 1788, No. 200, entitled The winter it is past. Cromek printed the first two stanzas in the Reliques, 1808, 446, and other versions vary. Burns wrote only the second stanza, and corrected the first; the rest was printed before his time as a stall-ballad. The song of seven stanzas is in the Herd MS. Dr. Petrie has copied it into the Ancient Music of Ireland. From the beauty of the melody it had a wide range of popularity; Dean Christie took it down from the singing of a native of Banffshire, and inserted the words and music (much different from our text) in Traditional Ballad Airs, 1876, i. 114. The original song (imperfectly authenticated) belongs to the middle of the eighteenth century, and was written on a highwayman called Johnson, who was hung in 1750 for robberies committed in the Curragh of Kildare. The tune is in the Caledonian Pocket Companion, 1759, x. 9. Both poetry and music, so far as dates are concerned, make it a Scottish song.

No. 157. Comin thro' the rye, poor body. Scots Musical Museum, 1796, No. 417, signed 'B.' 'This song was written by Burns' (Stenhouse, Illustrations, p. 377). Burns wrote against the title: 'Tune, Miller's Wedding—a Strathspey' (Gray's MS. Lists). Evidence exists that the bob of this jingle was very popular in Scotland in the eighteenth century. A private version of the song is in the Merry Muses. A later edition of the Museum states that Comin thro' the rye was 'written for this work by Robert Burns.' Chappell, with patriotic fervour, tried to show that a pantomime song, with the title, &c., entered in Stationers' Hall, June 6, 1796 (Burns died on July 21) was the original of the class. But (1) Burns was then very ill, (2) his Merry Muses copy was much earlier than the date named, and (3) he was acquainted with a considerable portion of the posthumous fifth volume of the Museum, printed December, 1796. Chappell's object was to annex the tune to England, it being a variant of Auld lang syne. Comin thro' the rye has been popular in England since the close of the eighteenth century, and it renewed the imitations of the 'Scots' snap.'

For the tune and its variants, see Nos. 144 and 234. In Bremser's Reels, 1759, 41, it is entitled The Miller's Wedding.

No. 158. Wae is my heart, and the tear's in my e'e. Scots Musical Museum, 1796, No. 476. The holograph MS. is in the British Museum. No reference to this song is in the poet's writings. Stenhouse states that Burns communicated the melody, which is very beautiful, to the editor of the Museum, where it was originally published. I have not found it earlier.

No. 159. O lassie, are ye sleepin yet? Currie, Works, 1800, iv. 220. Tune, Let me in this ae night. Scottish Airs, 1805, 156. MS. is in the Brechin Castle collection. A version of a song in Herd's Scottish Songs, 1776, ii. 167, was altered by Burns to fit it for presentation in the Museum, where it appeared in 1792, No. 311. The MS. of this is in the British Museum. Burns rewrote it in August, 1793, but he did not think it worthy of preservation, and cast it aside. In September, 1794, he tried again, and wrote three stanzas, but with the same result. Finally, the song in the text was transmitted to Thomson in February, 1795, styled by Burns, 'Another trial at your favourite air.' The first stanza and the chorus are from the old song; the rest is original. 'The following fourth stanza of the second part was suppressed by Burns:—

'My kith and kin look down on me,
A simple lad of high degree;
Sae I maun try frae love to flee
Across the raging main, jo.'

Burns disapproved of the arrangement of the tune printed with the old song in the Museum, and recommended Thomson to adopt the copy in the Caledonian Pocket Companion, and to put the chorus of the song to the high part of the tune. With his usual perversity, the editor set the chorus to the low part.

The tune, entitled The gowne new made, is said to be in Leyden's MS., 1685; as I would have my gowne made in Sinkler's MS., 1710; entitled Will ye lend me your loom, lass in the Caledonian Pocket Companion, 1752, iv. 21; the Scots Musical Museum, 1792, No. 311, with the old words amended by Burns; and in Dale's Scotch Songs, 1794, ii. 97.

No. 160. Will ye go to the Highlands, Leezie Lindsay? Scots Musical Museum, 1796, No. 434, entitled Leezie Lindsay. Burns appears to have recovered the ballad of Leezie Lindsay, and intended to make a complete song out of it. Johnson of the Museum marked on the musical MS. which Burns sent, 'Mr. Burns is to send words,' but the four lines in the text are the whole contribution. Jamieson, in Popular Ballads, 1806, ii. 149, first published the complete ballad, which refers to Donald MacDonald, heir of Kingcausie, who proposes to go to Edinburgh for a wife. His mother consents on the condition that he shall represent himself as a poor man. To the 'bonny young ladies' of Edinburgh he promises curds and whey, a bed of bracken, &c. The tune was communicated to Johnson of the Museum, where it was first printed. It is a remarkably simple melody.

No. 161. 'Twas past one o'clock. Scots Musical Museum, 1790, No. 227, signed 'Z.' The MS. verses are in the British Museum. In the Law MS., 'Mr. Burns's old words'; and further on in the same sheet is the note: 'There is an excellent set of this tune in M^cGibbon which exactly suits with the words,' which were first sketched in August, 1788, at Mauchline. The air in a rudimentary form is in the opera Flora, 1729, with Cibber's verses, beginning:—

'Twas past twelve o'clock on a fine summer morning
When all the village slept pleasantly,' &c.

The tune with a Celtic title, Chì mì ma chattle, is in Ramsay's Musick, c. 1726, and a song is so marked in the Tea-Table Miscellany, 1724. The music, widely known, is in the Caledonian Pocket Companion, 1752, iv. 16; M^cGibbon's Scots Tunes, 1768, iv. 119; and Thumoth's Scotch and Irish Airs.

In my copy of M^cGibbon some previous owner has marked the title Madhyn Bugeeven, as if it were a Dutch melody.

No. 162. Jockie's taen the parting kiss. Currie, Works, 1800, iv. 397; Scots Musical Museum, 1803, No. 570, 'Written for this work by Robert Burns'; Edinburgh edition, 1877, and Centenary Burns, 1897. Stenhouse remarks that 'this charming song was written by Burns for the Museum' (Illustrations, p. 490).

The tune is probably English, and the copy is a bad setting of Bonnie lass take a man in the Caledonian Pocket Companion, c. 1759, xi. 18, which, according to Mr. Glen, was one of the airs sung in Mitchell's opera, Highland Fair, 1731.

No. 163. As I was walking up the street. Scots Musical Museum, 1803, No. 597, 'Written for this work by Robert Burns'; Edinburgh edition, 1877; and in the Centenary Burns, 1897, iii. 207, where the last and best stanza is omitted. Stenhouse affirms that the song was written by Burns for the Museum (Illustrations, p. 510). When and why it was written has not been discovered. It is the second last song by Burns in the Museum. The tune is said by Stenhouse to have been communicated by Burns. Mr. Glen states that the air is entitled Devil fly over the water wi' her in Aird's Keels, c. 1788, a collection which I have not seen.

No. 164. Is this thy plighted, fond regard? Scotch Airs, 1799, 70, 'Written for this work by Robert Burns. Air, Roy's wife.' The MS. is in the Thomson collection. Sent to Thomson on November 20, 1794. 'Since yesterday's penmanship, I have framed a couple of English stanzas, by way of an English song to Roy's wife. You will allow me that in this instance my English corresponds in sentiment with the Scottish.' This was originally written to celebrate Mrs. Riddell, but her name was cancelled, and an imaginary one inserted.

The tune Roy's wife or Ruffian's rant is noted in Song No. 239.

No. 165. There was a bonie lass, and a bonie, bonie lass. Scots Musical Museum, 1803, No. 586, 'By R. Burns.' No historical evidence has been forthcoming for this fragment in the Museum, except that it is marked as stated.

The tune, A bonie lass, so far as concerns the first section, is a variation of Pinky house in the Orpheus Caledonius, 1733, No. 21, and the Caledonian Pocket Companion, 1743, i. 11; the second part appears to be original.

No. 166. As late by a sodger I chanced to pass. Scots Musical Museum, 1790, No. 268. Neither Stenhouse nor Cromek connect Burns with this song, nor is it in his published works. In Law's MS. List for the third volume of the Museum Burns wrote against the title, 'Mr. Burns's old words.' The first twelve lines are substantially those in the Herd MS., and the remaining four lines are original to complete the second stanza for the tune, which is marked as to be sung for one of Allan Ramsay's songs in his Miscellany, 1725. Ramsay's verses, beginning 'Adieu for a while,' are reprinted in Herd's Scots Songs, 1769, 106.

The music without title is in Sinkler's MS., 1710; as a variation entitled Gig it is in the Caledonian Pocket Companion, 1752, iv. 17; and with the title I'll mak ye be fain to follow me in Bremner's Reels, 1757, 24; Stewart's Reels, 1761, 10; Campbell's Reels, 1778, 12; and elsewhere.

No. 167. O dear minny, what shall I do? Scots Musical Museum, 1790, No. 236. The MS. is in the British Museum, and in Law's MS., 'Mr. B. gave the old words,' in the poet's handwriting. Part of the verses are in the Herd MS. The alteration made by Burns was to recast six lines into eight, the second line being original.

The tune is in Sinkler's MS., 1710, entitled O Minnie; in Oswald's Curious Collection of Scots Tunes, 1740, 28; in Caledonian Pocket Companion, 1751, iii. 10; McGibbon's Scots Tunes, 1746, 33. A similar melody is in Apollo's Banquet, 1695, entitled Long cold nights.

III. LOVE: HUMOROUS.

No. 168. Here 's to thy health, my bonie lass! Scots Musical Museum, 1796, No. 495, signed 'B,' with the tune Laggan Burn. I adopt the opinion of Scott-Douglas, that this is an early production of Burns, but the chronology is uncertain. The MS. is in the British Museum. In a later issue of the Museum it is marked 'Written for this work by Robert Burns.' According to Mrs. Begg, the poet's sister, the song was known previous to her time, but there is no trace of any such song.

According to Stenhouse, Burns communicated to Johnson of the Museum two melodies for this song, Laggan Burn, and another. The 'other' was not suitable, and Laggan Burn was chosen. Stephen Clarke, the musical editor, is reputed to have adapted it to the verse according to Burns's direction. It is not easy to account for the neglect of this insinuating melody. It may be compared with Greenend Park, in Malcolm M^cDonald's Reels, second coll., 1789, 10.

No. 169. The taylor fell thro' the bed. Scots Musical Museum, 1790, No. 212, entitled The taylor fell thro' the bed, &c. The air is the March of the Corporation of Tailors. 'The second and fourth stanzas are mine' (Interleaved Museum); 'Mr. Burns's old words,' in Law's MS. List. The tune is in Atkinson's MS., 1694, entitled Beware of the Ripells; in the Caledonian Pocket Companion, xi. 28; and as The Taylor's March in Aird's Airs, 1782, i. No. 173. A song with substantially the above title is in the Merry Muses; it is named I rede you beware o' the ripples, to the tune The taylor's faun thro' the bed, the second stanza being:—

'I rede you beware o' the ripples, young man,
I rede you beware o' the ripples, young man,
Tho' music be pleasure, tak music in measure
Or ye may want win' i' your whistle, young man.'

See the tune No. 172, which is the same as this, differently arranged. The more modern Logie o' Buchan is nothing but this seventeenth century melody, which is also allied to I love my love in secret, No. 110.

No. 170. O, merry hae I been teething a heckle. Scots Musical Museum, 1790, No. 270. Tune, Lord Breadalbine's March. 'Mr. B.'s old words' (Law's MS. List) in Burns's handwriting. Stenhouse had the MS. of the song through his hands. There is no authority for assuming that it is a variant of the tinker's song in The Jolly Beggars, although it looks it.

The Celtic tune of Burns's choice has no sort of affinity with The bob o' Dumblane. Mr. Henley has followed Scott-Douglas in assuming that it is the same air. The bob o' Dumblane is the tune of Song No. 204, and can be compared with Lord Breadalbine's March, or Boddlich na'mbrigs, which is in Dow's Ancient Scots Music, c. 1776, 32. It is an excellent specimen of Scots dance music of the eighteenth century. It lacks the intervals of a fourth and a seventh, and closes on the second of the scale.

No. 171. My lord a-hunting he is gane. Scots Musical Museum, 1803, No. 554, 'Written for this work by Robert Burns.' This is a side view of one of the fashionable amusements of the eighteenth century. 'The kith and kin of Cassilis' blude' recalls the ancient renown of the Kennedy family, which has been in the Scottish peerage since 1510. Cassilis House, near Ayr, was the scene of the not unwilling abduction of the Countess, and her subsequent incarceration for life in the tower with the heads of Faa and his gypsy gang emblazoned in stone on the turrets. The ballad of Johnny Faa or The Gypsy Laddie is supposed to have its origin from this traditional story.

According to Stenhouse, the tune is the composition of James Greig, a teacher of dancing in Ayrshire, who had a taste for painting, mechanics, and natural history. My lady's gown was originally published in the Museum. It is a remarkably good specimen of the untutored music of Scotland without regard to any of the scholastic rules of the art. Another specimen of Greig's tunes is in Stewart's Reels, 1762, 44, and in Campbell's Reels, 1778, 11, entitled Greig's pipes.

No. 172. The heather was blooming. Cromek's Reliques, 1808, 450; entitled Hunting Song, for the tune I rede ye beware o' the ripells, young man. It is one of the Crochallan Club Songs in the Merry Muses, or rather an amended version of a song then current, but now not available. Mrs. M^cLehose begged the author not to print it, and he acted on the advice, but Cromek, though very fastidious about The Jolly Beggars, inserted it in the Reliques of Burns. For the tune, see Note 169.

No. 173. Weary fa' you, Duncan Gray. Scots Musical Museum, 1788, No. 160, signed 'Z.' The MS. is in the British Museum. 'Dr. Blacklock informed me that he had often heard the tradition that this air was composed by a carman in Glasgow' (Interleaved Museum). Founded on an old song, and written for the Museum. Burns borrowed the rhythm, and the refrain, 'Ha, ha, the girdin o't.' A version of four stanzas in the Merry Muses begins:—

'Can ye play me Duncan Gray?
Ha, ha, the girdin o't!
O'er the hills and far away,
Ha, ha, the girdin o't!
'Duncan cam our Meg to woo,
Meg was nice and wadna do,
But like an ether puffed and blew
At offer o' the girdin o't,' &c.

Substantially the same verses of five stanzas are in the Herd MS. in the British Museum. They are not redolent of a pious education. For the tune, see Note 179.

No. 174. Wi' braw new branks in meikle pride. Lockhart's Life of Burns, 1829. Burns has described the interest he felt in parish secrets as a statesman in the knowledge of European diplomacy at his finger ends. His friends employed him as a confidential clerk to write their letters, and he acted the part of an unpaid French notaire in conducting their correspondence. In this case it was a poetical epistle on behalf of William Chalmers, a solicitor of Ayr, the same who drew the deed assigning Burns's interest in the farm of Mossiel to his brother Gilbert when the poet decided to emigrate. Burns sent the epistle to the sweetheart of his friend; in 1787 he gave a copy to Lady Don, who handed it to Sir Walter Scott.

I cannot discover that the verses were written for any particular melody. An old tune, Omnia vincit Amor, in the Skene MS., c. 1630, will suit the words. It is in the Caledonian Pocket Companion, Book, viii. considerably altered.

No. 175. I am my mammy's ae bairn. Scots Musical Museum, 1788, No. 107, signed 'Z,' to the tune I'm o'er young to marry yet. 'The chorus of this song is old; the rest of it, such as it is, is mine' (Interleaved Museum). With considerable emendations, it still occupies a place in all modern collections of Scottish song, and is very popular to a modern tune, different from that in the text for which it was written.

In Cromek's Scottish Songs, i. 107, is an additional stanza, not by Burns, which that editor thinks ought to be restored, but our text may be quite sufficient. Two stanzas of another of the same kind are in the Herd MS., beginning:—

'I am gaun to court a wife,
And I'll love her as my life;
But she is a young thing,
And new come frae her minnie.'

The subject is common to the folk-song of other countries. There is, for example, a French popular song of the fifteenth century with the same text, beginning, 'Je suis trop jeune, Pour faire ung amy,' &c. The excellent old melody of these French verses may be seen in Tiersot's Chanson Populaire, Paris, 1880, 66.

The tune, I'm o'er young, slightly varied from that in our text, is in Bremner's Reels, 1758, 28; Stewart's Reels, 1761, 7; and M^cGlashan's Reels, 1786, 46. An offshoot is probably Loch Eroch Side, No. 15.

No. 176. There was a lass, they ca'd her Meg. Scots Musical Museum, 1788, No. 149, entitled Duncan Davison. Signed 'Z.' This merry rustic song is not named by Burns in any of his writings, neither is it among the Burns MS. in the British Museum. Stenhouse states: 'I have recovered his original MS. of the song, which is the same as that inserted in the Museum' (Illustrations, p. 139). The model is a song of two double stanzas, which Burns wrote in the Merry Muses, and a fragment of another of the same sort, You'll aye be welcome back, is in Herd's MS.

The tune, as in our text, is in Bremner's Reels, 1759, 56, entitled Ye'll ay be welcome back again; in Campbell's Reels, 1778, 31, entitled Duncan Davie. In M^cGlashan's Strathspey Reels, 1780, 14, it bears the name Duncan Davidson, by which it has since been known. It is in Dale's Scotch Songs, 1794, i. 58, with Burns's verses. For another setting of the tune, see No. 56.

No. 177. The blude-red rose at Yule may blow. Scots Musical Museum, 1788, No. 182, entitled To daunton me. Two MSS. containing the complete song in his handwriting are in the British Museum; and into the Interleaved Museum he copied two stanzas (apparently from memory) of the following good Jacobite song, which is in Loyal Songs, 1750, and refers to the Revolution of 1688:—

'To daunton me, to daunton me,
Do you ken the thing that would daunton me?
Eighty-eight, and eighty-nine,
And a' the dreary years sinsyne,
With cess and press and presbytrie,
Good faith! this had liken till a daunton me.

'But to wanton me, but to wanton me,
Do you ken the thing that would wanton me?
To see gude corn upon the rigs,
And banishment to all the Whigs,
And right restor'd where right should be;
O, these are the things that wad wanton me.

'But to wanton me, but to wanton me,
And ken ye what maist would wanton me?
To see King James at Edinb'rough Cross,
With fifty thousand foot and horse,
And the usurper forc'd to flee;
O, this is what maist would wanton me.'

Several versions of this song exist, satirizing the Whigs and in praise of the Stuarts. The domestic song of Burns harps on the old tale of the attempted purchase of a young wife by an old man. The subject is one of Poggio's Jocose Tales of the beginning of the fifteenth century.

The tune of Burns's song in the Museum is printed incorrectly. It embraces eight lines, but the original stanza, as above, is six lines. The memorandum written by Burns in his copy of the Caledonian Pocket Companion, 1743, i. 16, runs: 'The chorus is set to the first part of the tune, which just suits it when played or sung once over.' The music is in Atkinson's MS., 1694, 15; Oswald's Curious Collection, 1740, 38; M^cGibbon's Scots Tunes, 1746, 27; Aird's Airs, 1782, ii. No. 60, and elsewhere.

No. 178. Her daddie forbad, her minnie forbad. Scots Musical Museum, 1788, No. 133, with the tune Jumpin John. Stenhouse states that this is the fragment of an earlier song, which Burns mended to illustrate a melody requiring words. But nothing is known of any song of the kind except one with the title My daddie forbad, my minnie forbad in Ramsay's Tea-Table Miscellany, 1724, not at all resembling Burns's verses. It is in Herd's Scots Songs, 1769, 133. The title Jumpin John is in Burns's handwriting in Gray's Museum Lists. The tune, although well known in Scotland under this title, is not a Scottish air. As Joan's placket is torn, it has been in use for nearly two hundred and fifty years. Pepys, in his diary of June 22, 1667, describing the capture of the man-of-war Royal Charlie by the Dutch, speaks of a trumpeter sounding Joan's placket is torn.

The music is in Playford's Dancing Master, 1686. A political song with the music is in 180 Loyal Songs, 1685, 143. The second part of the tune is the chorus of Lilliburero, the celebrated political song of 1688, which Wharton claimed to have written, and which he boasted had sung a king out of three kingdoms. Lastly, it is the parent stock of a spurious Celtic air The Cock of the North, played on the great Highland bagpipe, much in vogue a year or two ago. In Scottish collections, the tune as Jumpin Joan is in the Caledonian Pocket Companion, 1758, ix. 10; and as When I followed a lass in Aird's Airs, 1782, ii. No. 96.

No. 179. Duncan Gray cam here to woo. Thomson's Scottish Airs, 1798, 48, 'Written for this work by Robert Burns. Air, Duncan Gray.' The MS. is in the Thomson collection. Sent to Thomson with his song Auld Rob Morris: 'The foregoing I submit to your better judgment; acquit or condemn them as seemeth good in your sight. Duncan Gray is that kind of light-horse gallop of an old air which precludes sentiment. The ludicrous is the leading feature.' It is an original treatment of the old song, and one of the best-known of Burns's humorous productions. The ancestry is treated in Note No. 173.

The tune is in the Caledonian Pocket Companion, c. 1751, iii. 8; Mc'Gibbon's Scots Tunes, 1755, 1; Aird's Airs, 1782, ii. No. 111; and with part of the old song in Scots Musical Museum, 1788, No. 160. For the music, see No. 173.

No. 180. Hey the dusty miller. Scots Musical Museum, 1788, No. 144, entitled Dusty miller, with music. A holograph title is in the Gray MS., and a MS. of the verses is in the British Museum. This is another of the unconsidered trifles floating among the peasantry, which Burns dressed for the Museum. The original is in the Herd MS. All the second stanza is Burns's, and he corrected the rest to preserve the melody. The miller was an important person in Scotland. The multure, or mouter, was the portion of the grain retained by him as the charge for grinding. He had the reputation of being able to take care of himself, and Acts of Parliament were passed to protect the public against his extortion. He is embalmed in satirical songs of the seventeenth and eighteenth centuries.

The tune as Binny's jig is in Blackie's MS., 1692; as Dusty miller in Bremner's Reels, 1758, 27; Welsh's Compleat Dancing Master, c. 1718; and Dale's Scotch Songs, 1794, iii. 163.

No. 181. I gaed up to Dunse. In Scots Musical Museum, 1803, No. 543, entitled Robin shure in haste. 'Written for this work by Robert Burns.' 'Mr. B. gave the old words' (Law's MS. List). The poet himself was not the hero of the verses, for on August 23, 1787, he wrote to Robert Ainslie, heading the letter with a first stanza, and ending 'Call your boy what you think proper, only interject BURNS. What say you to a Scripture name? for instance, Zimi Burns Ainslie, or Achitophell, &c. &c., look your Bible for these two heroes.' In another letter to the same correspondent, dated January 6, 1789, he says, 'I am still catering for Johnson's publication, and among others, I have brushed up the following old favourite song a little, with a view to your worship, I have only altered a word here and there; but if you like the humour of it, we shall think of a stanza or two to add to it.' The first Border tour ended in the middle of June, 1787, when Burns accompanied Ainslie and stayed for a short time in the house of Ainslie's father, at Dunse; so that the Robin of the song who gaed to Dunse, and played a trick with the Elder's daughter, was his young friend, who afterwards became a writer to the Signet, settled down as a grave and serious person, and as Lockhart remarks, 'is best known as the writer of Manuals of Devotion.' He died in 1838, and, as Burns predicted elsewhere, left a good deal more than the professional 'three goose feathers and a whittle.'

The tune is familiar on both sides of the Border, and only a portion is used for the song. The whole may be seen in the Caledonian Pocket Companion, 1753, v. 11, as a very good example of the peculiar measure and rhythm of the Scottish pipe melodies. It is also in Bremner's Reels, 1768, 103. That in the Museum, printed with Burns's verses, is the old English and different air Bob and Joan.

No. 182. My love, she's but a lassie yet. Scots Musical Museum, 1790, No. 225, and Thomson's Scottish Airs, 1798, 35. In the Law MS. Burns describes this as his 'old words,' and a holograph of the verses is in the British Museum. The last four lines is the middle stanza of a song in Herd's Scottish Songs, 1776, ii. 225 (not in the 1769 edition), entitled Green grow the rashes, O. The second stanza of the song in the text seems to have little connexion with the first, and so far as known Burns wrote the whole except the last four lines.

The earliest date when the tune bears the title My love she's but a lassie yet is Aird's Airs, 1782, ii. No. 1; so it would appear that either Herd did not know the air of the song, or that between 1776 and 1782 it was changed. The original publication of the tune is in Bremner's Reels, 1757, 19, entitled Miss Farquharson's Reel. Stenhouse saw a manuscript copy of the music, entitled Lady Badinscot's Reel, in a musical publication of a few years earlier date, which only proves that the air was very popular in the eighteenth century. It is necessary to correct a mistake of C. Kirkpatrick Sharpe, who asserts in Stenhouse's Illustrations, p. *303, that Put up thy dagger Jamie is the same as the tune in the text. That tune in the Fitzwilliam Virginal Book, c. 1650, is quite a different melody.

No. 183. I murder hate by field or flood. Stewart's Edition, 1802, and Edinburgh Edition, 1877, ii. 295. In the Glenriddell MS., entitled A Song. Burns wrote the first eight lines on a window of the Globe Tavern, Dumfries, where he and Stephen Clarke, the musician, had many a merry meeting. The tune is unknown if ever there was one, which is doubtful.

No. 184. Wha is that at my bower-door? Scots Musical Museum, 1792, No. 337. The MS. is in the British Museum, and a copy of the verses is in the Merry Muses. There can be no doubt that Burns wrote the song, although Cromek's quotation, 'The words are mine,' are not in the Interleaved Museum as printed in Reliques, 1808, 301. In the Centenary Burns, 1897, it is shown that the original is Who but I, quoth Finlay, 'a new song much in request, sung with its proper tune'; a prosaic production of seven stanzas, of which a broadside copy is in Lord Rosebery's collection, beginning:—

'There dwells a man into this town,
Some say they call him Finlay;
He is a brisk and an able man—
O, if I knew but Finlay!'

Nearly all the incidents were taken from this song, but it is as brass to the gold of Burns's humorous verses. The find disposes of the myth that they were written on James Findlay of Tarbolton, the exciseman, and a colleague of Burns.

The tune bears the title of the chorus of an old song, as follows:—

'Lass, an I come near thee,
Lass, an I come near thee,
I'll gar a' your ribbons reel
Lass, an I come near thee.'

A fragment of a different kind, in two stanzas for the same tune, is in the Herd MS. A wife replies to her husband:—

‘ Say ’t o’er again, say ’t o’er again—
Ye thief, that I may hear ye;
I’se gar ye dance upon a peat
Gin I sall come but near ye.’

In Findlay’s MS., c. 1715, there is a tune entitled Findlay cam to my bed stock, which I have not seen. In Aird’s Airs, 1782, i. No. 183, is Lass, if I come near thee. Schumann, the German composer, composed an original melody for Burns’s song.

No. 185. There’s a youth in this city. Scots Musical Museum, 1790, No. 258, signed Z, ‘a Gaelic air.’ ‘Mr. Burns’s old words’ (Law’s MS. List). The MS. in the British Museum contains directions for the air. ‘This air is claimed by Niel Gow, who calls it his Lament for his brother. The first half-stanza of the song is old, the rest is mine’ (Interleaved Museum). Elsewhere he instructed the editor of the Museum to leave out the name of the tune, and call it a Gaelic air. Nothing more is known of the history of the song.

The tune Niel Gow’s Lament, in his second collection of Reels, 1788, is a good example of the Highland style, and worth reprinting.

No. 186. O meikle thinks my luvie o’ my beauty. Scots Musical Museum, 1792, No. 312, signed ‘B,’ entitled My tocher’s the jewel. Thomson’s Scottish Airs, 1799, 73. According to Cromek the fifth and sixth lines are much older than Burns; and the last four lines were sent to Tytler in 1787 by Burns, and marked as ‘Stanza of an old song’ in Cromek’s Scottish Songs, 1810, ii. 207. The original MS. is unknown, but Stenhouse saw it, and is precise in the statement that the following remark on the tune was written by the poet: ‘This song is to be sung to the air called Lord Elcho’s favourite (another name for the tune), but do not put that name above it, let it just pass for the tune of the song, and a beautiful tune it is.’ Burns has a note in the Interleaved Museum stating that Nathaniel Gow claimed the air, but it is before his time; and the music in the text is a jig variation, without title, of The highway to Edinburgh in the Caledonian Pocket Companion, 1751, iii. 28, and reprinted in Aird’s Airs, 1788, iii. No. 409. This beautiful melody was copied into a collection of Gow’s, who named it Lord Elcho’s favourite, hence the instruction of Burns that the tune should be given the title of his song. This treatment of the melody is evidence of Burns’s acute perception of musical sound. The tune The highway to Edinburgh (not the variation in the text), is almost identical in the second movement with The black eagle in Oswald’s Companion.

No. 187. Whare are you gaun, my bonie lass. Scots Musical Museum, 1790, No. 288, entitled A waukrife minnie. In the Interleaved Museum, Burns says, ‘I pickt up this old song and tune from a country girl in Nithsdale. I never met with it elsewhere in Scotland.’ It is thought that he amended some verses, and wrote others. I can find no trace of any original prior to Burns.

The simple air communicated by Burns has all the marks of pure unsophisticated music.

No. 188. My heart is a-breaking, dear Tittie. Scots Musical Museum, 1790, No. 296, entitled Tam Glen; Thomson’s Scottish Airs, 1799, 66. ‘Mr. Burns’s words’ (Law’s MS. List). Stenhouse says that there was an old song of the title, but gives no reference; I can find no such song in any of the collections. The verses of Tam Glen are uniformly good, it is one of the best of Burns’s humorous songs, and maintains undiminished popularity. The original publication, obviously surreptitious, is in the Edinburgh Magazine, 1789, x. 357, signed T. S., following which is the original anonymous publication of Burns's poem, The humble petition of Briar Water. It may be remarked that Robert Riddell has a note in the Interleaved Museum (unnoticed by Cromek) saying that Tam Glen 'is the composition of my much esteemed friend, Mr. Burns, to the tune of Mall Roe.' I do not know any melody of this title, but Mad Moll is in the same time and rhythm, but not the same music as that of Tam Glen, which is also of English origin, and known as Hewson the Cobbler. It was sung to the words, 'I once was a poet,' &c., in the opera of The Jovial Crew, 1731, and the music can be seen in Walsh's edition, p. 6. It belongs to a scurrilous and indecent Commonwealth song, entitled Old Hewson the Cobbler, the verses of which are in the Vocal Miscellany, Dublin, 1738, 338. Hewson was a remarkable man of considerable talent. He was originally a shoemaker, had only one eye, was a soldier in the Parliamentary army, became a colonel, was knighted by Cromwell, and afterwards was one of his lords. The Restoration song-books teem with punning verses on his person and character. Tam Glen was very early divorced from its proper tune, and is now universally set to The nuckin o' Geordy's byre, for which see Song and Note, No. 51.

No. 189. They snool me sair, and haud me down. Scots Musical Museum, 1792, No. 355, signed 'B,' entitled O, for ane-and-twenty Tam. Tune, The moudiewart. Thomson's Scotish Airs, 1799, 59. This is an original song with the exception of the first line, the title of the tune. Burns acknowledged having written it in a letter dated October 19, 1794, and directed it to be set to the tune in the text, for which there is a song in the Merry Muses :—

'This moudiewart tho' it be blin',
If ance its nose you lat it in;
Then to the hilts, within a crack,
Its out o' sight, the moudiewark.'

The setting of the tune in the Museum did not please Burns. He recommended Thomson to publish the song, and said, 'but if you will get any of our ancients Scots fiddlers to play you in Strathspey time The moudiewart—that is the name of the air—I think it will delight you.' The suggestion was ignored, and Thomson printed the song to Cold and raw. The music in the text is taken from the Caledonian Pocket Companion, 1752, iv. 8, there entitled Scotch Gtg. It differs in some essentials from the copy in the Museum, but the title which Burns gave it is in Walsh's Caledonian Country Dances. The moudiewart, or moldwarp, as in Shakespeare, or mole, was respected by the Jacobites in consequence of the death of William of Orange, caused by his horse stumbling on a mole-hill.

No. 190. But warily tent when ye come to court me. Scotish Airs, 1799, 94. 'Written for this work by Robert Burns.' A variation of the first two stanzas was supplied to Johnson, and printed in his Museum, No. 106, of which a MS. is in the British Museum. In August, 1793, Burns wrote to Thomson: 'Is Whistle and I'll come to you, my lad one of your airs? I admire it much, and yesterday I set the following verses to it. Urbani, whom I have met with here, begged them of me, as he admires the air much; but as I understand that he looks with rather an evil eye on your work I did not choose to comply. However, if the song does not suit your taste, I may possibly send it to him. He is, entre nous, a narrow, conceited creature; but he sings so delightfully, that whatever he introduces at your concert must have immediate celebrity.' Two years later, while under the influence of Jean Lorimer, Burns asked Thomson to alter the last line of every stanza to read, 'Thy Jeanie will venture wi' ye my lad.' Pietro Urbani, a native of Milan, was a vocalist of some eminence. At the time Burns refers to him, he was collecting materials for a Selection of Scots Songs, which he published c. 1794. He ruined himself by orchestral concerts in Edinburgh, and died in 1816 in poverty.

The chorus of the song is in the Herd MS.; the unprinted stanza of Burns's MS. in the British Museum is the third stanza of Song No. 169 supra. The tune, an excellent specimen of natural music, fits exactly the verses of Burns. O'Keefe used it for one of the songs in his opera, The Poor Soldier, 1783. Burns has not stated that he knew the composer of the air, as represented by Stenhouse and others.

No. 191. O, when she cam ben, she bobbed fu' law. Scots Musical Museum, 1792, No. 353. The MS. is in the British Museum. An old song in Herd's Scots Songs, 1769, 315, dressed up to make it presentable. Burns wrote all but the first stanza, and the first two lines of the second stanza. Tradition reports the Laird of Cockpen as a boon companion of Charles II.

The melody has been continuously popular for at least two centuries. It is in Leyden's MS. of the end of the seventeenth century; in Sinkler's MS., 1710. A song in the Tea-Table Miscellany, 1724, beginning Come fill me a bumper, is directed to be sung to the tune which is printed in Ramsay's Musick, 1726; in Oswald's Curious Collection, 1740, 40; his Companion, 1743, i. 14; Aird's Airs, 1782, ii. No. 80; and elsewhere with the title of our text. See the note on Song No. 151 supra.

No. 192. O, ken ye what Meg o' the mill has gotten? Scots Musical Museum, 1803, No. 566. 'Written for this work by Robert Burns.' This is the original version which Burns wrote for the Museum, and intended for publication in the fourth volume. When he was on the point of sending his verses to Johnson, he wrote to George Thomson (April, 1793), saying, 'Do you know a fine air called Jackie Hume's lament? I have a song of considerable merit to that air, beginning, "O, ken ye what Meg o' the mill has gotten." I enclose you both the song and the tune, as I had them ready to send to Johnson's Museum.' It was not at all the kind of song which Thomson affected, and he managed to induce Burns to write a second version, although the poet at first declined, and said that the song as it was pleased him so much that he could not write another for the same air. Of the tune Jackie Hume's lament, Thomson has stated that it is the same air as O, bonie lass will ye lie in a barrack. I have not found Jackie Hume's lament in any collection, therefore cannot identify it with the tune in the text from the Museum.

No. 193. O, ken ye what Meg o' the mill, &c. Currie, Works, iv. 54. This is the second version of the preceding song, and marked for the air O, bonie lass will ye lie in a barrack. It contained too much vernacular for Thomson, who did not print it in his Scottish Airs.

The tune, O, bonie lass, &c., is in Campbell's Reels, 1778, 80; and the complete song in Napier's Scots Songs, 1792, ii. 90, with the following as the first stanza:—

'O say! bonny lass, will you lie in a barrack
And marry a soldier and carry his wallet;
O say! wou'd you leave baith your mither and daddie
And follow the camp with your soldier laddy?'

No. 194. Cauld is the e'enin blast. Scots Musical Museum, 1803, No. 583. 'Written for this work by Robert Burns.' The rechauffée of a coarse ditty, beginning:—

'Bonnie Peggie Ramsay as ony man may see,
Has a bonnie sweet face and a gleg glintin e'e.'

In Durfey's Jills, 1707, is also a coarse but different song of the same name. Whoever Peg was, she had a wide and long reputation on both sides of the Border, and was not burdened with morals. She is referred to in Shakespeare's Twelfth Night, Act 2, Sc. 3, and is named by Tom Nashe in The Shepherd's

Holiday as the title of a ballad or dance tune. In England, two different melodies served for numerous ballads of the Peg-a-Ramsay class, but neither is identical with that of Burns's verses. The earliest specimen of the English melody is in Ballet's Lute Book, a MS. of uncertain date, the other is in a MS. by Dr. John Bull, entitled Little Pegge of Ramsie, known later as Watton Town's End, or O, London is a fine town, in the Dancing Master, 1665, and with the song in Pills, 1719, v. 139. The music is reprinted in Chappell's Popular Music, p. 218. The Scottish tune in the Museum, 1803, with Burns's song is entirely different from the English Air. I have not found it in any earlier music book.

No. 195. The taylor he cam here to sew. Scots Musical Museum, 1796, No. 490. The MS. is in the British Museum. A song in Herd's Scots Songs, 1769, 318, entitled The tailor gave only a bare suggestion to Burns, neither the subject nor the rhythm being identical with that in the text. In the MS. he informs the editor that the tune The Drummer is in Aird's Airs, 1782, i. No. 129, and goes on to instruct him as follows: 'Only remember that the second part of the tune, as Aird has set it, goes here to the first part of the song; and of course Aird's first part goes to the chorus' (R. B.). The instruction was carried out with a little variation from the melody in Aird, which is as in our text. The music is also in Stewart's Reels, 1762, 28, and Ross's Reels, 1780, 32. It is said to be also in Walsh's Caledonian Country Dances, c. 1741.

No. 196. O, steer her up, and haud her gaun. Scots Musical Museum, 1803, No. 504. 'Written for this work by Robert Burns.' 'Mr. Burns's old words' (Law's MS. List). In Ramsay's Miscellany, 1725, is a garbled and disconnected song of the title, which Herd copied into Scots Songs, 1769, 181. Stenhouse says 'Ramsay very properly suppressed the old song, enough of which is still well known' (Illustrations, p. 441). Burns wrote all but the first four lines, and put it wholly in Scottish orthography.

The tune Steer her up, a seventeenth century production, is said to be in Guthrie's MS. It is in Playford's Original Scots Tunes, 1700; Sinkler's MS., 1710; McGibbon's Scots Tunes, 1742, 7; Oswald's Companion, 1745, ii. 25; and Aird's Airs, 1782, i. No. 118. The first half of Steer her up is in the tune Scerdustis in the Skene MS., c. 1630.

No. 197. What can a young lassie? Scots Musical Museum, 1792, No. 316, signed 'R,' entitled What can a young lassie do wi' an auld man? The MS. is in the British Museum. In Gray's MS. List—'Mr. B.—words.'

A variation of the subject of the song is four lines in the Herd MS., as follows, now printed for the first time:—

'Kiss ye Jean, kiss ye Jean;—
Never let an auld man kiss ye Jean,
An auld man's nae man till a young quean;—
Never let an auld man kiss ye Jean.'

Holbein made a wood-cut of this very old episode in human life for Erasmus's Praise of Folly. There is an English ballad on the subject about two hundred and fifty years old. The earliest copy is a black letter broadside of the seventeenth century, entitled 'The young woman's complaint, or a caveat to all maids to have a care how they be married to old men. The tune is What should a young woman do with an old man, &c., or The Tyrant. London, printed for W. Gilbertson in Giltspur Street Without Newgate.' It is referred to in a medley in Durfey's Pills, 1719. This street ballad is better than the average of the rhyming literature of the flying stationers. I cannot identify the English melody or its alternative The Tyrant, but it is not at all likely to be the tune in the text, which is in Oswald's Companion, 1754, vi. 5, and for which Burns wrote his song.

Dr. Blacklock had written a long ballad for the tune, about which Burns made the following remark on the MS. of his own song to the editor of the Museum: 'Set the tune to these words. Dr. B.'s set of the tune is bad; I here enclose a better. You may put Dr. B.'s song after these verses, or you may leave it out as you please.' The editor rejected Blacklock's ballad.

No. 198. Awa wi' your witchcraft o' beauty's alarms. Thomson's Scottish Airs, 1799, 100. 'Written for this work by Robert Burns. Air, Balinamona Ora.' The MS. is in the Thomson collection. From August, 1795 to January, 1796 is a blank in Burns's correspondence. At the request of Thomson he resumes his work. Verses were wanted for Irish airs, and in sending the present song Burns, in February, repeats what he has done in this way. 'I strung up a kind of rhapsody to another Hibernian melody which I admire much . . . If this will do, you have now four of my Irish engagements—Humours of Glen, Captain O'Kean, Oonaghs Waterfall, and Balinamona.' In a line he disposes of his former ideal, Jean Lorimer: 'In my by-past songs, I dislike one thing, the name Chloris.' There is a reminiscence of Allan Ramsay's 'Gie me a lass wi' a lump o' land' in the present song.

The tune Balinamona is in Thumoth's English and Irish Airs, c. 1760, 26; in the Perth Musical Miscellany, 1786, 105; and Calliope, London, 1788, 256. I was a popular air at public concerts in London during the last half of the eighteenth century.

No. 199. Had I the wyte. Scots Musical Museum, 1796, No. 415, signed 'Z.' The MS. is in the British Museum. The version in the Merry Muses is slightly different. The chorus and a stanza which Burns did not use are in Herd's MS. The tune can be traced to near the beginning of the eighteenth century, and it is plain that it was sung to some other song besides the present class. Apparently an earlier original in Ramsay's Miscellany, 1724, My Jocky blyth for what thou hast done is marked for Come kiss with me, come clap with me. The tune is in Ramsay's Musick, c. 1726, and with Ramsay's verses in the Orpheus Caledonius, 1733, No. 39. In Oswald's Companion, c. 1755, vii. 20 there is an additional strain, and the title for the first time is Had I the wate she bade me. In Campbell's Reels, 1778, 20, it bears the name Highland Hills, the same as that named in the Merry Muses. In Ross's Reels, 1780, 9, it is called Mason laddie; lastly, Gow in his third collection of Reels names it the Bob of Fettercairn. The popularity of this gay attractive melody is by no means exhausted. In Northumbrian Minstrelsy, 1882, 156, a collection of Northumbrian tunes published by the Newcastle Society of Antiquaries, there is a bad setting of it entitled Newburn lads, and it is still played on the small pipes in Northumberland. I heard it the other day ground out of a barrel organ in the streets of Newcastle, preceded and followed by airs from the newest operas. The foreign artist who turned the handle knew it as a Scotch tune.

No. 200. Gat ye me, O, gat ye me. Scots Musical Museum, 1796, No. 430, entitled The lass of Ecclefechan. 'The MS. incomplete is in the British Museum, entitled Lucky Laing' (R. B.). A copy, with the exception of alterations in the second four lines, is in the Merry Muses marked for the tune Jacky Latin; the following is the first stanza and chorus of a song of uncertain age:—

'Bonie Jockie, braw Jockie,
Bonie Jocky Latin,
Because she wudna gie'm a kiss,
His heart was at the breaking,

Bonie Jockie, braw Jockie,
Bonie Jockie Latin,
His skin was like the silk sae fine,
And mine was like the satin.'

This capital pipe tune, as Jack Latin, is in the Caledonian Pocket Companion, c. 1759, xii. 6; in M^cGibbon's Scots Tunes, 1768, 110; and M^eLean's Scots Tunes, c. 1772, 27. It is still a favourite in Northumberland, where it is known as Jacky Leyton. The English tune Jack a Lent, in Playford's Dancing Master, 1670, has no resemblance to the present air, but it is also a pipe melody. The earliest known ballad of Jack of Lent was written in 1625 to welcome Queen Henrietta Maria. A copy is in Choyce Drollery, 1656, 20. In early times Jack a Lent was a stuffed puppet. The origin of the effigy is obscure, but most likely it was set up in ridicule of the monks. The game survives in the present day as Aunt Sally.

No. 201. Last May a braw wooer. Thomson's Scotish Airs, 1799, 52. 'Written for this work by Robert Burns.'—Air, The Lothian Lassie (Scots Musical Museum, 1803, No. 522). A MS. is in the Thomson collection. Burns has hit off in a ludicrous and veracious manner a particular trait of the Scottish character. The apparent coldness of the people is effected by a simulated repression of the affections. No one has yet undertaken a psychological criticism of the Scot on historical principles. The sober dour Scot has strong human sympathies, but the spring is deep, and an earthquake is sometimes required to make them flow. The style of the present song is original; there were verses on the same subject, not devoid of merit, but much inferior to those of Burns. The first stanza of The Lothian Lassie begins as follows:—

'The Queen o' the Lothians cam cruisin to Fife,
Fal de ral, lal de ral, lairo,
To see gin a wooer wad tak her for life,
Sing hey fal de ral,' &c.

A wooer does turn up, but he is bashful, and cannot muster sufficient courage to speak to Jenny. He solicits an aunt of the fair one to be the go-between, and she, with a natural faculty for matchmaking, soon arranges the business. When Jenny appears the swain loses courage, runs away, but is brought forcibly back still blushing. Jenny being a person of considerable perspicuity, thinks the best way is to accept the offer promptly, lest the lover after consideration should change his mind.

'The question was spier'd, and the bargain was struck
The neighbours cam in, and wished them good luck.'

Before forwarding Last May a braw wooer Burns sent to Thomson in May or June, 1795, The Lothian Lassie, with a letter, saying: 'The song is well known, but was never in notes before. The first part is the old tune. It is a great favourite of mine. I think it would make a fine Andante ballad.' Here Burns refers to the music. The immediate success of the song published by Thomson caused Johnson to insert it in the Museum, 1803, No. 522, with some alterations for the worse which Stenhouse pretended were authorized by Burns. Whether or not he sent to Johnson a copy of the words of Last May a braw wooer, it is certain from a MS. which I have seen, that he furnished Johnson through Clarke with a copy of the tune, which was first printed with his words in 1799. Some parts of the air have a strong resemblance to Kellyburn braes, No. 331 infra.

No. 202. Wantonness for evermair. Scots Musical Museum, 1796, No. 422; Centenary edition, 1807, iii. 154. 'This bagatelle was written and communicated by Burns to the Museum' (Stenhouse, Illustrations, p. 379).

This excellent melody, with the precise title of the first line of the verses, is in Aird's Airs, 1788, iii. No. 443, and the title indicates that a song existed before Burns wrote his stanza, if it is not a corrected verse of the song itself. Wantonness was a favourite character with the Scottish poets, Dunbar, Lindsay, and Gavin Douglas, in their dramas and interludes of the early part of the sixteenth century.

No. 203. The robin cam to the wren's nest. Scots Musical Museum, 1796, No. 406, entitled The wren's nest (Scott-Douglas edition, 1877, iii. 296).

The original of this stanza is a nursery rhyme long known in the west of Scotland. On the Museum MS. Clarke, the musical editor, wrote, 'The tune is only a bad set of Johnny's grey brecks. I took it down from Mrs. Burns's singing. There are more words I believe. You must apply to Burns'; to which Johnson, the publisher, replied, 'there are no more words' (Stenhouse, Illustrations, p. 365). The following verses are the last stanzas of a song in Herd's Scottish Songs, 1776, ii. 167:—

'Now in there came my Lady WREN, With mony a sigh and a groan; O what care I for a' the lads, If my wee lad be gone?	'Then ROBIN tairned him round about, E'en like a little king: Go, pack ye out at my chamber door, Ye little cutty quean.'
---	--

The wren, for some unknown reason, has been long known in Scottish poetry. In the fifteenth century a popular poem was entitled How the wren cam out of Ailsa. Gavin Douglas in the Palace of Honour, written in 1501, enumerates some tales and ballads then current. Thus:—

'I saw Rauf Colyear with his thrawin brow,
Craibit John the Keif, and auld Cowkelbie's sow;
And how the wran came out of Ailssay
And Piers Plewman that made his workmen fow;
Greit Gowmakmorne and Fyn Makowl, and how
They suld be goddis in Ireland as they say;
Then saw I Maitland upon auld Beird Gray;
Robene Hude, and Gilbert with the white hand,
How Hay of Naughtan flew in Madin land.'

(Douglas's Works, 1874, i. 65.)

The tune has no history, and can be compared with No. 67 supra.

*No. 204. Lassie, lend me your braw hemp-heckle. 'The Bob o' Dunblane remains to be added in your fifth volume. Take it from the Orpheus Caledonius: if you have not this book I will send you a reading of it. At the end of this set (Ramsay's) let the old words follow' (Burns to Johnson, 1795). In Gray's MS. Lists Burns wrote against the title of the song 'Mr. Burns's old words.' The following note is not in the Interleaved Museum as quoted in Cromek's Reliques, 1808, 305, and it is given with reservation: 'Ramsay, as usual, has modernised this song. The original, which I learned on the spot from my old hostess in the principal inn there (Dunblane), is,' as in the text. Neither the tune nor the 'old' words of Burns were inserted in the Museum, and this is the first time both have been brought together. Ramsay's words, referred to by Burns, are in his Miscellany, 1724, reprinted in Herd's Scots Songs, 1769, 42: and with the tune, in the Orpheus Caledonius, 1725, No. 45, which is not the same as Lord Bredalbane's March often confused with it, for which see Song No. 170. With the exception of the first two lines, Burns's verses are different from the song in the Orpheus.

No. 205. My daddie was a fiddler fine. Scots Musical Museum, 1796, No. 457; Centenary Burns, 1897, iii. 166. This is the chorus, and first of three stanzas in the Merry Muses, of a clever and witty song revised by Burns which cannot be further quoted.

The tune entitled Stumpie is in Aird's Airs, 1782, ii. No. 44. The same subject, as near as possible, is Lady Betty Wemyss' Reel, in Bremner's Reels, 1757, 21. Stenhouse says it was formerly called Jocky has gotten a wife, but I cannot find the music under this name. Mr. Glen states that it is titled Butter'd pease in Walsh's Caledonian Country Dances, c. 1734.

No. 206. There's news, lasses, news. Scots Musical Museum, 1803, No. 589, 'Written for this work by Robert Burns.' Scott-Douglas edition, iii. 298. An old song remodelled, and only remarkable in the last stanza for a vernacular description of the duties of a ploughman in the south of Scotland. The original is a fragment of eight lines in Herd's MS., beginning:—

‘Newes, lasses, newes,
Gude newes I hae to tell;
There's a boat fu' o' young men
Come to our town to sell.’

The title of the tune in Burns's hand is in the Gray MS. The first half is the first subject of Captain Mackenzie's Reel in Stewart's Reels, 1762, 36. The air was sung to a metrical satire on the ladies of Edinburgh, entitled The vain guidwife, printed in Sharpe's Ballad Book, 1824.

*No. 207. O, Galloway Tam cam here to woo. Scots Musical Museum, 1792, No. 325 and marked in Law's MS. ‘Mr. Burns's old words,’ who intended the fragment to precede one of Dr. Blacklock's songs for the Museum for the same tune. In 1810 Cromeck printed the lines with an additional stanza of palpable modern construction, which, however, he alleged to be old and part of the song.

The following Note by Robert Riddell is in the Interleaved Museum, and it is not in Burns's handwriting as pretended by Cromeck: ‘I have seen an interlude (acted at a wedding) to this tune called The wooing of the maiden. These entertainments are now much worn out in this part of Scotland. Two are still retained in Nithsdale, viz.: Silly pure auld Glenae, and this one, The wooing of the maiden: (Reliques, 1808, 295). The tune is in Atkinson's MS., 1694, and Oswald's Companion, 1754, vi. 25. In a common measure O'er the hills and far away resembles it.

*No. 208. The Collier has a dochter. This fragment of eight lines is in the Interleaved Museum, and may be entitled in his own way ‘Mr. Burns's old words.’ The note of Burns is correctly quoted by Cromeck in Reliques, 219:— ‘The first half stanza is much older than the days of Ramsay’ whose song is in his Miscellany, 1724; and with the tune in Johnson's Museum, 1787, No. 47.

Burns wrote two original songs for The Collier's bonie lassie, for which see Nos. 44 and 232.

IV. CONNUBIAL.

No. 209. First when Maggie was my care. Scots Musical Museum, 1790, No. 249, signed X., entitled Whistle o'er the lave o't. ‘Mr. Burns's old words’ (Law's MS. List). Burns got the title of this from a song of the seventeenth century. The lords of creation in Scotland were no better than their sex elsewhere. They were never so good as to be able to dispense with the discipline of married life. It has not been ascertained to whom Burns referred in this song. In Herd's Scots Songs, 1769, 316, are the two following stanzas for the tune:—

‘My mither sent me to the well,
She had better gane hersell,
I got the thing I dare nae tell,
Whistle o'er the lave o't.

‘My mither sent me to the sea,
For to gather mussels three;
A sailor lad fell in wi' me,—
Whistle o'er the lave o't.’

This is styled one of the malignant songs in Scotch Presbyterian Eloquence of the seventeenth century.

The tune Whistle over the lave o't is in Bremner's Reels, 1759, 56. It varies a little from the copy in the Museum. It is also in the Caledonian Pocket Companion, 1759, xii. 15. C. Kirkpatrick Sharpe incorrectly stated that Dance Katie

Peace, I'm angrie now, now; Peace, I'm angrie now,
 Peace I'm angrie at the hert, and knows not what to doe,
 Wyfes can faine and wyfes can flatter: have I not hitt them now,
 When once they beynn they still do clatter: & soe doeth my wyf too.
 Wyfes are good and wyfes are bad: have I not, etc.
 Wyfes can mak their husbands mad: & so doe, etc.
 Wyfes can sport and wyfes can play: have I not, etc.
 And with little work passe over the day: & so, etc.
 Wyfes hes many fine words & looks: have I not, etc.
 And draw sillie men on folies hooks: and soe, etc.
 Wyfes will not their meeting misse: have I not, etc.
 A cup of sack they can well kisse: and so, etc.
 Wyfes can dance and wyfes can lowp: have I not, etc.
 Wyfes can toome the full wyne stowp: and soe, etc.
 Wyfes can ban and wyfes can curse: have I not, etc.
 Wyfes can toome their husbands purse: and so, etc.
 Wyfes can flyte and wyfes can scold: have I not, etc.
 Wyfes of ther toungs they have no hold: and none has myne, etc.
 Wyfes they'r good than at no tym: neither is my wyf now;
 Except it be in drinking wyn: and so is my wyf too.
 Some they are right needfull evils: so is my wyfe now;
 Wyfes are nothing elss but divles: and so my wyf too.
 Now of my song I make ane end: etc.
 All such wyfs to the divell I send: amongst them my wyf too.
 Peace I'm angrie now, now: Peace I'm angrie now,
 Peace I'm angrie at the hert, and cannot tell qt to dow.'

A somewhat licentious parody on the above is in Merry Drollerie, 1670, 302, which is reprinted in Durfeys Pills, 1719, iv. 181. Neither the verses nor the tune have any reference to John come kiss me now.

The Dublin MS. lettered Airs and Sonnets is curiously enough a part of Wood's Scottish MSS. of Psalms and Hymn Tunes, 1566—1578, and it contains the earliest specimen of secular music written in Scotland. According to David Laing the secular songs and music are, however, not earlier than 1620. The sacred music, or Wood's portion in the Dublin volume, bears the title: "This is the fyft Buke addit to the four psalme Bukkis for songs of four or fyve pairtis . . . 1569," and ends on page 33. Then follows a considerable number of Airs and Sonnets—'Which are all notted heir with the Tennor or common pairt they are sung with.'

As bearing on the nationality of the air, we have the curious fact that there was a song popular in Scotland about 1560, probably that above quoted, and a fragment traditionally handed down and printed in 1769, while in England, the tune never had words attached to it. William Chappell in Popular Music, p. 147, could not find words, and printed with the air a stanza from the Godlie Ballads. The old form of the music consisted of one measure; the second part was added about the end of the seventeenth century. The tune in our text is from the seventh edition, 1674, of Playford's Introduction to the Skill of Musick, London, first printed in 1654. The music is also in Blaikie's MS. 1692; Sinkler's MS. 1710; Oswald's Companion, 1754, vi. 2; M^cGibbon's Scots Tunes, 1768, iv. 94; and printed for the first time with words in the Scots Musical Museum, 1792, No. 305. Burns directed the publisher for the music to M^cGibbon's Collection.

No. 211. There was a wife wonn'd in Cockpen. Scots Musical Museum, 1803, No. 539, signed 'B,' entitled Scroggam. 'Written for this work by Robert Burns,' to preserve the melody of an old song. Stenhouse records 'There is another, and a very old song, to the same air, but it is quite inadmissible.' I can find no record of the very old song with the rhythm. The ale-wife of Cockpen is a good match for the laird of Song No. 191. He may have been a customer, and indulged himself in singing at her board his favourite song of Brose and butter.

I have not found the tune Scroggam before its appearance in the Museum. It is not composed on the lines of the old Scottish scales, the major sixths and sevenths of the modern minor scale being rarely, if at all, used in antique, Scottish melodies.

No. 212. John Anderson my jo, John. Scots Musical Museum, 1790, No. 260, signed 'B.' In MS. List—'Mr. Burns's old words,' and in the Interleaved Museum, 'This Song is mine.' Thomson's Scottish Airs, 1799, 51, with additional spurious stanzas, first printed in Brash and Reid's Chap-book, 1796. Dr. Currie, in Works, 1800, iv. 302, published the correct words and warned the public against the spurious stanzas, but in many editions of Burns they are still inserted as part of the original song.

In Percy's Reliques, 1765, are printed two curious stanzas, entitled John Anderson my jo.—A Scottish song. The verses are in the form of a dialogue between a man and a woman, and the matter is more provocative of family discord than connubial bliss. The woman begins:—

' John Anderson my jo, cum in as ye gae bye, and ye sall get a sheip's heid weel baken in a pye;
Weel baken in a pye, and the haggis in a pat;
John Anderson my jo, cum in, and ze's get that.'

She informs the man on inquiry that she has five bairns, but three of them are not the guidman's. In subsequent editions of Percy's Reliques, the five bairns are turned into seven—two legitimate, and five illegitimate—most likely to round off the pretty invention that the verses are an allegory on the Romish sacraments. The authority for the verses was not given. In the Bishop's preface to his fourth edition it is said 'where any variation occurs from the former impression it will be understood to have been given on the authority of that MS.' This statement caused an infinity of trouble until it was discovered that very many pieces in the Reliques, including John Anderson my jo, are not in the MS. at all. The invention of the sacramental allegory gave an historical reputation to a tradition which has continued to circulate ever since. Percy probably knew Haile's specimens of the Gude and Godlie Ballads, 1765; but no song like John Anderson my jo is there, nor in the complete collection since published. Percy is responsible for saying that the song is as old as the Reformation, and that his verses are a satire on the Church of Rome. It may be so, but there is no historical evidence. I may here remark that the description 'old words' which Burns gave to many of his songs was very elastic. In the case of John Anderson my jo he adopted only the title or first line of the song, the rest is entirely original; and the subject has nothing in common with the verses 'sung by the choice spirits' of the eighteenth century. In that curious surreptitious small volume known as the Merry Muses is the 'old' song beginning:—

' John Anderson my jo, John,
I wonder what you mean,
To lie sae lang i' the mornin
And sit sae late at e'en ?

Ye'll blear a' your een, John,
And why do ye so ?
Come sooner to your bed at e'en
John Anderson, my jo.'

The complete song in Richardson's Masque, c. 1770, 292, cannot be repeated here. I know of no other Scottish song than this one answering to the title. For further light on the subject, see Note 224. Other three songs marked for the tune are in the Merry Muses, one in the Tea-Table Miscellany, 1724, and another beginning When I was a wec thing, in Herd's Scottish Songs, 1776, ii. 213; but none of them have any reference to John Anderson my jo. That a much earlier song did exist is proved from the music books.

The tune entitled John Anderson my jo is in the Skene MS. c. 1630; also with Ramsay's words in Watts's Musical Miscellany, 1731, vi. 202; Oswald's Companion, 1752, iv. 22; and Aird's Airs, 1782, ii. No. 167.

The melody of two English songs—Paul's Steeple and I am the Duke of Norfolk—belonging to the latter half of the sixteenth century is claimed to be the original of John Anderson my jo, but the music in English collections is not found earlier than the Dancing Master, 1651. The following is taken from a translation of the Skene MS.

For further information on the English melody see Chappell's Popular Music, p. 117.

It is necessary to enter a warning against the following remark on John Anderson my jo by Bishop Percy in his Reliques. 'It is a received tradition in Scotland that at the time of the Reformation ridiculous and obscene songs were composed to be sung by the rabble to the tunes of the most favourite hymns in the Latin Service. Green Sleeves and pudding pies is said to have been one of these metamorphosed hymns; Maggy Lauder was another; John Anderson my jo was a third. The original music of all these burlesque sonnets was very fine.' This is a most confused and misleading statement. There is not an example of a hymn tune or a tune 'of the most favourite hymns in the Latin Service' to be found in Scotland in connexion with a secular song. The three titles named are secular airs, and none are known to have been used for the purpose named. It is ridiculous to speak of the very fine original music of these 'sonnets' in the past tense. All were very popular and well known in Percy's time, and they are well known now as secular folk tunes with secular words. What was done in Scotland was to imitate every European country, including England. Religious parodies of secular songs were written for popular secular airs, and these 'sangs,' mixed up with hymns and psalms, are preserved in the collection known as The Gude and Godlie Ballads. In the whole song and dance music of Scotland only one melody called Cumnock Psalms (see No. 260, and that was collected by Burns from tradition) can by any stretch of the imagination have any connexion with the church tunes. The offensive epithet applied by Percy to the songs is not warranted. 'The paipe that pagane full of pryde,' which casts spirited ridicule on the morals of the priests, is the most plain spoken, but scarcely deserves the epithet.

No. 213. Willie Wastle dwalt on Tweed. Scots Musical Museum, 1792, No. 376, signed 'B,' entitled Sic a wife as Willie had. The MS. is in the British Museum. The verses are unrivalled as a vernacular pen and ink portrait of one who had not a single point of physical beauty to recommend her. A recent writer in the public press identifies Linkumoddie as five and a half miles from Broughton on the road to Tweedsmuir and Moffat. On the opposite bank of the Tweed, where a hill stream called Logan Water runs into the Tweed, stood a thatched cottage called Linkumdoddie, which disappeared forty years ago. At the end of the eighteenth century a weaver called Gideon Thomson lived there, but nothing is known of his wife. This story has not been verified, but it may be remarked that Burns knew the locality, and more than once stayed at the Crook Inn, a few miles distant from where Linkumdoddie is said to have stood.

The fragment of a popular rhyme of the seventeenth century is quoted in Scotch Presbyterian Eloquence Display'd, 1694. A preacher at Linton is represented as saying 'Our bishops thought they were very secure this long time, like

Willie Willie Wastle, I am in my castle;
A' the dogs in the town, dare not ding me down.'

Willie Wastle's Castle is the ancient castle of Home, situated in the North-East corner of Roxburghshire. Cromwell besieged and destroyed it. The owner challenged the Protector to do his worst, and he did it effectually.

The tune was first printed in the Museum with Burns's song. A song and tune Sike a wife as Willy had is in 180 Loyal Songs, 1685, 320; the music is also in Atkinson's MS. 1694 and elsewhere, but it has no resemblance to that here printed. The tune of Burns's song is a specimen of a numerous class of Scottish folk music which puzzles the composer to harmonize.

No. 214. There's sax eggs in the pan, gudeman. Scots Musical Museum, 1796, No. 409. This MS. is in the British Museum. A version in Herd's Scots Songs, 1769, 316, has four stanzas and a chorus. The first and second stanzas of Burns are near copies from Herd, the chorus is somewhat altered, and the 'sheephead' stanza is much altered. 'Mr. B. gave the old words': (Law's MS. List).

For information on the tune, see Song No. 249. Burns made a note on his manuscript that the chorus was to be sung to the first part of the tune, as in the text.

No. 215. I bought my wife a stane o' lint. Scots Musical Museum, 1792, No. 350, entitled The weary pund o' tow. The MS. is in the British Museum. It is the model of a song known by the name of its tune. Marriage as a release from work is described by George Colman the younger in one of his comedies. The mistress of a servant who is careless, asks her how she expects to get a character when she is so lazy, and receives the snappish reply 'Character! I don't want a character; I am going to be married.' A black letter ballad entitled The Cruell Shrow or the patient man's woe, printed by M.P. for Henry Gosson about 1665, describes the life of a suffering husband. The last stanza contains a generous wish and offer:—

'O that some harmless honest man,
Whom death did so befriend,
To take his wife from off his hand,
His sorrows for to end,
Would change with me to rid my care,
And take my wife alive,
For his dead wife, unto his share!
Then I would hope to thrive.'

A song The pund of tow—incomplete—in The Charmer, 1782, i. 339, is also in a Chap-book by J. Jennings, Fleet Street. The following is the middle stanza in The Charmer:—

'But if your wife and my wife were in a boat thegither,
And yon honest man's wife were in to steer the rither;
And if the boat were bottomless, and seven mile to row,
I think my wife would ne'er come back to spin her pound of tow.'

The tune is in Oswald's Companion, c. 1756, viii. 4. In the Museum, with Burns's song, it is directed to be sung very slow.

No. 216. The bairns gat out wi' an unco shout. Scots Musical Museum, 1792, No. 396, signed 'B,' entitled The deuks dang o'er my daddie. The MS. is in the British Museum with directions by Burns where the tune is to be found. One of the humorous connubial songs for which Scotland is distinguished. The dialogue sparkles with fun. The hale and active wife has a profound disrespect for her rheumatic 'fushionless' old husband, whose children even deride him. A fragment from a MS. once in the possession of the late C. K. Sharpe is subjoined :—

'The nine pint bicker's fa'n aff the bink,
And broken the ten-pint cannie, O,
The wife and her kimmers sat down
to drink,
But ne'er a drap gae the guidman-
nie, O;

The bairns they a' set up a shout,
The deuks dang o'er my daddie, O;
"There's no muckle matter" quo' the guidwife
"He's ay been a daidlin bodie, O."

The tune first printed in Playford's Dancing Master, 1670, is English; the title Buff Coat indicates a political origin in the Restoration period or earlier, for Fletcher, in The Knight of Malta, refers to a song as The soldier has no fellow, which was sung to the tune. Early in the seventeenth century the defensive armour of the soldier was a buff leather jerkin thick enough to protect the body from sword cuts. This continued to be the uniform during the reigns of Charles I and II, and the Commonwealth. No version exists of The soldier has no fellow (or The buff coat has no fellow); but various ballads on other subjects are marked to be sung to Buff coat, and during the eighteenth century the tune was introduced into several operas. The Scots tune The deuks dang o'er my daddie differs in detail from Buff coat, but both are practically the same. The music entitled The buff coat has no fellow is in Atkinson's MS. 1694, and as the Deukes dang over my daddie in Oswald's Curious Collection Scots Tunes, 1740, 4; in his Companion, 1743, i. 1; McGibbon's Scots Tunes, 1755, 7; and Aird's Airs, 1782, i. No. 63.

No. 217. Husband, husband, cease your strife. Thomson's Scottish Airs, 1799, 62, 'Written for this Work by Robert Burns.' The MS. is in the Thomson collection. An imperfect copy is in the British Museum. My spouse Nancy sent in December, 1793, is an English version of My jo Janet, which is a delightful humorous dialogue, conducted in the most courteous manner between a parsimonious husband and a vain young wife who dresses to attract the attention of the public. Janet of the old song and the Nancy of Burns are different characters. The latter is a termagant requiring physical force argument. My jo Janet is in the Tea-Table Miscellany, 1724, and Herd's Scots Songs, 1769, 132. The first stanza is :—

'Sweet Sir, for your courtesie,
When you come by the Bass then,
For the love ye bear to me,
Buy me a keeking-glass then.
"Keek into the draw-well,
Janet, Janet, and there ye'll see your bonny sel
My jo Janet."

The rest can be seen in any good collection of Scottish Songs. Wanting the last stanza it is in Johnson's Museum, 1788, No. 111. In the Interleaved Museum Burns says 'Johnson the publisher, with a foolish delicacy, refused to insert the last stanza of this humorous ballad.' A broadside of the seventeenth century in the British Museum, entitled Jenny, Jenny; or the false-hearted knight, obviously an English copy of the Scots original, relates the same incidents as those of My jo Janet. There are at least two other black letter ballads to the tune Jenny, Jenny. One, The kind-hearted Maiden's Resolution; and the other The Faithful Young Man's answer to the kind-hearted Maiden's Resolution; both printed for I. Clarke at the Harp and Bible, in West Smithfield, between the years 1666 and 1684.

The primitive melody is in the Straloch MS., 1627-29, entitled The old man; and, wanting the second part, as Long er onie old man, in the Skene MS. c. 1630. The Leyden MS. c. 1692, contains another form called Kobin and Janet. The tune is in Oswald's Companion, 1751, iii. 16; Mc'Gibbon's Scots Tunes, 1755, 11; and with the verses of My jo Janet in the Orpheus Caledonius, 1733, No. 36; the Perth Musical Miscellany, 1786, 159; Scots Musical Museum, 1788, No. 111, and Ritson's Scotish Songs, 1794, i. 173.

No. 218. I never saw a fairer. Currie, Works, iv. 14, entitled My Wife's a winsome wee thing, which was written for George Thomson and described to him in a letter Nov. 8, 1792, as 'a few lines smooth and pretty,' and he goes on 'If you mean, my dear Sir, that all the songs in your collection shall be poetry of the first merit, I am afraid you will find difficulty in the undertaking more than you are aware of.' Thomson did not publish the song in Scotish Airs, 1818, but he inserted it in his Select Melodies, 1825, vi. 44, in twenty-four lines, four being by Burns, and twenty by himself! For the tune, see No. 220.

No. 219. O, that I had ne'er been married. Scots Musical Museum, 1803, No. 593. 'Corrected by R. Burns.' 'Mr. B. gave the old words' (Law's MS. List). The chief portion of a distracting letter to Mrs. Dunlop dated 15th December, 1793, states the reason of Burns's attention to the present song. The following is an extract: 'These four months, a sweet little girl, my youngest child, has been so ill, that every day, a week or less threatened to terminate her existence. There had much need be many pleasures annexed to the state of husband and father, for God knows they have many peculiar cares. I see a train of helpless little folk; me and my exertions all their stay; and on what a brittle thread does the life of man hang! If I am nipt off at the command of fate; even in all the vigour of manhood as I am, such things happen every day—Gracious God! what would become of my little flock! 'Tis here that I envy your people of fortune. A father on his deathbed, taking an everlasting leave of his children, has indeed woes enough; but the man of competent fortune leaves his sons and daughters independence and friends; while I—but I shall run distracted if I think any longer on the subject! To leave off talking of the matter so gravely, I shall sing with the old ballad O that I had ne'er been married.' He then quotes the first stanza of the present song. The only part written by Burns is the last stanza beginning 'Waefu' want and hunger fly me.' The first stanza and chorus are in the Herd MS.

The tune entitled Three Crowdys in a day is in Atkinson's MS., 1694: the editor of the Museum, ignoring the sentiment of Burns's song, cruelly marks the music to be sung 'a little lively,' presumably on the principle of driving away dull care.

*No. 220. She play'd the loon or she was married. Scots Musical Museum, 1790, No. 217. Burns's holograph in the Law MS. is 'Mr. Burns's old words.' The first eight lines are a fragment in Herd's Scotish Songs, 1776, ii. 230, the last eight are the work of Burns. The whole song as here printed is in the Merry Muses. For the dainty verses which Burns wrote for Thomson to the tune, see No. 218. The music in our text is an early and good set from Stewart's Reels, 1762, 30. The tune was first printed in Original Scotch Tunes, 1700, entitled Bride Next, and with the present title in Caledonian Pocket Companion, 1754, vi. 12; and Aird's Airs, 1782, i. No. 41.

No. 221. On peace an' rest my mind was bent. Scots Musical Museum, 1803, No. 532. 'Written for this work by Robert Burns.' 'Mr. B's old words' (Law's MS. List). The MS. is in Chicago. Stenhouse refers to an old song My wife she dang me, but gives no particulars. Burns had no experience of such a wife as is suggested in these verses: his humorous connubial songs are uniformly excellent. The class is very largely represented in the vernacular songs of Scotland, and indicates that the women could hold their own against the lords of creation. Hector Boece, the Scottish historian of the fifteenth century, says that in ancient times they were nearly as strong as the men, and maidens and wives 'yeid als weile to battle as the men' (went as well to battle as the men). In Motherwell's Burns, 1834, iii. 29, an obviously modern song is quoted, which need not be regarded. The tune My wife she dang me is in Oswald's Companion, 1754, vi. 4; and M^cGibbon's Scots Tunes, 1755, 28. It is a characteristic melody probably of the seventeenth century.

No. 222. I coft a stane o' haslock woo'. Scots Musical Museum, 1796, No. 437, signed 'Z,' entitled The cardin o't. &c. The MS. of this fragment is in the British Museum. The 'haslock woo' named in the first line is the wool on the throat or hals of the sheep, from which the finest and softest yarn is made. The second stanza is a reminiscence of John Anderson my jo.

The tune The cardin o't, or Salt fish and dumplings, is a smooth flowing melody, well worth preservation. It is in Sinkler's MS., 1710, entitled Queensbury's Scots measure; and in Aird's Airs, 1788, iii. No. 487.

No. 223. The cooper o' Cuddie came here awa. Scots Musical Museum, 1796, No. 431, entitled The couper o' Cuddy. The MS. is in the British Museum. A version substantially the same is in the Merry Muses. At the bottom of the musical MS. for the printer Burns has written 'This tune is to be met with everywhere.' Bab at the bowster is an old favourite dance, and never omitted at penny weddings and other rustic balls. As practised in the West of Scotland it was rather a lengthy function. A row of men and a row of women faced each other, with one in the middle carrying a bolster. The company sang the refrain:—

'Wha learnt you to dance, you to dance, you to dance,
Wha learnt you to dance, Bab at the bowster, brawly.'

At the close of the stanza, the holder of the bolster, laid it at the feet of one of the opposite sex, and then both knelt and kissed. The process was repeated, until all had participated, or until the company tired of the game. Burns, in a letter dated June 30, 1787, describes a ball he was at in the Highlands, where among others Bab at the bowster was danced with enthusiasm. This form of salutation was common in England to the end of the sixteenth century and later, when the gentlemen kissed the ladies on entering a room. Erasmus does not give it a place in his satire The Praise of Folly, but he was much impressed with the custom, which he could not sufficiently praise, and on which Captain Topham, a competent critic, has remarked that it says much for the superior beauty of English women who could fire the lifeless soul of a Dutchman. The custom went out earlier in England than in Scotland, where it only began to decline in the last quarter of the eighteenth century. It still survives as 'kiss in the ring' in 'unfashionable society.'

In the time of Burns the passion for dancing was at its height in Scotland. Captain Topham, in his Letters from Edinburgh, 1775, describes an upper and a middle class ball, where the company danced nothing but reels and strathspeys. They sat unmoved at most of the English country dances, but the moment a reel was played, they jumped up as if they had been bitten by a tarantula. The gravest men in Edinburgh, with the exception of the ministers, were as fond of dancing as the Scottish rustics of the day, and danced not for recreation, but for the sake of dancing.

The Tune is in the Skene MS. c. 1630, entitled Who learned you to dance and a towdle; as Country Bumpkin, in Stewart's Reels, c. 1768, 71; and as

Bab at the bowster, in Aird's Airs, 1782, i. No. 119. It was sung in at least five English operas of the eighteenth century, and known in England as A country bumpkin from one of the opera songs beginning:—

'A country bumpkin who trees did grub,
A vicar that used the pulpit to drub,
And two or three more, o'er a stoup of strong bub,
Late met on a jolly occasion.'

The Cushion dance, precisely that described above, was fashionable and popular in England in the reign of Queen Elizabeth: every class from the Court downwards favoured it. John Selden (1584-1664), in Table Talk, gives a ludicrous account of the English dancing propensities. 'The Court of England is much altered. At a solemn dancing, first you had the grave measures, then the Corrantos and the Galliards, and this is kept up with ceremony, at length, to Trenchmore and the Cushion-Dance, and then all the company dance, Lord and groom, Lady and kitchen-maid, no distinction. So in our Court in Queen Elizabeth's time gravity and state were kept up. In king James's time things were pretty well. But in King Charles's time, there has been nothing but Trenchmore and the Cushion Dance, omnium gatherum, tolly polly, hoite cum toite.' Taylor, the water poet, called the cushion dance a provocative dance, for he before whom the cushion was placed was to kneel and salute the lady. A full description can be seen in Chappell's Popular Music, p. 154.

The music of the English Cushion Dance is different from the Scottish tune. The earliest printed copy is entitled Galliarde Anglaise in a Dutch music book, Amsterdam, 1615. The following is from Nederlandsche Gedeck-Clanck, 1626, entitled:—

Galliarde Suit Margriet.

No. 224. Guide'en to you, kimmer. Scots Musical Museum, 1803, No. 523, signed 'B' and marked 'corrected by Burns.' Centenary edit. 1897, iii. 189. In Gray's MS. Lists 'The music with Mr. Clarke.' In Law's MS. 'Mr. Burns's old words.' A part of the verses is a repetition, and probably the original, of the fragment quoted by Percy (see Notes to No. 212). Is it not likely that the fourth and fifth stanzas of We're a' noddin are the original of Percy's lines, and that the general Johny became the particular John Anderson? Stenhouse circulated Percy's statement in his Illustrations. The second and last stanzas in the text are in the Herd MS. 70; the rest were added by Burns or obtained from tradition. In Sharpe's Ballad Book, 1823, there is an incoherent set of verses of the close of the eighteenth century beginning 'Bide a wee, woman, and gie'st a' out', for the tune which probably originated in the street and circulated viva voce until put in the Museum.

*No. 225. There's cauld kail in Aberdeen. The two stanzas and chorus in the text are in the Interleaved Museum where Burns states they are 'the old verses.' They are not found elsewhere, and he doubtless mended them. For an account of the tune Cauld Kail, see notes to Nos. 102 and 104.

V. BACCHANALIAN AND SOCIAL.

No. 226. The deil cam fiddlin thro' the town. Scots Musical Museum, 1792, No. 399, entitled, The deil's awa wi' the exciseman. Enclosed in an undated letter addressed to J. Leven, General Supervisor of the Excise, and introduced as follows: 'Mr. Mitchell mentioned to you a ballad, which I composed and sung at one of his excise dinners: here it is—The Deil's awa wi' the exciseman, Tune Madame Cossy. If you honor my ballad by making it one of your charming bon vivant effusions, it will secure it undoubted celebrity.' Lockhart, in his Life of Burns, 1828, relates the origin of the song, which he received from an Excise officer, to the effect that Burns was left on the Solway shore to watch the movements of the crew of a stranded smuggler, while his companion went for assistance to board the vessel. Burns got tired tramping the wet sands, and exercised himself in writing The deil's awa wi' the exciseman.

The tune Madam Cossy I conjecture to be The Quaker's Wife, see No. 40; or it may be another name for that here reprinted from the Museum, where the song was first published under Burns's direction. It is a good English melody entitled The hemp-dresser in Aird's Airs, ii. No. 105, and without a title in the Caledonian Pocket Companion, c. 1756, viii. 21. It is in every edition of Playford's Dancing Master from the first issue in 1651. In Durfey's Pills, 1719, i. 320, it is set to a song The sun had loos'd his weary team.

No. 227. Landlady, count the lawin. Scots Musical Museum, 1788, No. 170, entitled, Hey tutti, taiti. The MS. is in the British Museum. An early Jacobite song of the beginning of the eighteenth century is on the same page of Johnson's Museum. This political song is written with considerable vigour, one of the stanzas being as follows:—

' When you hear the trumpet-sounds Tuttie taitie to the drum; Up your swords, and down your guns, And to the louns again.		Chos. Fill up your bumpers high, We'll drink a' your barrels dry, Out upon them, fy! fy! That winna do't again.'
--	--	--

The tune, slightly varied, is that for which Burns wrote Scots wha hae—see Song No. 255.

No. 228. A' the lads o' Thornie-bank. Scots Musical Museum, 1788, No. 156 b, signed 'Z.' Tune Ruffian's rant. The MS. is in the British Museum. Buckie is an important fishing village between Castle Gordon and Cullen. Burns must have passed through Buckie on September 7, 1787, for he slept at Cullen the same night, and we know that he dined on that day with the Duke of Gordon. The song is probably a reminiscence of a call for refreshment at the Inn kept by 'Lady Onlie, honest lucky, who brew'd good ale at the shore o' Bucky.'

For the tune, see No. 239.

No. 229. I sing of a whistle, a whistle of worth. Scots Musical Museum, 1792, No. 314, entitled The Whistle. Burns has described the origin of the contest for the whistle, and whether true or not there can be no doubt that our Scandinavian ancestors were deep drinkers. Poetry and song were the magic of Odin; beer was the ambrosial liquor. Regner Lodbrog, in his Dying Ode, expresses his opinion of the juice of the malt, and in the last stanza says: 'Odin hath sent his goddesses to conduct me to his palace. I am going to be placed in the highest seat, there to quaff goblets of beer with the gods.'

The whistle, according to Burns's 'authentic' history, was brought to Scotland by a gigantic Dane who followed Anne, Princess of Denmark, whom James VI married. The Dane challenged any one to drink with him, the condition being that the man who sat longest at the table should become the owner of the Ca' or whistle. The ancestor of Sir Robert Lowrie of Maxwelton won the trophy after a three days and nights' contest, and blew the whistle over the prostrate Scandinavian. A descendant of Sir Robert Lowrie lost the trophy, which passed into the possession of Walter Riddell of Glenriddell, and remained in the family. The contest celebrated by Burns took place on Friday October 16, 1789, between Robert Riddell brother of the holder, Sir Robert Lowrie of Maxwelton, and Alexander Ferguson of Craighdarroch, the latter-named gentleman carrying off the prize, and in a very peculiar way proving the survival of the fittest. It is very unlikely that Burns was present at the contest, although the penultimate stanza of the ballad makes it appear that he was. On the same day he had forwarded two letters to be franked by Sir Robert Lowrie, and said he would send a servant for them in the evening.

The ballad was printed in several newspapers before it appeared in the Museum. Stenhouse says that the tune is the composition of Robert Riddell, one of the competitors, and if so, it is his best tune. It is in the style of an Irish melody, but it is not in any collection prior to the Museum.

No. 230. Ye sons of old Killie, assembled by Willie. Cunningham's edition, 1834. Tune, Over the water to Charlie. Burns was admitted as an honorary member to the Kilmarnock Lodge of Kilwinning Freemasons, on October 26, 1786, when he recited the foregoing verses, and afterwards handed a copy of them to the chairman, Major William Parker.

The tune Over the water to Charlie was composed shortly after the rebellion of 1745, unless it had a previous unrecorded existence. Burns knew it as Irish under the name of Shawnboy; the earliest form is in Johnson's Country Dances, 1748, entitled Pot-stick. It is in Oswald's Companion, 1752, iv. 7, as Over the water to Charlie, and with the same title in Bremner's Reels, 1757, 16; and the Museum, 1788, No. 187. In Aird's Airs, 1782, i. No. 98, it is entitled Marquis of Granby-Shambuy. It was also known by an Irish name Legrum Cush, and it may be the Madam Cossy referred to in No. 226. For tune, see No. 294.

No. 231. It's now the day is dawin. Scots Musical Museum, 1796, No. 442. Stenhouse in Illust., 393, says: 'The four lines in the Museum were hastily penned by Burns at the request of the publisher, who was anxious to have the tune in that work, and the old words could not be discovered.' Burns admired the air and refers to it in a letter to Alex. Cunningham, May 4, 1789, when he thought of writing a song for the three Crochallan members Cruikshank, Dunbar and Cunningham: 'I have a good mind to write verses on you all to the tune Three gude fellows ayont the glen.' No verses are known except those in the text. This spirited and well constructed melody is neglected and almost unknown. It is in M^cGibbon's Scots Tunes, 1746, 18; and Oswald's Companion, 1753, v. 1.

No. 232. Deluded swain, the pleasure. Scottish Airs, 1798, 33. Tune: The Collier's bonie lassie. Currie's Works, 1800, iv. 135. The only information about this sentimental production is a line in the letter to Thomson enclosing the song: 'Then for The Collier's dochter take the following old bacchanal.' No one has discovered any previous song of the kind: the presumption is that Burns had no wish to father it. The tune is noted in songs Nos. 44 and 208.

No. 233. Should auld acquaintance be forgot? (Johnson's set.) From a holograph copy in the Interleaved Museum. Scots Musical Museum, 1796, No. 413, signed 'Z.' Auld lang syne is the best known and most widely spread social song in the Anglo-Saxon language. Without official aid such as has been given by religion to the Old Hundredth, or to God save the King by the State, Auld lang syne has steadily worked its way to the heart of all classes of the nation, and it stands pre-eminent as the most familiar secular song of the English-speaking people throughout the world. In Scotland it slowly supplanted and eventually obliterated Good night, and joy be wi' you a' which for a century and a half had been the dismissory song at festive meetings. It would be difficult to apportion the relative merit of the verse and the air which has contributed to the extraordinary popularity of Auld lang syne. Both are simple and directly emotional. Nine-tenths of the words are monosyllabic; the melody is a Scottish country dance tune, which in the course of half a century of continuous use was gradually divested of superfluous ornament, and was developed into the simplest musical phraseology of the original. A century of increasing fame has put Auld lang syne beyond criticism, and we might as well try to analyse the colour or aroma of a wild flower in order to direct the taste as to make an impression by dissecting the song. The description of Burns has been justified, and it illustrates the power of song so effectively expressed by Andrew Fletcher of Saltoun (1653-1716) nearly two hundred years ago in the following words more often than otherwise quoted incorrectly: 'I said I knew a very wise man so much of Sir Chr—'s sentiment, that he believed if a man were permitted to make all the ballads, he need not care who should make the laws of a nation.' (Account of a Conversation; Edin. 1704.)

A brief and bare statement of the origin of the verse and air may be permitted here, as the history of both are obscure and disputed. As regards the verse Burns is responsible for leading the public astray, and his musical editor George Thomson obscured the source of the air. The words were originally published from the manuscript of Burns in Johnson's Museum at the close of the year 1796, or about six months after the poet died. It is not certain, but it is very probable, that Burns saw the engraved Museum copy of Auld lang syne.

In a letter to Johnson about October, 1793, he says 'as to our Musical Museum, I have better than a dozen songs by me for the fifth volume.' In the same month he asks Johnson why the tunes and verses which could not be made out were not sent to him, and he requests that they be forwarded without delay, for he and Clarke are laying out materials for the fifth volume. About February, 1794, he sent forty-one songs for the volume, and informed Johnson that he had a good parcel of scraps and fragments in his hands. In the middle of June, 1794, Johnson wrote to Burns stating that the fifth volume was actually begun; and in March, 1795, a packet of songs was returned to Johnson, obviously received by Burns for correction. Finally, a few months before his death a friend who was in Edinburgh was commissioned to bring any proofs that were ready. These references are given to show that Burns knew the contents of the posthumous fifth volume of the Museum of which Auld lang syne is the thirteenth number. The poet wrote at least four holograph copies of Auld lang syne. The first was part of a letter to Mrs. Dunlop on December 17, 1788, from which the following is an extract: 'Your meeting which you so well describe with your old schoolfellow and friend, was truly interesting. Out upon the ways of the world! they spoil these "social offsprings of the heart." Two veterans of the "men of the world" would have met with little more heart-workings than two old hacks worn out on the road. Apropos, is not the Scotch phrase Auld lang syne exceedingly expressive? There is an old song and tune which has often thrilled through my soul. You know I am an enthusiast in old Scotch songs. I shall give you the verses on the other sheet . . . Light be the turf on the breast of the heaven-inspired poet who composed this glorious fragment! There is more of the fire of native genius in it than in half a dozen of modern English Bacchanalians.' This Dunlop Manuscript, incomplete, is in the possession of Mrs. Prun of Albany, New York. The copy differs from the published versions, and it is obvious that Burns revised the song before sending it for publication. The first and fifth stanzas and chorus are as follows:—

First Stanza.	Chorus.
'Should auld acquaintance be forgot, And never thought upon? Lets hae a waught o' Malaga, For auld lang syne.	For auld lang syne, my jo, For auld lang syne; Lets hae a waught o' Malaga, For auld lang syne.

Fifth Stanza.

'And there's a han' my trusty fiere,
And gie's a han' o' thine;
And we'll tak a right gudewilly waught,
For auld lang syne.'

The rest is substantially the same as that in Johnson's Museum. The manuscript of the Johnson copy has disappeared. The song having been written for the Museum, it may be assumed that Burns, soon after the Dunlop letter, sent his verses to Johnson, who however put them aside because the air for which they were written had already appeared with the verses of Allan Ramsay in the first volume of the Museum published in 1787. Johnson afterwards discovered the merit of the song which caused him eventually to publish it, and thus to take the unusual step of reprinting a tune which had already appeared in his collection. To Johnson therefore must be given the credit of the original publication of Auld lang syne.

Some years later—in September, 1793—Burns forwarded a third copy to George Thomson with the following note: 'One song more, and I have done, Auld lang syne. The air is but mediocre; but the following song—the old song of the olden times, and which has never been in print, nor even in manuscript, until I took it down from an old man's singing—is enough to recommend any air.' In November 1794, or after a lapse of more than a year, Burns writes again to Thomson, apparently in answer to a reference the latter had previously made to the music. (Thomson had probably discovered from Clarke, the musical reviser of the Museum, that Johnson was in possession of a copy of Auld lang syne.) He says: 'The two songs you saw in Clarke's are neither of them worth your attention. The words of Auld lang syne are good, but the music is an old air, the rudiments of the modern tune of that name. The other tune you may hear as a common Scots country dance.' I have marked the last sentence in italics as I will refer to it in the Notes on Thomson's set following. The fourth copy of the verses unsuspected and unknown I have discovered in the Interleaved Museum which I have been permitted to examine. These four precious volumes have been hidden from the public for nearly one hundred years, and Cromek, who, in his Reliques of Robert Burns, 1808, pretended to have printed a verbatim copy of the Notes written by Burns, has misled the public in several ways as to the contents. In connexion with Auld lang syne he quotes what is not in the Interleaved Museum, and he omits what is there, which is: 'The original and by much the best set of the words of this song is as follows' as in our text. The Dunlop and Interleaved Museum copies definitely settle the disputed gude-willy controversy which need not have caused any controversy, as the term is Old English and occurs for example in the line 'A! faire lady! Welwilly found at al,' in John Lydgate's (c. 1375-1462) Complaint of the black knight. A 'gude-willy waught' means a deep drink of good fellowship.

It is necessary to explain what Burns meant by 'an old song.' Most of his numerous contributions to the Museum were original, but many were earlier fragments with his additions and corrections, and these he has described in the Law MS. as 'Mr. Burns's old words.' To his correspondents in general he pretended that several were not his work at all, but merely verses that he had heard or been told, and Johnson had no particular information about them. A number of the songs in the Museum bear the signature X or Z. On one of these, To the weaver's gin ye go, Burns made the following note in the Inter-leaved Museum. 'The chorus of this is old; the rest of it is mine'; and then he goes on to make a general statement: 'Here, once for all, let me apologize for many silly compositions of mine in this work. Many beautiful airs wanted words; in the hurry of other avocations, if I could string a parcel of rhymes together anything near tolerable, I was fain to let them pass.' He must be an excellent poet indeed, whose every performance is excellent.' A few examples from his Notes may serve to illustrate the subject. 'Go fetch to me a pint of wine' he described as old to Mrs. Dunlop, though he subsequently stated that he was the author of all but the first four lines. Strathallan's lament in the Museum is wholly original; in 'I'm o'er young to marry yet,' signed 'Z,' the chorus alone is old; while in M^cPherson's Farewell the legend alone is all that he borrowed, and there is scarcely anything in his verses to compare with the old ballad. Of 'John Anderson my jo,' only the first line or title is borrowed, the rest is the very antipodes of the early and now unprintable verses. Again, the whole of the Gardener wi' his paidle (signed Z in the Museum) except the title is original, and the same is the case with Whistle o'er the lave o't. How far Burns revised or amended the so-called 'old' version of Auld lang syne may be gathered from what follows; but it may be premised that no verses containing sentiments akin to those in Burns's song have ever been found, the only discovery being a ballad with the refrain 'On old lang syne, my jo' (quoted below) which from the context is the echo of another set of verses—or the reverse—at any rate, not at all in the spirit of Burns's world-wide 'Bacchanalian.'

The earliest mention of the precise vernacular phrase Auld lang syne is in that scurrilous work Scotch Presbyterian Eloquence Display'd, London, 1694, 64, where the author quotes the following from a sermon preached: 'Did you ever hear tell of a good God, and a cappet (pettish) prophet, Sirs? The good God said, Jonah, now billy Jonah, wilt thou go to Nineveh, for Auld lang syne (old kindness).' The italicized words in the original are probably the reminiscence of a popular song, in which case it takes us back to the late part of the seventeenth century; or it may be only a phrase. Jamieson, in his Scottish Dictionary, describes syne as follows: 'To a native of this country it is very expressive, and conveys a soothing idea to the mind, as recalling the memory of joys that are past.' This is precisely what the whole of the song of Burns does, and it is the central source of its immense popularity. The word is Old English; Robert de Brunne c. 1300, in a curious description of manners of the time, uses it thus:—

'The king said, as the knight gan ken
Drinkhaille! smiland on Rowèn
Rowen drank as her list,
And gave the king: sine him kist.'

It occurs in the works of Barbour, Dunbar, Douglas, and many of the older Scottish poets in the sense of then or since.

The germ of the song lies in an anonymous ballad of eight double stanzas in the Bannatyne MS. 1568 (folio 80 b), entitled Auld Kyndnes foryett, which begins 'This warld is all bot fenyett fair,' and is the soliloquy of one in straitened circumstances, who, having seen better days, laments the ingratitude of those who formerly professed themselves friends. The fifth stanza may be quoted as a specimen of the poetry of the early part of the sixteenth century, and as an example of the masculine strength of the Scots language:—

'Thay wald me hals with hude and hatt,
 Quhyle I wes riche and had anewch,
 About me friendis anew I gatt,
 Rycht blythlie on me they lewch ;
 Bot now thay mak it wondir tewch,
 And lattis me stand befor the yett ;
 Thairfoir this warld is verry frewch,
 And auld kyndnes is quyt foryett.'

A later ballad is the well-known two sets of verses attributed on slender authority by some to Sir Robert Aytoun (1570-1638), and on more imperfect evidence by others, to Francis Sempill of Belltrees (died c. 1683). It was first printed in a miscellaneous collection in Watson's Scots Poems, 1711, and begins as follows :—

'Should old acquaintance be forgot, And never thought upon, The flames of love extinguished, And freely past and gone ?	Is thy kind heart now grown so cold In that loving breast of thine, That thou canst never once reflect On old-long-syne ?'
--	---

In the Laing collection, now in the possession of Lord Rosebery, is a street song (referred to in the Centenary Burns) headed 'An excellent and proper new ballad, entitled "Old long syne". Newly corrected and amended with a large and new edition of several excellent love lines.' The date of the issue of this broadside is about the end of the seventeenth century, and the chorus or refrain runs as follows :—

'On old long syne,
 On old long syne, my jo,
 On old long syne :
 That thou canst never once reflect
 On old long syne.'

It will be observed from the title that this ballad is the reprint of an earlier publication, and it is important to notice that the refrain contains (1) the same sentiment 'That thou canst never once reflect,' as that expressed in the song attributed to Aytoun, and (2) that the words 'my jo' are part of the title of the earliest copy of the tune, and also of Burns's chorus as printed in the Muscum. Whether this popular song is anterior to that previously mentioned and ascribed to Aytoun is uncertain.

In Scots Songs, 1720, 77, Allan Ramsay published a song of five stanzas which has often been reprinted. The first lines are :—

'Should auld acquaintance be forgot, Tho' they return with scars ? These are the noble hero's lot, Obtain'd in glorious wars :	Welcome, my Varo, to my breast, Thy arms about me twine. And make me once again as blest, As I was lang syne.'
---	---

And the poem goes on to describe, in the usual conventional style of the eighteenth century, the conjunction of Mars and Venus, and concludes happily with the words :—

'Where the good priest the couple blest,
 And put them out of pine.'

There are, further, several political or patriotic ballads, one of which modelled on the Watson set is against the union of the countries, and contains the following lines :—

'Is Scotsmen's blood now grown so cold,
 The valour of their mind
 That they can never once reflect
 On old long sine ?'

Another entitled O Caledon, O Caledon, is in the Laing collection, and published in the Lockhart papers, 1817. Lastly a Jacobite ballad of six double stanzas in the True Loyalist, 1779, entitled Langsyne, is supposed to be written by a skulker in the year 1746, beginning:—

‘Should old gay mirth and cheerfulness
Be dashed for evermore,
Since late success in wickedness
Made Whigs insult and roar.’

which is the nearest approach to the social sentiment of Burns’s song, but, with the exception of the title, there is nothing in it or in any of the poems quoted which could either have inspired Burns, or served as a model for his verses.

We have thus to fall back upon his statement of the street ballad which had never been in print nor in writing. We know the transformation which Burns effected in all songs of this class, so it is not to be wondered that his contemporaries who could discover no song of the kind should be sceptical as to his account of their origin. Cromek, in Scottish Songs, 1810, ii. 128, says: ‘This ballad of Auld lang syne was also introduced in an ambiguous manner, though there exist proofs that the two best stanzas of it are indisputably his. He delighted to imitate and muse on the customs and opinions of his ancestors . . . all tended to confer on him that powerful gift of imitating the ancient ballads of his country with the ease and simplicity of his models.’ Cromek was a warm admirer of Burns’s genius, and scoured Ayrshire and the Southern counties of Scotland in collecting memorials of the poet which he afterwards published; but he does not state what authority he had for saying that Burns wrote only two stanzas of the song. George Thomson was also sceptical about the old original; to enhance his collection, however, he printed at the head of Auld Lang Syne in Scottish Airs, the observation that it was ‘from an old MS. in the Editor’s possession,’ without mentioning Burns at all. This statement was misleading, for the MS. was less than five years old and in the poet’s handwriting. In the later editions the word ‘old’ was deleted, and the head note reads, ‘from a MS. in the Editor’s possession’ with this remark—‘The following exquisitely beautiful song was sent by Burns with information that it is an old song &c. . . . It is more than probable, however, that he said this in a playful humour, for the editor cannot help thinking that the song affords full evidence of Burns himself being the author.’ By this time Auld lang syne had acquired considerable fame, and Thomson was obliged to correct his misleading note. We shall see, however, from the story of the modern melody that this is not the only instance of his having led the public astray.

The last writer who may be named on the subject is William Stenhouse, who affirms that Burns admitted to Johnson that three stanzas only were old, the other two being written by himself. This is a mere repetition of Cromek with the additional information that Burns told Johnson. The three supposed old stanzas are those relating to the cup, the pint stoup and the gude-willy waught. No trace of the ‘old’ song, if it ever existed in the particular of Burns, has been discovered; and if according to his statement, that it never was in print, or even in manuscript, it never can be discovered: and further it is difficult to admit the assertion, unless he wrote the verses himself. After his warm eulogy on the song with the first copy to Mrs. Dunlop, he was bound to adhere to the anonymous origin, and as he continued to extol it he was not the man to open himself to ridicule by claiming it.

The air or tune of our text is that for which Burns wrote his song. It should be remembered that this tune was associated with every song or ballad of Auld lang syne, including that of Burns up to the year 1799, when it was displaced by the present well known air to be described in the next Number. The music has an historical record of exactly a hundred years. Doubtless it belongs to a considerable part of the seventeenth century, although the music has not been found earlier than in Playford's Original Scotch Tunes, 1700, the first printed collection of Scottish music of any kind. The title of the tune there is For old long Gine (sic) my jo, which corresponds with the first line of the refrain of the seventeenth-century ballad cited above, On old long syne, my jo. In all later collections of music of the eighteenth century, except one, the title is invariably Auld lang syne. The tune is in Sinkler's MS., 1710; Orpheus Caledonius, 1725, No. 31; Ramsay's Musick, c. 1726; Watts's Musical Miscellany, 1730, iv. 46; Caledonian Pocket Companion, 1751, iii. 21; Scots Musical Museum, 1787, No. 25, with Ramsay's words, and later in the same work with Burns's verses. The copies in these and other collections vary more or less from one another, but all of them except that in the Museum of 1796 close upon the fifth of the scale. This latter is the simplest form of the melody divested of superfluous notes. The exception to the invariable title is the copy in Thomson's Scottish Airs, 1799, 91, where it bears the name of The hopeless lover set to the song of Burns 'Now Spring has clad the grove in green.' The music is an exact reprint of that in the Museum, 1796, and Thomson probably changed the name to conceal his indebtedness to the work which he styled a vulgar publication.

Variations in Johnson's Museum: verse 1, line 4, 'and auld lang syne'; chorus line 1, 'For auld lang syne,' &c.; v. 3, l. 3, 'fitt'; v. 4, l. 1, 'in'; l. 2, 'morning.'

No. 234. Should auld acquaintance be forgot (Thomson's set). Scottish Airs, 1799, 68; 'From an old MS. in the editor's possession.' Select Melodies, 1822, ii. 19; 'From a MS. in the editor's possession.' The difference in the description of the manuscripts in the two publications of Thomson has already been noticed. With one or two slight variations this is the version in Currie's Burns, 1800, iv. 123. The principal variations from the Museum copy is the substitution of 'my dear' for 'my jo' in the chorus; and the second stanza in the Museum is the last in Scottish Airs. This latter is more often printed in modern collections although the Museum copy is more radiant and attractive, and the better of the two.

The present popular melody was first attached to the song in Scottish Airs, and, although Thomson is generally believed to be solely responsible for selecting it, there is reason for saying that Burns was consulted. That he was familiar with the air will be evident from what follows. Thomson obtained the music from the Scots Musical Museum, and of this there can be no doubt. On comparing the music in our text with that of song No. 144, two passing notes in the first part of the tune are the only variations from O can ye labor lea,—the music of the chorus of Auld lang syne being a close copy of the other. It is important to point this out, which has not been done before, because Thomson made an ambiguous statement as to the source of his melody, which has led up to the unwarranted claim that William Shield composed the air. Neither Thomson, Stenhouse, Graham, Chappell, nor any other expert has said so, and Shield himself, who died in 1829, never claimed it. Stenhouse, simply repeating Thomson, says: 'Mr. Thomson got the words arranged to an air introduced by Shield in his overture to the opera of Rosina, 1783.' The word in italics or its equivalent has always been used by writers on the subject, but the meaning was overlooked and deflected by the public, and gradually the supposititious pretension of Shield was alleged as a fact; and Burns's editors, not knowing the merits of the case, have given it currency. Chappell, who wished it to be an English air, did not trouble himself to correct the uncritical, and chiefly relying on the ambiguous statement of Thomson he maintained what was not denied, that the air is in Rosina. He did not challenge the accuracy of the following paragraph by Stenhouse that 'Mr. Shield, however, borrowed this air, almost note for note, from the third and fourth strains of the Scottish Strathspey in Cumming's collection, under the title of The Miller's Wedding,' but he disputed the statement that Cumming's publication was issued as early as 1780. An edition, and perhaps not the earliest, of Cumming's Strathspeys containing the tune is dated Edinburgh 1780, which settles the priority so far as Shield is concerned. Why Thomson misled the public and did not acknowledge his obligation to the editor of the Museum has been already told. He regarded Johnson's collection as mean and inferior, and always spoke contemptuously of it. In the published correspondence of Burns he never once names it, although Burns repeatedly refers Thomson to the work in his letters. This appears to me to be the reason why Thomson made a far-off and unnecessary allusion to the Rosina music, which, compared with that in the Museum, varies considerably from his copy both as regards notes and accents. He apparently consulted Burns as to the tune. In the poet's letter to him speaking of the old tune as mediocre he accurately describes the air which was selected as 'the other tune you may hear as a common Scots country dance.' It is quite certain that Burns knew it well, for he contributed the verses 'I fee'd a man at Martinmas' for the tune, and for a variant of it 'Comin thro' the rye,' which in the Gray MS. he instructs to be set to 'Tune—Miller's Wedding, a Strathspey.' Thus the melodies of Auld lang syne, O can ye labor lea, Comin thro' the rye and others in Scottish song books are all variants of the same air and derived from a Strathspey, originally published in Bremner's Reels, 1759. No tune was better known or more popular in Scotland during the last half of the eighteenth century, and it was published in numerous collections under many titles. It is not difficult to explain why a Scots country dance should be in Shield's opera. The English opera belongs to a class, the songs of which are not set to music expressly composed for them, but are written for existing tunes, principally those of old ballads and songs. The overtures are generally pot-pourris of popular melodies such as are performed by the orchestra of a modern pantomime. The Beggars' Opera is the first and best of the class, and was the most successful of its kind. It had no original music, all the songs are written for particular airs, many of which are Scottish. The overture was subsequently composed by Dr. Pepusch. The title page of Rosina announces that it is composed and selected by W. Shield. The overture is a mixture of portions of The British grenadiers, Singleton's Slip, some bars of See the conquering hero comes, an English country dance and other old airs strung together with a few bars of original music, the last movement being a variation and an adaptation of the Scots country dance, with orchestral accompaniment to imitate the music of the bagpipe. At least one-third of the airs in Rosina are selected from English, French, and Scottish songs. The opening song See the rosy morn appearing is the composition of John Garth, an organist of Durham and the English editor of 'Marcello's psalms.' Such is a sketch of Rosina, an English opera, after a cursory examination of the work. For his time William Shield was a good composer with a gift of melody. He was a native of Swalwell, a village in Durham on the borders of Northumberland, and was familiar with Scottish melodies from his youth. He harmonized the music of Napier's Scots Songs, 1792, and I believe that he selected and edited the tunes for Ritson's Scottish Songs in 1794. He was intimate with Robert Bremner, the leading publisher of Scottish music in London, and frequently visited his shop.

The leading phrase of the first part of Auld lang syne is the first movement of The Duke of Buccleugh's Tune in Apollo's Banquet, 1690. The tune itself was originally published under the title The Miller's Wedding, in Bremner's Scots Reels, 1759, 41; and also in Cumming's Strathspeys, 1780, 17; with the title of The Miller's Daughter in Mc'Glashan's Strathspey Reels, 1780, 5; as The lasses of the ferry in Stewart's Reels, 1762, 33; in the Overture to Rosina, 1783; as Sir Alex. Don in Gow's Strathspey Reels, 1784; as Roger's farewell in Aird's Airs, 1788, iii. No. 528; as O can ye labor lea in Johnson's Museum, 1792, No. 394; as Comin thro' the rye in the same collection of the year 1796, No. 418; and finally as Auld lang syne in Scottish Airs, as in the text. None of the copies are exact reproductions. Every succeeding editor made alterations here and there, and Shield simply took his place in the development of the air. To show how he got it and how he left it I subjoin the air from Cumming's Strathspeys, 1780, and that from Rosina, 1783.

Cumming, 1780.

Rosina, 1783.

To complete the examination: these transcripts can be compared with the music of O can ye labor lea (No. 144) and Auld lang syne. Shield certainly changed the character of the air by leaving out the dotted notes in the first portion of the air, and the conspicuous improvement he effected by some altered intervals was more than lost in weakening the accents by the use of equal notes. The editor of the 1792 copy in the Museum restored the original character, and improved Shield by raising the climax in the fourth bar by a full tone. Thomson, in Auld lang syne, completed the tune by more melodic steps in the third bar leading up to the climax; and also by a more gradual and easy descent in the fifth bar. The result of my investigation is that the air was selected by Shield as announced in the title-page of his opera, and that he was not the composer of Auld lang syne any more than the restorer of an edifice can be called the architect.

No. 235. O, Willie brew'd a peck o' maut. Scots Musical Museum, 1790, No. 291, entitled, Willie brew'd a peck o' maut; Select Melodies, 1825, vi. 37. This convivial song is known almost as well as Auld Lang Syne. It was written to commemorate a festive meeting which took place in the autumn of 1789. 'This air is Masterton's; the song mine. The occasion of it was this: Mr. William Nicol, of the High School, Edinburgh, during the autumn vacation being at Moffat, honest Allan, who was at that time on a visit to Dalswinton, and I went to pay Nicol a visit. We had such a joyous meeting, and Mr. Masterton and I agreed, each in our own way, that we should celebrate the business' (Interleaved Museum). The verses and music were forthwith sent to the Museum. Nicol died on April 21, 1797, and Masterton in 1799. Currie, in Works, 1800, lamented that the three honest fellows who took part in the festival, all men of uncommon talents, were now under the turf. Burns probably found the model of his song in The fumbler's rant, in the fourth volume of the Tea-Table Miscellany, 1740, the fifth stanza of which is as follows:—

'Here's a health to John Mackay we'll drink,
To Hughie, Andrew, Rob, and Tam;
We'll sit and drink, we'll nod and wink,
It is o'er soon for us to gang.
Foul fa' the cock, he's spilt the play,
And I do trow he's but a fool,
We'll sit awhile, 'tis lang to day,
For a' the cocks they rave at Yool.'

The Baroness Nairn, the authoress of The land o' the leal, projected a bowdlerized edition of Burns's songs, but fortunately abandoned the idea. She was the anonymous editor of The Scottish Minstrel, where many of her finest songs were first printed. The publisher on his own responsibility inserted Willie brew'd a peck o' maut, but Lady Nairn strongly disapproved of the selection, and it was suppressed in the next edition.

The Tune is a copy from the original in the Scots Musical Museum; words and music are also in Ritson's Scottish Songs, 1794, i. 259, and Dale's Scotch Songs, 1794, iii. 152. Use and selection have divested the melody of the original superfluous passing notes which the singers of last century considered graceful and artistic. It is improved in modern collections; written in the modern scale it is easily harmonized, and many composers with more or less success have made it into a three or four part song. Both verses and music are inspirations.

No. 236. No churchman am I for to rail and to write. First Edinburgh edition, 1787, 336. Tune—Prepare my dear brethren, &c.; also Scots Musical Museum, 1803, No. 587: 'By R. Burns,' with music. This song is neither better nor worse than the average bacchanalian tol-de-rol ditty of the eighteenth century on which it is framed.

On October 1, 1781, Burns was made a Master in the Tarbolton Lodge of Freemasons, and the last stanza was specially written for the craft. The wrong tune The lazy mist is printed in the Museum. That in the text has long been popular with the Freemasons. It is entitled the Freemasons' health in Watts's Musical Miscellany, 1730, iii. 72, and begins, Come, let us prepare we brothers that are: while it is called The freemasons' march in Aird's Airs, 1782, i. No. 175. It was well known in the West of Scotland, the children in the streets singing it to the rhyme:—

'Hey the merry Masons, and ho the merry Masons
Hey the merry Masons goes marching along,' &c., &c.

A humorous song, with the music, is printed in Durfey's Pills, 1719, ii. 230, entitled, On the Queen's progress to the Bath. It is named The enter'd apprentice's song in a Masons' Song Book, 1790. For tune, see No. 329.

No. 237. O, rattlin, roarin Willie. Scots Musical Museum, 1788, No. 194, signed 'Z,' with the music of Rattlin, roarin Willie. This is an old unprinted song with corrections and additions. 'The last stanza of this song is mine, and out of compliment to one of the worthiest fellows in the world, William Dunbar, Esq., Writer to the Signet, Edinburgh, and Colonel of the Crochallan Corps, a club of wits who took that title at the time of raising the fencible regiments' (Interleaved Museum). The song has little merit, but there is a touch of human nature in the old lines where the drouthy gut-scraper resists the temptation to sell his fiddle for the liquor for which he thirsts. This hero is said to have been a border reiver.

In the Tea-Table Miscellany, 1724, the tune is marked with a sentimental song beginning 'O Mary, thy graces and glances'—an irrelevant combination. The music, as Bonny, roaring Willie, is in Blackie's MS., 1692; entitled Ranting, roving Willie in Atkinson's Northumberland MS., 1694; and printed in Oswald's Companion, c. 1755, vii. 9. It is a bag-pipe melody of the class common to the South of Scotland, and North of England.

No. 238. Here's a bottle and an honest friend. Cromeck. Reliques, 1808, 440, entitled 'Song,' without name of tune. The following motto was attached to the title in Pickering's Burns, 1834:—

'There's nane that's blest of human kind
But the cheerful and the gay, man;
Fa, la, la, la, &c.'

The song books of the eighteenth century were loaded with bacchanalian ditties good and bad—chiefly the latter. This stanza of Burns is classical compared with the coarse materialistic rhymes of the collections.

No. 239. In comin by the brig o' Dye. Scots Musical Museum, 1788, No. 156, signed 'Z,' and with the tune, Ruffian's rant. The MS. is in the British Museum. The poet was at Stonehaven on September 10, 1787, just after a meeting at Aberdeen with Bishop Skinner, son of the author of Tullochgorum. Ten days before, he had spent a day with Niel Gow at Dunkeld. Close to Stonehaven is the river Dye, a tortuous stream which zigzags from the eastern spur of the Grampians, and falls into the Dee at Upper Banchory.

Who the Thaniel Menzies, or Bonie Mary, or Charlie Grigor of the song were, is not known. The verses are doubtless a reminiscence of a night spent at the Inn of the Brig of Dye. The Tune Ruffian's rant is widely known as Roy's wife, from Mrs. Grant's sprightly song of the same name. It was originally a slow strathspey air, but the eclecticism of music in adapting itself to different moods by a change of time is exemplified here, as in Scots, wha' hae. A slow movement of Ruffian's rant is the tune of the following pathetic verses:—

'Though thou leave me now in sorrow,
Smiles may light our love to-morrow;
Doom'd to part, my faithful heart
A gleam of joy from hope shall borrow.'

The Tune is in Bremner's Reels, 1759, 43; Cumming's Strathspeys, 1780, page 3; and Aird's Airs, 1782, ii. No. 114; also in M^r Farlane's MS., c. 1740, entitled Cog na scanan. Burns wrote a conventional Anglo-Scottish song for the tune in reply to a whip of George Thomson—see Song No. 164.

Three old songs for the melody are in the Merry Muses.

No. 240. Adieu! a heart-warm, fond adieu. Kilmarnock edition, 1786, 228, entitled 'The farewell, To the brethren of St. James's Lodge, Tarbolton. Tune Good night and joy be wi' you a''; Scots Musical Museum, 1803, No. 600. This, the last song in both publications, is supposed to have been sung at the meeting of the Freemasons' Lodge, Tarbolton, held in June, 1786. Until superseded by Burns's Auld Lang Syne, Good night and joy be wi' you was the parting song at all social meetings in Scotland. A number of the chief collections of Scottish Melodies close with the tune. The distinguished song-writers of Scotland, Joanna Baillie, Susanna Blamire, and Sir Alexander Boswell, have each written verses for the tune. Burns had a high appreciation of the melody, and in a letter to George Thomson of April 7, 1793, in a burst of enthusiasm thus writes: 'Ballad-making is now as completely my hobby-horse as ever fortification was Uncle Toby's; so I'll e'en canter it away till I come to the limit of my race, and then cheerfully looking back on the honest folks with whom I have been happy, I shall say, or sing Sae merry as we a' hae been, and raising my last looks to the whole human race, the last words of the voice of Coila shall be Good night and joy be wi' you a'.'

The authority to insert the song in Johnson's Museum was conveyed in these words: 'Let this be your last song of all in the collection and set it to the old words; and after them insert my Gude night and joy be wi' you a' which you will find in my Poems. The old words are:—

'The night is my departing night, The morn's the day I maun awa; There's no a friend or fae o' mine But wishes that I were awa.	What I hae done, for lake o' wit, I never, never can reca'; I trust ye're a' my friends as yet, Gude night and joy be wi' you a'.
--	---

Johnson followed strictly the instructions of Burns.

The tune is in the Skene MS., c. 1630, entitled, Good night, and God be with you; in Playford's Original Scotch Tunes, 1700; in a MS. dated Glasgow, 1710; in the Caledonian Pocket Companion, 1752, iv. 32; and Aird's Airs, 1782, ii. No. 200. The tune has been considerably altered since its first appearance in the Skene MS.

No. 241. Up wi' the carls o' Dysart. Scots Musical Museum, 1792, No. 392, to the tune Hey ca' thro'; Edinburgh edition, 1877, ii. 68. On September 15, 1787, Burns slept at Kinross, and next day came through a cold barren country by Queensferry to Edinburgh. The four fishing villages named in the song are close to one another on the south coast of Fife. No version of the song was known until it appeared in the Museum. It has been accepted as the work of Burns on the authority of Stenhouse, but it is not among the Burns manuscripts in the British Museum.

The melody of a 'Boat song,' Hey ca' thro', is a characteristic small pipe tune, in compound triple time, common to the Border. The music, which Burns is said to have communicated when he sent the verses, is not in any collection prior to the copy in the Museum.

No. 242. Gane is the day, and mirk's the night. Scots Musical Museum, 1792, No. 313, signed 'B,' entitled, Then Gudewife, count the lawin. The MS. is in the British Museum. In the Interleaved Museum is: 'The chorus of this is part of an old song, one stanza of which I recollect:—

"Every day my wife tells me,
That ale and brandy will ruin me;
But if gude liquor be my dead,
This shall be written on my head,
O Gudewife, count the lawin," &c.'

Burns's song is worthy of Walter de Mapes, the sprightly monk of the twelfth century who wrote Mihi est propositum in taberna mori. According to Stenhouse, Burns obtained the tune from tradition and had it printed in the Museum. It is a bright and joyous melody, which ought to be better known.

The well-known obscure proverb, 'As drunk as a lord,' is evidently a corruption of the last line of the second stanza in this song, 'For ilka man that's drunk 's a lord,' which is quite a different phrase from the common saying.

No. 243. Come, bumpers high! express your joy! Lockhart's Life of Burns, 1829. Written for William Stewart, resident factor or bailiff of the estate of Closeburn in Dumfries, with whom Burns became acquainted in his business excursions. The sister of Stewart was landlady of Brownhill Inn, in the neighbourhood of Thornhill on the Nith, where the poet sometimes stayed, and where he wrote the verses on a glass tumbler which is now in the library at Abbotsford.

The tune Ye're welcome, Charlie Stewart is referred to in Song No. 26.

No. 244. Contented wi' little and cantie wi' mair. Thomson's Scottish Airs, 1799, 65, 'Written for this work by Robert Burns. Air, Lumps o' pudding.' The MS. is in the Thomson collection. Burns accepted Thomson's proposal to write a song for the tune about the middle of November, 1794. In May, 1795, Thomson had presented to Burns a painting of The Cottar's Saturday night, by David Allan, in which the poet figured. Burns, in thanking the donor, suggested that if a vignette were made the motto should be, Contented wi' little and cantie wi' mair, 'in order that the portrait of my face and the picture of my mind may go down the stream of Time together.'

The tune known as Lumps of Pudding or Sweet Pudding is in the Dancing Master, 1701; Sinkler's MS., 1710; and the Caledonian Pocket Companion, c. 1755, vii. 4. Verses and the music are in Durfey's Pills, 1720, 300. In Herd's Scottish Songs, 1776, ii. 221, a vernacular humorous song is marked for the tune, showing that this English melody was domesticated in Scotland. The subject is not an uncommon satire in Scottish song. The last stanza of the Herd fragment is:—

As I gaed by the minister's yard,
I spied the minister kissing his maid.
Gin ye winna believe, cum here and see
Sic a braw new coat the minister gied me.'

No. 245. I had sax owsen in a pleugh. Scots Musical Museum, 1803, No. 542, 'Corrected by R. Burns.' 'This humorous drinking-song, with the exception of the chorus which is old, was written by Burns' (Stenhouse, Illustrations, p. 473). Ale was the common beverage and even an article of food of the people of Scotland. Home-brewed small beer and oatmeal porridge were the diet of the peasantry within living memory.

The tune The bottom of the punch-bowl is in Oswald's Companion, 1743, i. 29; McGibbon's Scots Tunes, 1742, 13; and Aird's Airs, 1782, i. No. 93.

VI. THE JOLLY BEGGARS.—A CANTATA.

(Nos. 246–253.) Poems ascribed to Robert Burns, 1801, 1; Cromek's Scottish Songs, 1810, ii. 233. This remarkable composition was written about the end of 1785. Nowhere is the genius of Burns more displayed than in this description of the lowest stratum of human life, and the portraiture of the individuals composing the society of the most depraved Bohemians. One true function of art is to provoke sympathy with all animated nature, and Burns was the first poet of his century who cast aside the artificial Damons and Celias of song and the affectations of the rhymer; he stepped out into the field of nature, saw it with a clear open eye, gauged it with a sound mind, and depicted it with the feeling that he was a part of the great scheme. No poet before him—except Cowper—sang of the weeds, the flowers, and the lower animals as subjects of affectionate regard. Burns's Deil was a human spirit who spoke 'broad Scots,' with whom he could converse in familiar terms, and from whom he parted on the best of terms, hoping he 'will tak a thocht and mend.'

The Jolly Beggars is a sordid scene of the dregs of humanity. The ragged crew are spending their precarious earnings in the most reckless manner. The microscopic analysis of the company, and the humorous portraits of the individuals of the group, are so exquisitely real, that a sneaking kindness is felt for the social outcasts. How the poem originated may be briefly told. On a winter night of 1785, Burns and two companions left the house of an innkeeper and brother rhymist—Johnie Dow—and made their way through Mauchline. They were passing the door of a small dingy public house, in a narrow street, kept by a Mrs. Gibson, better known as Poosie Nansy, noted for entertaining and lodging vagrants; her assistant in the business was a putative daughter known as Racer Jess, from her fleetness of foot and love of running. Sounds of merriment proceeded from the house as Burns and his companions passed; they ventured in and joined the company. They did not remain long, but quite long enough for Burns, who in a few days read to John Richmond—one of the three in the adventure—some verses on the subject, and shortly afterwards presented him with a portion of the manuscript. When finished the poem was given away, and so little did Burns think of it, that in a few years he had forgotten its existence. Only one reference to it is in his correspondence, and that in reply to an inquiry made in September, 1793, when George Thomson asked for a reading of the poem; he had heard of it casually, perhaps through Richmond, who was then resident in Edinburgh. Burns replied, ‘I have forgot the Cantata you allude to, as I kept no copy, and indeed did not know that it was in existence; however, I remember that none of the songs pleased myself, except the last, something about :—

‘Courts for cowards were erected,
Churches built to please the priest.’

Nothing more was heard of The Jolly Beggars during the poet’s life, nor until it appeared in a Glasgow Chap-Book, issued in 1799. The demand was so great, that the publisher reprinted it in 1801, in a thin octavo volume with other unpublished pieces, as ‘Poems ascribed to Robert Burns the Ayrshire Poet,’ &c. In this volume, with The Jolly Beggars, appeared for the first time The Kirk’s Alarm, The two Herds, Holy Willie’s Prayer, and some minor pieces. The extraordinary power displayed in these poems attracted the attention of Sir Walter Scott, who had the volume reprinted, and a few years later, in the Quarterly Review, castigated both Dr. Currie and Cromek for refusing to publish The Jolly Beggars. The latter defended himself on moral grounds—to protect the fame of Robert Burns, as he said—and to prove his sincerity in the cause of morality, he printed The Jolly Beggars in the appendix to his Scottish Songs! Our text is taken from the facsimile of Burns’s MS., published in 1823.

Burns appears to have got the idea of The Jolly Beggars from a song of seven stanzas in the fourth volume of the Tea-Table Miscellany, entitled The merry Beggars—of which there are six—a poet, a lawyer, a soldier, a courtier, a fiddler, and a preacher. Each of the characters sings a stanza. The fiddler as follows :—

‘I still am a merry gut-scraper,
My heart never yet felt a qualm;
Tho’ poor, I can frolic and vapour,
And sing any tune but a psalm.’

The verses are not devoid of merit. A copious assortment of canting and begging metrical literature are in the notes on the Jolly Beggars, in the ‘Centenary edition’ of Burns. From what has been said it is obvious that Burns never intended to publish The Jolly Beggars. He, however, copied most of the songs into his Merry Muses.

No. 246. I am a son of Mars. The tune Soldier’s Joy is in Joshua Campbell’s Reels, 1778, 56; M^cGlashan’s Scots Measures, 1781, 32; and in Aird’s Airs, 1782, i. No. 109. It is still reprinted in modern collections of popular music, and is a favourite with country fiddlers. I first heard the air played by a pitman in the parlour of a Northumbrian inn before I discovered it in print. One of the editors of Burns mistook the melody and brought a charge of carelessness against the poet in writing for particular tunes. The charge does not hold good; for the verses, 'I am a son of Mars,' have not until now been printed with the proper melody, and it fits the verses exactly.

No. 247. I once was a maid. Tune, Sodger Laddie. The verses are in the Merry Muses or Crochallan Song Book. The music is in Atkinson's MS., 1694, and Sinkler's MS., 1710, entitled Northland ladie. A song in the Tea-Table Miscellany, partly by Ramsay, beginning, 'My soger laddie is over the sea,' was reprinted with music in Watts's Musical Miscellany, 1731, vi. 110, and copied into the Orpheus Caledonius, 1733, No. 27. The music is also in Bremner's Reels, 1757, 22. During the eighteenth century the tune was very popular in Scotland, and often reprinted. In Stewart's Reels, 1761, 15, it is entitled Sailor laddie. Burns made a song with this title for The Jolly Beggars; probably he may have got the idea from the title of the tune in Stewart. In the version printed by Cromek, the third line of the second stanza of the Recitativo to the bard's song, a 'sailor' instead of a fiddler is named.

No. 248. Sir Wisdom's a fool when he's fou. Tune, Auld Sir Symon. This English melody, assigned to the man of the cap and bells, is above three hundred years old, and is well known on both sides of the Border. Its title appears first in a Scottish collection with the song, Come, here's to the nymph that I love, in the Tea-Table Miscellany, 1724, and later in Herd's Scots Songs, 1769, 13, to Some say that kissing's a sin. It is the tune of the Elizabethan ballad Ragged and torn, and must necessarily be older than these verses. Ritson considered it one of the 'Ancient ballads' referred to by Laneham as being in the bundle of Captain Cox, the Coventry mason. In the seventeenth century, a large number of ballads were sung in London to Old Symon the King, and Chappell, in Popular Music, p. 262, quotes five different names by which it was known. It served moral, political, social, and bacchanalian songs, but chiefly the latter. 'Symon the King' is supposed to have been a noted tavern-keeper who kept good liquor, and sampled it often himself.

Says Old Symon the King,
Says Old Symon the King,
With his ale-dropt hose, and his malmsey nose,
Sing hey ding, ding a ding ding.'

A political song with this chorus is in Loyal Songs, 1685, 149. The earliest copy of the music is in Musick's Recreation, 1652. The tune is also in Durley's Pills, 1707, and in the 1719 edition, iii. 143, set to a ballad rather less coarse than usual for that remarkable collection. The music was published in a Scottish collection in Oswald's Companion, c. 1755, vii. 6, and in McGibbon's Scots Tunes, 1768, iv. 102. Two songs in the Merry Muses are directed to be sung to Auld Sir Symon the King.

No. 249. A Highland lad my love was born. Tune, O, an ye were dead, guidman. See note on Song No. 214. Stenhouse says he copied this tune from an old manuscript, which he does not, however, further specify. A song of the kind was popular in Scotland at the Reformation, for it is parodied in the Gude and Godlie Ballads, 1567, of which the following stanza is a specimen:—

'For our Gude-man in heaven dois ring,
In gloir and blis without ending,
Quhair Angellis singis ever Osan,
In laude and praise of our Gude-man.'

The first part of the tune resembles the second phrase of the Duke of Buccleuch's Tune, in the sixth edition of Apollo's Banquet, 1690, and complete in the Dancing Master, 1709. It is also in Macfarlane's MS., 1741; in Oswald's Companion, 1752, iv. 24, and McGlashan's Scots Measures, 1781, 7, entitled Watson's Scots Measure.

No. 250. Let me ryke up to dight that tear. Tune, Whistle owre the lave o't. A copy of the minstrel's song is in the Merry Muses. See note on Song No. 209.

No. 251. My bonie lass, I work in brass. Tune, Clout the Cauldron. The earliest imprint of the title and subject in a Scottish collection, is that in the Tea-Table Miscellany, 1724, beginning:—

'Have you any pots or pans,
Or any broken chandlers?
I am a tinkler to my trade,
And newly come frae Flanders,

As scant of siller as of grace,
Disbanded, we've a bad run,
Gae tell the lady of the place,
I'm come to clout her caldron.'

But the original is much older. As The Tinker it was printed in the very rare collection, Merry Drollery, London, 1661, 134, in seventeen stanzas, beginning—'There was a lady in this land.' The third stanza will show the connexion with Ramsay's version:—

'I am a Tinker, then quoth he,
That worketh for my fee,
If you have vessels for to mend,
Then bring them unto me:

For I have brass within my bag,
And target in my apron,
And with my skill I can well clout,
And mend a broken cauldron.'

The following note is in the Interleaved Museum, but it is not written by Burns: 'I have met with another tradition that the old song to this tune, "Hae ye ony pots or pans or onie broken chanlers," was composed on one of the Kenmore family in the cavalier times. . . . The air is also known by the name of The Blacksmith and his apron.' The note is probably by Robert Riddell. The song in Merry Drollery, just quoted, is indisputably an English song. The Scottish version was printed for the first time with music in the Orpheus Caledonius, 1733, No. 25. The copy in the Scots Musical Museum, 1787, No. 23, is that in the text.

No. 252. I am a bard, of no regard. Tune, For a' that, an' a' that. The verses in the Cantata are far superior to the so-called variant-song, No. 68. The tune is noted in Song No. 309.

No. 253. See the smoking bowl before us. Tune, Jolly mortals, fill your glasses. There are two tunes of this name—both English—set to a drinking-song in three stanzas. One is the composition of John Ernest Galliard (1687–1749), a distinguished oboe player, and chamber musician to Prince George of Denmark. He had the gift of melody, and composed a number of good airs. The music is in Calliope, 1739, and Watts's Musical Miscellany, 1731, vi. 182. The other and older air in the text is from Ritson's English Songs, London, 1783, vol. iii. Galliard's tune as arranged in Watts does not fit Burns's song very well, and the other is probably that which Burns intended.

VII. PATRIOTIC AND POLITICAL.

No. 254. Among the trees, where humming bees. Cromek's Reliques, 1808, 453. Tune, The King of France, he rade a race. Niel Gow is the 'fiddler in the North' referred to in the song. The sarcasm on foreign music was intended to cool the rage for Italian compositions and vocalists that invaded the country before the middle of the eighteenth century. The capon craws of Farinelli, who was the lion of the operatic stage, stigmatized as one of the castrati, is sarcastic enough. The 'royal ghaist' refers to James I of Scotland, who was detained a prisoner in England for nineteen years. The royal author of The King's Quair was a distinguished poet and an accomplished musician. Hogg quotes an unintelligible Jacobite song beginning 'The King of France he rade a race,' which may have been the model of Burns. The second stanza is :—

'But there cam a fiddler out o' Fife, A blink beyond Balwearie, O, And he has coft a gully knife To gie the Whigs a bleary, O.	This fiddler cam wi' sword and lance, And a' his links o' leary, O. To learn the Whigs a morice dance That they lov'd wondrous deary, O.'
---	--

The tune is in the Caledonian Pocket Companion, c. 1756, viii. 26, and Campbell's Reels. 1778, 73, but it was printed previously in Bremner's Reels, 1757, 1, under the title Lady Doll Sinclair's Reel. The melody is very little known, and Burns's song is here for the first time printed with its tune.

No. 255. Scots, wha hæ wi' Wallace bled. Scottish Airs, 1799, 74, 'Written for this work by Robert Burns.' Two different accounts exist of the origin of Scots, wha hæ. Syme, the distributor of Government stamps in Dumfries, an intimate friend and neighbour of Burns, communicated to Dr. Currie a graphic account of a short excursion Burns and he made through Galloway in the end of July, 1793. In traversing Kenmure, the savage scenery and desolate appearance was intensified by bad weather. 'Next day,' Syme says, 'he produced me the Address of Bruce to his troops, and gave me a copy for Dalziel.' According to this statement related in Currie, Works, 1800, i. 209, 213, Scots, wha hæ was written and completed between July 28 and 30, 1793. Burns's own account is contained in a letter to Thomson, assigned to September 1, 1793, enclosing a copy of the ode. I quote the entire letter, as it formulates Burns's impressions of music. 'My dear Sir,—You know that my pretensions to musical taste are merely a few of nature's instincts, untaught and untutored by art. For this reason, many musical compositions, particularly where much of the merit lies in counterpoint, however they may transport and ravish the ears of you connoisseurs, affect my simple lug no otherwise than merely as melodious din. On the other hand, by way of amends, I am delighted with many little melodies, which the learned musician despises as silly and insipid. I do not know whether the old air Hey, tutti, taitie may rank among this number; but well I know that with Fraser's hautboy, it has often filled my eyes with tears. There is a tradition which I have met with in many places in Scotland, that it was Robert Bruce's march at the battle of Bannockburn. This thought, in my yesternight's evening walk, warmed me to a pitch of enthusiasm on the theme of liberty and independence, which I threw into a kind of Scots Ode, fitted to the air, that one might suppose to be the gallant royal Scot's address to his heroic followers on that eventful morning. So may God ever defend the cause of Truth and Liberty, as He did that day. Amen! R. B. P.S.—I shewed the air to Urbani, who was highly pleased with it and begged me make soft verses for it; but I had no idea of giving myself any trouble on the subject, till the accidental recollection of that glorious struggle for Freedom, associated with the glowing ideas of some other struggles of the same nature, not quite so ancient, roused my rhyming mania. Clarke's set of the tune, with his bass, you will find in the Museum, though I am afraid that the air is not what will entitle it to a place in your elegant selection.' From this letter several inferences may be drawn: first, that Burns suspected Thomson would not care for the tune Hey, tutti, taitie; second, that professional musicians considered it a pathetic air; and third, that the French revolution was a cause of the origin of Scots, wha hæ.

Dr. Currie made no attempt to decide when the song was written, and the subject is not of vital importance here. When Burns sent it to Thomson he may have finally drawn it up and corrected it fit for the press. As we know, he took an active interest in the stirring drama of the French Revolution, and it is interesting to remember that the struggles of the same nature, 'not quite so ancient,' produced a much more famous song in France. The Chant de guerre pour l'armée du Rhin, better known as The Marseillaise Hymn, was written and composed at Strasburg, by Rouget de Lisle, a Captain of Engineers in the French Army, between the night of the 25th and the morning of the 26th April, 1792, or about seventeen months before Burns wrote Scots wha hae to commemorate an event more than five hundred years old.

It must be told how Burns's song was criticized, revised, altered, and finally printed in a different rhythm and to a wrong tune. Thomson having shown it to some friends, they agreed as to the merit of the verses, but 'reprobated the idea of giving it a tune so utterly devoid of interest or grandeur as Hey, tutti, taitie'; saying further, 'I never heard any one speak of it as worthy of notice.' Thomson and the committee of taste decided that the poet must have created some fanciful partiality for the air through connexion with the tradition concerning it, which was nearly correct, but not in the sense they meant; and then they proceeded to suggest what they thought as a more appropriate melody—Lewie Gordon; but as its measure differed, they recommended that a foot should be added to every fourth line of the song, thus:—Stanza 1, Or to glorious victory; 2, Chains, chains and slavery; 3, Let him, let him turn and flee; 4, Let him bravely follow me; 5, But they shall, they shall be free; 6, Let us, let us do or die. What was Burns to do? he had not a single supporter; every one disapproved of his tune—that melody for which the song was specially written, and over which he had wept when Fraser played it. Professional musicians, editor, and committee had declared Hey, tutti, taitie unsuitable, so he succumbed and agreed to alter the verses as suggested—in his own way. Thomson, having affected a material and emasculated alteration, proceeded to suggest further amendments but Burns now lost patience, straightened himself, and sent an ultimatum in the following terms: 'My Ode pleases me so much, that I cannot alter it. Your proposed alterations would, in my opinion, make it tame. I am exceedingly obliged to you for putting me on reconstructing it, as I think I have much improved it, . . . I have scrutinised it over and over; and to the world some way or other, it shall go as it is.' This closed the correspondence on the subject. Scots wha hae, as reconstructed, completely reversed Burns's invariable method of writing with the sound of some favourite melody ringing in his ears. The verses originally appeared in the London Morning Chronicle, May, 1794. Thomson printed them with the tune Lewie Gordon, in Scotch Airs, 1799, 74; or three years after Burns's death.

The public learnt from Currie, in Works, 1800, the struggle for existence of the Ode of Burns, and how the song had been altered; and demanded that the original words should be printed with its own tune. Thomson admitted his error and reprinted the song in his next volume, in 1801, 133, with a note that he thought that 'Hey, tutti, taitie gave more energy to the words than Lewie Gordon.' The original draft in Burns's handwriting—that which he wrote on August 31, 1793—belonged to the late Frederick Lockyer, the author of London Lyrics.

Hey, tutti, taitie or Hey now the day dawes, the tune of Scots wha hae, requires an exposition in order to get rid of some misconception regarding its origin. There is no evidence supporting the tradition that it was played at Bannockburn, although one of the earliest fragments of Scottish song existing is in the peculiar rhythm of the tune. In the Book of St. Alban's—a chronicle relating to the time of Robert the Bruce—the stanza of a contemporary satirical song is quoted on the flamboyant dress of the officers of the English army who kept the country in check at that period. I quote in modern English: 'At that time the Englishmen were clothed all in coats and hoods painted with letters, and with flowers full seemly, with long beards: and therefore the Scots made a rhyme that was fastened upon the Church doors of St. Peter towards Stangate (York). And thus said the scripture in despite of Englishmen:—

"Longe berdes hertles,
Payntyd hodes wytles,
Gay cotes graceles,
Makyth Englund thripteles."'

G g

In Fabyan's Chronicle the same verses are repeated, but they are assigned to the time of David Bruce when he married the English Princess. 'To their more derision, they—the Scots—made divers truffes, rounds and songs, against the English.'

In Dunbar's poem To the Merchants of Edinburgh, written about the year 1500, a couplet runs:—

'Your common menstrallis hes no tone
But Now the day dawis, and Into Jone.'

The common minstrels in Scotland were the Corporation pipers, maintained at the public expense. They were lodged by the householders in succession, and about the end of the fifteenth century Edinburgh appears to have supported three. Any one who found it inconvenient to billet them in their turn was liable to pay ninepence, 'That is to ilk pyper iiii at the leist.' A tune was popular in the time of Gavin Douglas. In the prologue of the 13th book of his translation of Virgil, printed in 1513, these lines occur:—

'Tharto thir byrdis singis in the shawis
As menstralis playing, The joly day now dawes.'

In the Fayrfax MSS. (Addl. MS. 5465), a collection of English songs by different composers of the latter part of the fifteenth and beginning of the sixteenth centuries—is a song written in honour of Elizabeth, the daughter of Henry VII, entitled, This day dawes, this gentill day, with music for three voices.

One of Alexander Montgomery's poems, Hey now the day dawis, supposed to have been written before 1580, resembles a popular song:—

'Hey now the day dawis,	The thrissel cock crys,
The jolly cock crawis,	Or lovers quaha lyis
Now shrouds the shawis,	Now skaillis the skyis,
Through nature anone:	The nicht is neir gone.'

Montgomery's song was probably modelled from an earlier type parodied in the Gude and Godlie Ballads, beginning, 'Hay now the day dawes,' every stanza closing with 'the nicht is neir gone'—the identical line used by Montgomery. The following stanza ridicules the saving efficacy of the bone of St. Giles' arm, once the palladium of the Parish Church of Edinburgh:—

'Ye beguiled us with your hoods,
Shawing your relics and your roods,
To pluck fra us poor men our goods,
Ye shaw us the heid of St. John
With the arme of St. Geill;
To rottan banes ye gart us kneill,
And savit us frae neck to heill,
The nicht is neir gane.'

Hey now the day dawnes is designated a celebrated old song in The Muses Threnodie, written in the reign of James VI, on the local affairs of Perth.

In The Piper of Kilbarchan, a humorous poem in Scots metre, the tune is named as one which Habbie Simson played. Robert Semple, the author, lived between 1595 and 1665, and the poem belongs to the first quarter of the seventeenth century. A stanza is:—

'Now who shall play the Day it Dawes?
Or Hunts up when the cock he craws?
Or who can for our Kirktown cause,
Stand us in stead?
On bagpipes now no body blaws
Sen Habbie's dead.'

Kirkpatrick Sharpe contributed to Stenhouse's Illustrations the copy of a local Annandale hunting song. In the first stanza the well known refrain is introduced:—

'The cock's at the crawling,
The day's at the dawing,
The cock's at the crawling,
We're o'er lang here.'

Lastly, the concluding stanza of the bacchanalian Landlady, count the lawin, Song No. 227, contains the lines so often quoted:—

'Landlady count the lawin
The day is near the dawin,' &c.

Stenhouse erroneously assumed that the music of the song in the Fayrfax MS. was that of Hey, tutti, taitie. Neither is The day dawis in Straloch's MS., 1627, the tune of Hey, tutti, taitie, which from its construction may well be accounted an ancient melody, although the music is not in any collection prior to the Caledonian Pocket Companion, 1751, iii. 13. It is also in McGibbon's Scots Tunes, 1755, 33; and with the Ode in Thomson's Scottish Airs, 1801. For another set of the air, see Song No. 227. The Rebellion doubtless brought it into more prominent notice, which would account for its publication, but that it was played at Bannockburn is most likely a pleasing fiction. According to Froissart, who obtained the particulars from three eye-witnesses, the Scottish foot-soldiers at the Battle of Otterburn, 1388, carried a large horn slung round the neck after the manner of hunters. To frighten the enemy these horns were sounded in chorus and, being of different sizes, the noise was so great that it could be heard miles off. The bagpipe is first named in Scottish records about the close of the fifteenth century. The figure of a piper is sculptured in Melrose Abbey of an earlier date than any written record of the instrument in Scotland, and in Rosslyn Chapel is a chiselled figure with bare legs and feet and wearing a kilt, playing the pipes.

No. 256. O, wha will to St. Stephen's house. Gilbert Burns Edition, London, 1820, from a manuscript entitled 'The fête champêtre. Tune Killiecrankie.' The summer of 1788 is fixed as the date of the entertainment recorded in this programme ballad. According to Gilbert Burns, its origin was due to a garden-party given by William Cunninghame of Annbank, Ayrshire, on coming of age and entering into the possession of his grandfather's estates. The entertainment was then believed to have a political meaning. Burns knew the host, who some years later married a daughter of his dear friend and correspondent, Mrs. Stewart of Afton. Boswell and Dr. Johnson are referred to in the close of the first stanza.

For Notes on the tune, see song No. 328.

No. 257. How can my poor heart be glad? Currie, Works, 1800, iv. 156, entitled 'On the seas and far away. Tune, O'er the hills, &c.' Thomson's Scottish Airs, 1805, 161. The MS. is in Brechin Castle. Sent to Thomson August 30, 1794. Later Burns withdrew the song saying that making a song 'is like begetting a son: you cannot know whether you have a wise man or a fool, until you produce him to the world and try him.' Thomson omitted the second stanza, and for a chorus repeated the first without variation. Burns was not much attached to this melody of doubtful origin, which belongs to a song referring to the wars in Queen Anne's reign, entitled, Jockey's Lamentation, printed with the tune in Durfey's Pills, edition 1709 and 1719, v. 316. Ramsay published an altered version in the Tea-Table Miscellany, 1725, beginning 'Jockey met with Jenny fair.' In the Pepsysian library is a black letter ballad in Scottish orthography printed about 1660 entitled The wind hath blown my plaid away: or, a discourse betwixt a young man and the Elphin Knight to be sung to its own new pleasant tune. The last line of every stanza repeats the title The wind hath blown my plaid away which was probably an early name for O'er the fields and far away, very popular in England and did service in several operas of the eighteenth century.

The tune is in Atkinson's MS. 1694; Sinkler's MS., 1710, entitled My plaid away; Watts's Musical Miscellany, 1730, iii. 192; Caledonian Pocket Companion, c. 1755, vii. 23; McGibbon's Scots Tunes, 1768, iv. 97; Aird's Airs, 1782, ii. No. 29; Scots Musical Museum, 1787, No. 62; and other musical collections.

No. 258. There was on a time. Currie, Works, 1800, iv. 354, entitled Caledonia. 'Tune: Caledonian Hunt's delight.' The MS. is in the Watson collection. The following letter, dated Jan. 23, 1789, was addressed to James Johnson of the Scots Musical Museum, enclosing a copy of the song 'I shall be in Edinburgh, my dear sir, in about a month, when we shall overhaul the whole collection and report progress. The foregoing I hope will suit the excellent air it is designed for.' The song was not printed in the Museum, because, I conjecture, Burns afterwards furnished a much better song—The banks o' Doon for the tune. See No. 123.

No. 259. Dces haughty Gaul invasion threat? Currie, Works, 1800, iv. 385, entitled The Dumfries Volunteers. Tune, Push about the jorum. Scots Musical Museum, 1803, No. 546. Burns was suspected of holding treasonable opinions, and he suffered for railing at the constitution. But he was decidedly of the opinion that British wrongs should be righted by British hands. The French Convention menaced the country in the early part of 1795, and two companies of volunteers were raised in Dumfries as a defence against invasion. Burns became a member, and shouldered the musket and pike. The irony of fate hemmed him in over this business. As a suspected rebel he was officially censured and reduced. But it is curious to note that his death was accelerated through patriotism. The most pathetic letter in his correspondence is that of June 12, 1796, nine days before his death, to his uncle James Burness, Writer, Montrose, begging a loan of ten pounds by return of post to save him from an attachment by the unpaid tailor who supplied his volunteer uniform. The ballad The Dumfries Volunteers, with music composed by Stephen Clarke, was printed on a sheet in March, 1795, for circulation among the volunteers. Thomson, in Select Melodies, set it to Get up and bar the door. But as stated by Currie it was written for Push about the jorum, a popular English melody, composed about 1770 for a song in the opera of The Golden Pippin. It is a good marching air with a free swing. This is the first time the Dumfries Volunteers has been printed with its proper tune, entitled The jorum in Campbell's Reels, 1778, 33; and Push about the jorum in Aird's Airs, 1782, i. No. 111. The tune was a particular favourite of Burns. In the Merry Muses three different songs are marked for it. This patriotic song with its tune has the true Burnsian ring; and although the events which produced it are now only historical the vehemence of the poet can still be felt.

No. 260. As I stood by yon roofless tower. Scots Musical Museum, 1796, No. 405, signed 'B.' Tune, Cumnock Psalms, named on the MS., is in the British Museum. The verses are known as The minstrel of Lincluden. Burns was wont to walk and muse among the ruins of the Abbey, situated on the angle of land at the junction of the Cluden with the Nith, about a mile and a half north of Dumfries. Pennant gives a description of this collegiate Church in his Tour in Scotland, 1772, which is accompanied with a fine engraving of the ruin. Parts of the chancel and nave were all that remained in Burns's time. Margaret, daughter of Robert III, the wife of Archibald Earl of Douglas, son of Bell-the-cat, is buried in the chancel.

The stanza and curious tune which Burns appropriated for the Minstrel of Lincluden, was known as The grey goose and the gled from an old erotic song of that name. Stephen Clarke transcribed the music for Burns, and in a letter to Thomson about September, 1794. the poet writes: 'Mr. Clarke says that the tune is positively an old chant of the Romish Church, which corroborates the old tradition that at the Reformation, the Reformers burlesqued much of the old church music. As a further proof, the common name for this song is Cumnock Psalms.' As shown in Note 212, Bishop Percy first accentuated this myth. A song for the tune is in the Merry Muses and it is very unlikely that Thomson knew it. The origin of the tune Cumnock Psalms is obscure. It is framed upon no existing type of Scottish music, and it stands alone. It is chiefly recitative, with only the rudiments of a modern melody and a compass not extending beyond a musical fifth.

No. 261. The laddies by the banks o' Nith. In The Spirit of British Song, 1826, ii. 53, and Cunningham's Burns, 1834, entitled 'Election Ballad for Westerha.' In this second election ballad of 1789, the poet openly sympathizes with the Tory candidate. The Duke of Queensberry is held up to derision. Burns had a very poor opinion of the character of the Whig candidate, the son of his landlord. He is not named in the ballad but he is described in a letter to Graham of Fintry as 'a youth by no means above mediocrity in his abilities, and is said to have a huckster lust for shillings, pennies and farthings.' For a Note on the tune Up and waur them a' Willie; or, Up and waur a', see No. 283.

No. 262. As I cam down the banks o' Nith. Centenary Edition, 1896, ii. 398. The MS. is in the possession of Lord Rosebery. This is another version of the preceding ballad for the tune of The black watch, for which see Song No. 269.

The two series of Election ballads which Burns wrote to assist his friends are not printed here in chronological order for reasons which it is unnecessary to explain. This and the preceding are the second and third of the election of 1789; and No. 267 'There was five Carlins in the South' is the first. After the close of the election in 1790 the exasperated Burns addressed to Graham of Fintry a vigorous invective chiefly directed against the Duke of Queensberry who supported the Whigs. It begins 'Fintry my stay in worldly strife,' and is in the metre of Suckling's celebrated ballad 'I tell thee, Dick, where I have been,' and can be sung to that melody, but as Burns did not name any tune for his ballad, and evidently had no mind that it should be sung, it is not in this collection. The various versions can be seen either in the Edinburgh, 1877 edition or the Centenary edition of his Works. The ballads of the 1795-6 contest are in order of time as follows—our Nos. 275, 270, 274 and 273. The result of this election was not known at the time Burns died.

No. 263. Farewell to the Highlands. Scots Musical Museum, 1790, No. 259, signed 'Z.' Tune Faillte na miosg. The MS. is in the British Museum. 'The first half stanza of this song is old; the rest is mine': (Interleaved Museum). 'Mr. Burns's old words,' (Law's MS. L. list.) C. Kirkpatrick Sharpe refers to the original as a broadside of seven stanzas and a chorus entitled The strong walls of Derry. The ballad is a mixture of Scottish and Irish affairs of the eighteenth century, and the fifth stanza is the chorus of My heart's in the Highlands. The ballad was a favourite of Sir Walter Scott, who sometimes sung it to his friends at convivial meetings. Nature had not endowed the great novelist with the gift of true intonation—he was what the Scots call 'timmer-tun'd'—so he very properly confined himself to vocal performances with his intimates only, and at the stage of the proceedings suggested in the following chorus of the ballad.

'There is many a word spoken, but few of the best,
And he that speaks fairest, lives longest at rest;
I speak by experience—my mind serves me so,
But my heart's in the highlands wherever I go.

Chorus. Let us drink and go hame, drink and go hame,
If we stay any longer we'll get a bad name.
We'll get a bad name, and we'll fill ourselves fon,
And the strong walls of Derry it's ill to go through.'

The tune Faillte na miosg or The musket salute is Celtic. The second part is inferior to the opening four lines, and is probably an excrescence. The tune is in Oswald's Curious Collection Scots Tunes, 1740, 39, and the Caledonian Pocket Companion, 1743, i. 22. English and foreign composers have set to original music these melodious verses of Burns.

No. 264. Fareweel to a' our Scottish fame. Scots Musical Museum, 1792, No. 378, entitled Such a parcel of rogues in a nation. The original MS. is in the British Museum. 'Mr. B— words,' (Gray's MS. Lists). An invective in twenty-seven stanzas entitled Upon the rogues in Parliament, 1704 is in Maidment's Scottish Pasquils, 1868, 379. The union of the two countries was execrated in Scotland, except among the Whig nobles. The Commissioners who carried through the treaty were styled the thirty-one rogues, and were made targets for the most bitter satire, and held up individually to public ridicule. The rhyming ware of that period is not very well known. I quote the penultimate stanza of The Rogues Pasquil.

'In such an array of rogues Argyle may come in,
Whose blood bears the stain of original sin,
And if he's like to go on, as they did begin,
Then he'll follow the fate of his grandsire.'

The Curse, written and circulated immediately after the Union was completed, is still more violent, and swears at large. It is as follows:—

'Scotland and England now must be United in one nation; So we again must perjured be, And talk the abjuration. The Stuarts antient true born race, We must now all give over; We must receive into their place, The mungrells of Hanöver. Curst be the papists who first drew Our King to their persuasion; Curst be the covenanting crew, Who gave the first occasion To strangers to ascend the throne, By a Stuart's abdication!	Curst be the wretch who seized his throne And marred our Constitution; Curst be all those who helped on Our cursed Revolution! Curst be those treacherous traitors who, By their perfidious knaverie, Have brought the nation now unto Ane everlasting slaverie! Curst be the Parliament that day They gave the Confirmation; And curst for ever be all they Shall swear the abjuration.'

Lockhart of Carnwath states the amounts paid by England to each of the Scottish Union Commissioners—the thirty-one rogues. The blood money ranged from £1104 15s. 7d. paid to the Earl of Marchmont down to Lord Banff, the most easily squared traitor, who agreed to dispose of himself for £11 2s. sterling besides throwing in his religion, in order that he might qualify himself to act. The key note of the stanzas of Burns is that what could not be effected by reason or force, was at last obtained by gold and guile.

The model of Burns's verse has been lost, and no existing song fits the rhythm of the tune. A parcel of rogues in a nation is in Oswald's Companion, 1752, iv. 26, and in M^oGibbon's Scots Tunes, 1755, 19.

On the Museum manuscript of the song Burns wrote, 'I enclose what I think the best set of the tune,' but this like nearly all Burns's musical MS. has disappeared.

No. 265. The Thames flows proudly to the sea. Scots Musical Museum, 1790, No. 295, signed 'B,' entitled The Banks of Nith. 'Tune, Robie donna gorach' (Daft Robin). Burns intended this air for his verses, but although it is so marked in the Museum, the music of the Banks of Nith, the composition of Robert Riddell was engraved instead. In the Law MS. the direction is 'The Banks of Nith—Tune, Robie donna gorach. Mr. Burns's words.' The verses are now for the first time set in the text with the proper tune. It may be stated here that The Captive Ribband beginning 'Dear Myra the Captive ribband's mine,' which for sixty years has been printed as a song of Burns, is the work of Dr. Blacklock. As may be seen in the Law MS. the holograph note of Burns is 'Dr. B— gave the words,' which definitely settles the question. This song, No. 257 in the Museum, is set to Robie donna gorach, hence the substitution of another tune for that in our text.

The Celtic air is in McFarlane's MS. c. 1740; in Dow's Scottish Music, c. 1776, 25; and Mc'Donald's Highland Airs, 1784, 25.

No. 266. When wild war's deadly blast was blawn. In Thomson's Scottish Airs, 1793, i. 22. 'Written for this Work by Robert Burns.' Air, The mill, mill O'. In September, 1792, Thomson asked Burns to touch up and amend the verses of a song in Ramsay's Miscellany, but Burns declined to have anything to do with such insipid stuff. He declared he would alter no song unless he could amend it. Thomson had been pegging at the poet to write in English and got the following reply in April, 1793: 'These verses suit the tune exactly as it is in the Museum. There is a syllable wanting at the beginning of the first line of the second stanza; but I suppose it will make little odds. There is so little of the Scots language in the composition that the mere English singer will find no difficulty in the song.' Thomson maintained that the third and fourth lines must be altered in order to suit the music. Burns declined to make any change. 'I cannot alter the disputed lines in The mill, mill O. What you think a defect I esteem as a positive beauty.' Thomson substituted two lines of his own for the third and fourth of Burns. Currie, in Works, 1800, iv. 50, restored Burns's words. The original, or at least a song evidently prior to Ramsay's, is in the Merry Muses, beginning:—

'Chorus. The Mill, Mill O, and the kill, kill, O,
 And the coggin o' Peggie's wheel O,
 The sack and the sieve, and a' she did leave,
 And danc'd the Millers reel, O.
 As I cam down yon waterside,
 And by yon shellin-hill, O,
 There I spied a bonie, bonie lass,
 And a lass that I lov'd right weel, O.'

Cromek interpolated in Reliques these verses with a note, neither of which is in the Interleaved Museum. A version is in Herd's MS., and there is a second song of the kind in the Merry Muses, which obviously Cromek had consulted.

The tune was very popular in the eighteenth century. It is in Orpheus Caledonius, 1725, No. 20; Ramsay's Musick, c. 1726; Watts's Musical Miscellany, 1731, vi. 76; Mc'Gibbon's Scots Tunes, 1746, 14; Caledonian Pocket Companion, 1751, iii. 2; Bremner's Scots Songs, 1757, 30; Scots Musical Museum, 1790, No. 242, and many other collections. It is said to be in a MS. of 1709.

No. 267. There was five carlins in the South. Stewart's Burns, 1802. Lockhart, Life, 1829, entitled, The five carlins. Tune. Chevy chase. A MS. is in the British Museum. Written on the contested election of a member of Parliament for the five boroughs in the shires of Dumfries and Kirkcudbright. Dumfries is 'Maggie by the banks o' Nith'; Lochmaben, 'Marjory o' the monie lochs'; Annan, 'Blinkin Bess'; Kirkcudbright, 'Whisky Jean'; and Sanquhar, 'Black Joan.' The candidates were the sitting Tory member, Sir James Johnston, of Wester-hall—the 'belted knight,' and Captain Patrick Miller—the 'Soger Youth'—son of Patrick Miller of Dalswinton, Burns's landlord. As will be seen elsewhere Burns actively supported the Tory side, chiefly because 'Old Q,' the notorious Duke of Queensberry, assisted the Whigs. On December 9, 1789, a copy of the ballad was sent with a letter to Graham of Fintry. 'The election Ballad, as you will see, alludes to the present canvass in our string of burghs. I do not believe there will be a harder run match in the whole general election. The great man here, like all renegadoes, is a flaming zealot kicked out before the astonished indignation of his deserted master, and despised, I suppose, by the party who took him in, to be a mustering faggot at the mysterious orgies of their midnight iniquities, and a useful drudge in the dirty work of the country elections. . . . Dumfries and Sanquhar are decidedly the Duke's to 'sell or let'; so Lochmaben, a city containing upwards of fourscore living souls, that cannot discern between their right hand and their left—for drunkenness—has at present the balance of power in her hands. The honourable council of that ancient burgh, are fifteen in number; but alas! their fifteen names endorsing a bill of fifteen pounds, would not discount the said bill in any banking office.'

The tune in the text—the Scottish Chevy Chase—is in Scott's Minstrelsy, 1830. It is in the Caledonian Pocket Companion, 1753, v. 32; in M^cGibbon's Scots Tunes, 1768, iv, 108; and in Dale's Scotch Songs, 1794, i. 54. How long it was known before the earliest date named is quite uncertain, and it is useless to speculate. At least three different English tunes of the name are known. The earliest is entitled Flying Fame, because it is directed to be sung to the oldest copy of the Chevy Chase ballads. The next, with the distinctive title of The Children in the wood, belongs to the well-known ballad of that name. It is the traditional melody of the gravedigger in Hamlet, the music of which can be seen in song No. 274 below. The third is In pescod time; or, The hunt's up. The unravelling of the history of these three melodies can be seen in Chappell's Popular music, and because the last is connected with Scotland as the melody of one of the Gude and Godlie Ballads, I subjoin the music of The hunt's up, with a stanza of the curious parody:—

No. 268. You're welcome to despots, Dumourier. Cromeek's Reliques 1808, 421. Entitled 'Address to General Dumourier:—a parody on Robin Adair.' General Dumourier, like General Monk and the Marquis of Montrose, began his military career as a rebel, but changed sides in the course of the game. Dumourier was one of the best generals of the French Revolution, but, events proving distasteful to him, he abjured Republican principles. As soon as he heard that the Directory proposed to arrest him, he took refuge in Austrian quarters and nearly succeeded in bringing his army with him. He is briefly and picturesquely described by Carlyle 'A most shifty wiry man; one of Heaven's Swiss: that wanted only work. Fifty years of unnoticed toil and valour; one year of toil and valour not unnoticed, but seen of all countries and centuries, the thirty other years again unnoticed, of memoir writing, English Pension, scheming and projecting to no purpose.'

The model of Burns's 'Impromptu' is a bacchanalian closing thus :—

'Come let us drink about, Robin Adair,
Come let us drink about, Robin Adair,
Come let us drink about, and drink a hogshead out,
Then we'll be drunk, no doubt, Robin Adair.'

For the tune Robin Adair or Aileen a roon, see Song No. 45.

No. 269. When Guilford good our pilot stood. Edinburgh Edition, 1787, 311, entitled, 'a fragment.—Tune: Gillicrankie.' In Scots Musical Museum, 1788, ii. No. 101, it is set to the tune in the text according to the instructions of Burns contained in Gray's MS. Lists. It is the first song in the Museum over which he had control, and he changed the melody because Killicrankie had already been printed in the collection. The ballad refers to events between 1775 and the close of 1783 in Canada and North America. Pitt became Premier in December, 1783, after the fall of the Coalition ministry of North and Fox. There are Hogarthian touches in most of the political ballads of Burns, and Pitt's rival is well drawn in the two lines :—

'An' Charlie Fox threw by the box
An' lows'd his tinkler jaw, man.'

Fox is said to have often come straight from the gaming room knee-deep in cards to the House of Commons.

The Gaelic tune, M. freicedan or The black watch is entitled The highland watch in Dow's Ancient Scots Music, c. 1776, 42, and The Earl of Glencairn's in McGlashan's Strathspey Reels, 1780, 6. The 42nd Regiment or The black watch was embodied to keep down rebellion in the Highlands.

No. 270. Fy, let us a' to Kirkcudbright. Broadside 1795; Cunningham's Burns, 1834. Tune Fy, let us a' to the bridal. The first seven stanzas satirize and ridicule the opposite political party; and the rest, except the closing lines, eulogize the Whig candidate. The butchering invective is not nearly so amusing as The holy fair or Orthodox who believe in John Knox. Lockhart declined to print some of these political ballads in his Life of Burns, 1828, on the ground that 'perhaps some of the persons lashed and ridiculed are still alive—their children certainly are so'. These reasons cannot now be advanced, and Time has solved the propriety of printing them. The ballad which gave its name to the tune is in Watson's Choice Collection of Comic and Serious Poems, Edin. 1706, the first miscellaneous collection of poetry published in Scotland. The first stanza is :—

'Fy, let us a' to the briddel,
For there will be liltin there,
For Jockie 's to be married to Maggie
The lass with the gauden-hair;
And there will be lang-kail and pottage
And bannocks of Barley-meal,
And there will be good salt herring
To relish a cog of good ale.'

This song and the tune The blythsome Wedding or Fy, let us a' to the bridal, are in the Orpheus Caledonius, 1725, No. 36, the music is in Craig's Scots Tunes, 1730, 41, entitled An the Kirk wad let me be; the Scots Musical Museum, 1787, No. 58; Ritson's Scottish Songs, 1794, i. 208; Dale's Scotch Songs, 1794, iii. 141; also in McGibbon's Scots Tunes, 1755, 32, and Aird's Airs, 1782, i. No. 123. The modern copies of the music differ considerably from the older, as indeed they do between themselves. Durfey printed a paraphrase of The blythsome Wedding in Pills, 1720, vi. 350. The editor's ignorance of the Scottish vernacular produced a cacophonous parody of meaningless words. The tune in the Pills, although from the same source as that in the Orpheus Caledonius, 1725, differs particularly in the chorus. The oldest verses to The blythsome bridal, or Kirk wad let me be are in Herd's Scots Songs, 1769, 114, and several songs in Ramsay's Miscellany are marked for the tune. The title Silly old man in Walsh's Caledonian Country Dances coincides with a song referred to in Cromek's Reliques, 253, as part of an interlude performed in Nithsdale.

No. 271. O Logan, sweetly didst thou glide. Currie. Works, 1800, iv. 74. 'Tune, Logan Water.' Thomson's Scottish Airs, 1801, 116. Two stanzas, of which the following is the first, is in Herd's Scottish Songs, 1776, ii. 230, and in the Merry Muses. It is not a plaintive song:—

'The Logan burn, the Logan braes,
I help'd a bonie lass on wi' her claes,
First wi' her stockings, and syne wi' her shoon,
But she gied me the glaiks when a' was dunc.'

A different song in Ramsay's Miscellany is marked for the tune. Several ballads to the tune Logan Water were popular in England in the seventeenth and eighteenth centuries. About 1675, a white letter ballad was printed for C. Bates and Jonah Deacon, entitled The Frolicsome wager, the first line of which is 'Behold what noise is this I hear, to the tune Logan Water.' Also printed about the same time is a black letter broadside, containing two ballads, The Devonshire Damsels frolick and The Devonshire Boys Courage. The latter is 'To an excellent new tune call'd the Devonshire Boys Delight or the Liggan Waters, &c.' The popularity of the tune is confirmed in another broadside of the seventeenth century entitled 'The bonny Scottish lad and the yielding Lass to an excellent new Tune much in request called Liggan Waters.' One of the stanzas in dialogue form is here given as a specimen:—

'Bonny lass, I love thee well,
'Bonny lad, I love thee better.'
'Wilt thou pull off thy hose and shoon
And wend with me to Liggan Water?'

This evidently is connected with the verse previously quoted. The author of The Seasons wrote a song for the tune which is in the Orpheus Caledonius, 1733; lastly, about the year 1781, John Mayne, the author of The Siller Gun, wrote By Logan's Streams that rin sae deep, &c., often sung publicly in London about the end of eighteenth century. Burns incorrectly thought that this latter was old, and incorporated two lines of it in his own song which he forwarded in a letter dated June 25, 1793, to Thomson, who thanked him for it, but, being a government official and not likely to interfere in politics, handed it to Currie.

The tune Logan Water is in Ramsay's Musick, c. 1726; Orpheus Caledonius, 1733, No. 23; McGibbon's Scots Tunes, 1742, 35; Caledonian Pocket Companion, 1753, v. 18; Scots Musical Museum, 1787, No. 42; Ritson's Scottish Songs, 1794, i. 37; and in many other collections. A very emasculated set of the tune entitled The Logan water is so deep in the opera Flora, 1729, contains only four lines of music.

No. 272. Farewell, thou fair day. Scots Musical Museum, 1792, No. 385, entitled Oran an Aoig or The Song of Death; Thomson's Scottish Airs, 1799, 76, with a wrong tune. 'The circumstance that gave rise to the verses was—looking over with a musical friend McDonald's Collection of Highland Airs (1784), I was struck with one, an Isle of Skye tune, entitled Oran an Aoig, or The Song of Death, to the measure of which I have adapted my verses.'—Letter to Mrs. Dunlop, undated (May, 1791). The short prefatory note usually printed with the song is an interpolation for which there is no authority.

Dr. Currie states that Burns intended to print the song with music in sheet form, but owing to the inflammable state of the country was dissuaded from doing so.

This beautiful melody is in McDonald's Airs, 1784, No. 162; Ritson's Scottish Songs, 1794, ii. 259.

No. 273. Wha will buy my troggin? Cunningham's Edition, 1834, entitled 'The trogger, tune, Buy broom besoms.' The Parliament elected in 1795 was dissolved in May, 1796, and Heron of Heron was again cast on another turbulent political sea. This time he was opposed by the Hon. Montgomery Stewart, a younger son of the Earl of Galloway. Burns, although confined to the house by severe illness, assisted his friend with The trogger. Before the election took place Burns was dead. Heron won, but was unseated on a petition and died shortly afterwards.

To appreciate the satire it is necessary to remember that a 'trogger' or 'troker,' is the Autolycus of Scotland. The word is an example of French influence on the Scottish language. Troquer means to exchange, to barter, to do business on a small scale. The two following examples from Jamieson's Scottish Dictionary illustrate the term :—

'How could you troke the mavis note
For penny pies all piping hot.'—Ferguson.

'Nae harm, tho I hae brought her ane or twa
Sic bonny trocks to help to mak her braw.'—Shirrefs.

The tune Buy broom besoms is ascribed without authority to William Purvis or Blind Willie, an eccentric blind fiddler, born in Newcastle, 1752. Buy broom besoms was Willy's chef d'œuvre in the streets and public houses that he frequented. He died in the Newcastle poor house in 1832 upwards of 80 years of age. The music of the text is from Northumberland Minstrelsy, 1882, 118. The fact of Burns having written his ballad for the tune is evidence that it was popular in the south of Scotland at the end of the eighteenth century. It is not in any Scottish collection.

The characters in this, the last election ballad written by Burns, are as follows :—Stanza 2 : The Earl of Galloway, a sour Puritan whom Burns did not love. His son was the Tory candidate. St. 3 :—Murray of Broughton, who eloped with a lady and left his wife; Thomas Gordon of Balmaghie, his nephew. St. 4 : A Galloway laird, David Maxwell of Cardoness, whom Burns described as 'a stupid, money-loving dunderpate.' St. 6 and 11 : John Bushby of Tinwald, a lawyer and a banker. St. 7 : Rev. James Muirhead of Urr, who satirized Burns in an epigram. He invented a crest and armorial bearings. St. 8 : Walter Sloan Lawrie, of Redcastle. St. 9 : Douglas of Carlinwark, which latterly was changed to Castle Douglas. St. 10 : Copeland of Collieston. St. 12 : The Devil.

No. 274. 'Twas in the seventeen hunder year. Hogg and Motherwell's Edition, 1834 (with the exception of three stanzas), entitled John Busby's lamentation. Tune : Babes in the wood. Written to celebrate the election of the Whig candidate Heron of Kerroughtrees. Black-nebbit John Bushby was a solicitor and bank agent, a man of capacity whose taste lay in money-making. Burns was an unsympathetic acquaintance, and, when in an opposite camp, he attacked his quondam friend without reluctance. (For reference to tune see No. 267.)

No. 275. Wham will we send to London town? Broadside, 1795; Cunningham's Edition, 1834. This is another ballad belonging to the local politics of the early part of 1795. With characteristic fervour Burns threw himself into the midst of the election warfare. The Stewarty of Kirkcudbright was in want of a parliamentary representative, and a friend of the poet, Heron of that Ilk and Kerroughtrees, became the Whig candidate.

He was opposed by a Tory, Thomas Gordon of Balmaghie, who had the support of most of the landed proprietors of the district. Burns knew most of the principal supporters on the other side, and his personal aversion to some of them whetted his pen. In his only known letter to Heron early in 1795 he sent a copy of this and No. 270 supra, which had been previously printed in broadsides for circulation among the electors. He informs Heron: 'In order to bring my humble efforts to bear with more effect on the foe, I have privately printed a good many copies of both ballads, and have sent them among friends all over the country. . . You have already as your auxiliary the sober detestation of mankind on the head of your opponents; and I swear by the lyre of Thalia to muster on your side all the votaries of honest laughter and fair, candid ridicule!' Whether it is fair or not, there can be no question of the candidness of the ridicule. In these ballads we get a glimpse of the manners and high jinks at parliamentary elections a hundred years ago.

For the tune For a' that, see Songs Nos. 252 and 309.

No. 276. Dire was the hate at old Harlaw. Cromek's Reliques, 1808, 416, entitled 'The Dean of Faculty. A new ballad. Tune, The dragon of Wantley.' The last stanza is wanting in Cromek. The MS. is in the British Museum. Towards the close of 1795 the ferment of politics was very brisk in Scotland. Henry Erskine, the eloquent Dean of Faculty and the most brilliant member of the Scottish bar, presided at a public meeting in Edinburgh to discuss political reform. His action displeased the members of the Edinburgh Bar, and at the next election of a Dean, Robert Dundas, the mediocre son of a distinguished father, was nominated and was elected by a large majority. Burns had an old score to settle with the new Dean, who slighted him in 1787. At the instigation of the physician of the late Lord President Dundas, who had then just died, Burns wrote a eulogy and sent it to the son in a letter. Neither the poem nor the letter was acknowledged, and in writing the pungent satire Dire was the hate, Burns was paying tribute to his old friend and adviser, the witty Henry Erskine, and scoring off Robert Dundas. The first line of the ballad refers to the battle of Harlaw, which took place in 1411 at Garioch in Aberdeenshire, between the Highlanders and the Lowlanders. It is celebrated in minstrelsy, and is memorable as being the last contest for political supremacy in Scotland between the Celtic and the Anglo-Saxon races. Next to Bannockburn it was the most decisive battle in Scottish history. The ballad of Harlaw is named in the Complaynt of Scotland c. 1549, and an old pibroch bears the title, the tune of which in a modern form set to verses printed by Allan Ramsay in 1724 is in the Scots Musical Museum, No. 512.

The latter part of the first couplet of Burns's verses refers to the Battle of Langside, which determined the career in Scotland of Mary Queen of Scots. After this short introduction the poet proceeds to impale the new Dean and his heretic supporters.

The tune and ballad of The Dragon of Wantley are in Duffey's Pills, 1719, iii, 10. The words alone in A Collection of old ballads, 1723, 37, entitled An excellent Ballad of a most dreadful combat fought between Moore of Moore-hall and the Dragon of Wantley. The verses are coarse, but the wit and humour are undeniable and superior to the ordinary class of narrative ballads. A specimen is the following stanza:—

' This dragon had two furious wings,
 Each one upon each shoulder;
 With a sting in his tail, as long as a flail,
 Which made him bolder and bolder.
 He had long claws, and in his jaws
 Four and forty teeth of iron;
 With a hide as tough, as any buff,
 Which did him round environ.'

The ballad certainly belongs to the seventeenth century. A black letter copy is in the Pepys collection, which is reproduced in Child's Ballads, 1861, viii. 128, where the editor says that he thinks it a parody of some early heroic tale. This is the first time Burns's ballad has been printed with its tune, which, it is needless to say, is English.

VIII. JACOBITE.

No. 277. When first my brave Johnie lad. Scots Musical Museum, 1792, No. 309, entitled Cock up your beaver. The MS., not in Burns's hand, is in the British Museum. A fragment of the old song is in Herd's Scots Songs, 1769, 314. Burns made a few alterations in the first stanza, the second being entirely his.

The tune was popular in England as a Scotch dance in the seventeenth century. It is printed in the seventh edition of Playford's Dancing Master, 1686, also edition 1695, entitled Johnny cock thy beaver. It is also in Atkinson's MS., 1694; in Durfey's Pills, 1719, i. 332, set to a semi-political song beginning 'To horse brave boys of Newmarket, to horse'; in Sinkler's MS., Glasgow, 1710; in Oswald's Companion, c. 1755, vii. 2; and in McGibbon's Scots Tunes, 1755, 20.

No. 278. Our thrissles flourish'd fresh and fair. Scots Musical Museum, 1790, No. 263, entitled Awa, whigs, awa. The MS. is not among the Burns papers in the British Museum. In Law's MS. List, 'Mr. Burns's old words.' In the fourth stanza Burns is indignant against the enemies of the Jacobites, for with all his democratic feeling he could not escape from his Jacobite proclivities. The Union in his day was not accepted as favourable to his country—the pride of the nation rebelled against occupying an inferior position. The feeling was expressed on the slightest provocation whether over the taxation of beer barrels, or a suggestion to abolish Bank notes. Sir Walter Scott astonished the Parliament of St. Stephen's by his furious attack on the proposal to amend the paper currency established for more than 150 years when the country was independent. In spite of Burns's feeble apologies for writing up the Jacobite cause, he embodied his sentiments in all the Jacobite songs, although this one like some of the others was not acknowledged.

The original of Burns's song is eight lines in the Herd MS. as follows:—

'And when they cam by Gorgie Mills
They lickèd a' the mouter,
The bannocks lay about there
Like handoliers and powder;
Awa, whigs, awa!
Awa, whigs, awa!
Ye're but a pack o' lazy louns,
Ye'll do nae guid awa!'

Awa, whigs, awa, is still a very popular melody which was originally published in Oswald's Companion, 1754, vi. 19 without a second part and without the sharp minor seventh near the close of the fourth line. The tune is also in Aird's Airs, 1788, iii. No. 411. Another and different air is in Songs Prior to Burns, page 72 which R. Chambers said was sung to the song in the house of a Perthshire Jacobite family.

No. 279. Now Nature hangs her mantle green. Edinburgh Edition, 1793, ii. 177; entitled 'Lament of Mary Queen of Scots on the approach of Spring'; Scots Musical Museum, 1797, No. 404, signed 'B.' The first copy was enclosed to Dr. John Moore in a letter dated February, 27, 1791, while Burns was reading Percy's Reliques of Ancient English Poetry. Copies were sent to several other friends. Burns was particularly pleased with the ballad—a class of poetry he was not much attached to,—and he told Lady Constable ‘When I would interest my fancy in the distresses incident to humanity, I shall remember the unfortunate Mary. I enclose a poetic compliment I lately paid to the memory of our greatly injured, lovely Scottish Queen.’ He writes in the same strain to Mrs. Graham, and to Clarinda when sending them copies.

The ballad was printed in the Museum with the melody, which Burns communicated to the editor.

A song Queen Mary's lamentation ‘I sigh and lament me in vain,’ with a melody by Giordani, is well known: but neither words nor music have any relation to the ballad of Burns. The absorbing interest in Queen Mary is the excuse for noticing here the fabricated verses so long attributed to her on bidding adieu to her beloved France. The song was written by Meusnier de Querlon and first printed in his Anthologie Française, 1765, i. 19, with music. He pretended that he obtained it from a manuscript of the Duke of Buckingham, which has never been discovered. His countryman, Fournier exposed this and other of Querlon's tricks, and Charles dubs the song ‘rimes barbares.’ As a curiosity—the following are the original verses in the rare Anthologie:—

‘Adieu, plaisant pays de France,
O ma patrie,
La plus chérie,
Qui as nourri ma jeune enfance!
Adieu, France, adieu mes beaux jours.
La Nef qui déjoit nos amours
N'a cy de moi que la moitié:
Une part te reste, elle est tienne;
Je la fie à ton amitié,
Pour que de l'autre il te souvienné.’

No. 280. O, cam ye here the fight to shun? Scots Musical Museum, 1790, No. 282, entitled The battle of Sherra-moor: ‘Mr. B. gave the words.’ Tune, Cameronian Rant. Law's MS. List. The battle of Sheriffmuir was fought on Sunday, November 13, 1715, between the Government forces commanded by the Duke of Argyle, and the rebels under the Earl of Mar. The battle was drawn, both sides claiming the victory, and the peculiar humour of the country which delighted to treat matters of serious political import in a ridiculous manner, chose this event as the subject of ballads to satirize both sides in an impartial manner. The two armies approached each other on the broad muir between the Ochils and the Grampians. It is an undulating platform of gentle hummocky hills, and neither army saw very clearly the position and movements of the other. When the forces came into collision, it was discovered that the right wing of each was the strongest. The rebels outnumbered the Government army, but lost the advantage by rushing the attack before the arrangements were completed.

Sir Walter Scott described how the Highlanders behaved in a campaign. While on the field they would desert in three cases: if much time was lost in bringing them into action, they would get tired and go home; if they fought and were victorious, they would plunder and go home; if they fought and were beaten, they would run away and go home. These tactics were obviously perplexing and inconvenient to the leaders, but they were practised in the rebellions of 1715 and 1745, and explain how the rebel armies in both cases rapidly melted away. The ballad recites, as the only thing certain, that a battle was fought, and both sides ran away, but who won or who lost, the satirical rhymers know not.

The Clan Campbell in general was much in evidence in the sixteenth and seventeenth centuries, and was famed for making an intelligent forecast of events with a view to promoting personal advancement. The enormous extent of territory in the possession of the family, stretching right across Scotland from sea to sea, is proof of inherited worldly wisdom. In 1715 the Duke of Argyle led the Government army; his kinsman, Breadalbane, the second great branch of the family, hedged and made himself safe whatever might happen. He secretly arranged with the rebels to bring twelve hundred active men on the field, but only three hundred arrived, and they merely surveyed the battle from a distance. When the war was over Breadalbane claimed a reward from the Government for having prevented his men taking part in the rebellion. It was an ingenious device to claim compensation for benevolent neutrality. Breadalbane is described thus by a contemporary—‘of fair complexion and has the gravity of a Spaniard, is as cunning as a fox, wise as a serpent, and slippery as an eel.’ The celebrated Rob Roy—one of the clan—was a chip of the same block. He also was present at the battle of Sheriffmuir with his caterans. He sympathized with the Pretender, but was restrained from assisting the rebels, it is said, for fear of giving offence to his protector the Duke of Argyle. Rob stood on an eminence watching the progress of the battle as described in a stanza of one of the ballads. He was pressed to assist, but he coolly replied, ‘if they cannot do without me, they cannot do with me,’ and remained inactive. When the battle was over he and his followers impartially spoiled the wounded and dead on both sides, and went home laden with plunder.

The battle of Sheriffmuir practically closed the rebellion of 1715; when James arrived in the country and landed at Peterhead a few months later, his adherents were perplexed what to do with him, as they had no further plans for continuing the war, and the Pretender did not inspire the Highlanders with enthusiasm. As Burton observes, their principles of Royal Succession or Divine right of reigning were never very strong unless the personal character or appearance of the monarch coincided with these decrees of Providence. In this case they saw a small wizened man, listless, feeble, inanimate, with a body shaken by dissipation. This representative of the old race of the fair-haired Stuarts, was a little dark-complexioned man. They took unkindly to him from the first time they saw him, and in less than three months from landing on the shores of Scotland, he had embarked and returned to France. The following scurrilous description of his defects and suspected spurious origin extracted from a contemporary pamphlet, is worth reproduction, and shows that the Whigs were not altogether devoid of humour as has so often been alleged. ‘Whereas one James Stewart, alias Oglethrope, alias Chevalier, alias Pretender, alias King, alias No King; neither Caesar nor Nullus; neither a man nor a mouse, a man’s man nor a woman’s man, nor a statesman, nor a little man, nor a great man, neither Englishman nor Frenchman, but a mongrelion between both; neither wise nor otherwise; neither soldier nor sailor, nor cardinal: without father or mother, without friend or foe, without foresight or aftersight, without brains or bravery, without house or home, made in the figure of a man, but just alive and that’s all; hath clandestinely lately eloped from his friends through a back door and has not been seen or heard of since . . . and whereas the said alias pretended to come here, to watch and fight, to bring men and money with him to train an army and march at the head of them, to fight battles and besiege towns, but in reality did none of these, but skulked and whined, and speeched and cried, stole to his head quarters by night, went away before morning, and having smelled gunpowder and dreamed of an enemy, burnt the country and ran away by the light of it,’ &c. &c.

It is a common remark that all the wit and humour of the Jacobite period was confined to the supporters of the Stuarts. This is scarcely correct, for any one can see some good Whiggish songs in Political Merriment, London, 1714.

Several well-known ballads exist on the battle of Sheriffmuir. The oldest, consisting of twenty-one stanzas and a chorus, in Herd’s Scots Songs, 1769, 267, was written immediately after the battle, and the names of some of those satirized are indicated by initials. Burns ascribed it to the Rev. Murdoch McLennan, minister of Crathie. The ballad is in Hogg's Jacobite Relics, 1821, ii. 1, with three additional stanzas by himself.

A later version beginning Pray came you here the fight to shun, was written by another minister, the Rev. John Barclay, of Muthill in Perthshire. Barclay's ballad is entitled in the stall copies A dialogue between Will Lickladle and Tom Cleancogue, to the tune of the 'Cameron's March.' This was the ballad which Burns imitated and amended. He told the publisher of the Museum that the old words did not quite please him. A third ballad is entitled From Bogie Side, or The Marquis's Raide.

The London fugitive press was quite as active on Sheriffmuir, but it is dull compared with the specimens quoted. A dialogue between his Grace the Duke of Argyle and the Earl of Mar begins 'Argyle and Mar are gone to war.' One of the two woodcuts on the sheet represents a kilted Scot riding woman-fashion, and playing the Scotch fiddle, i.e. scratching himself. A second is an excellent new ballad entitled Mar's lament for his rebellion; and a third The Clan's lamentation for their own folly. All three are dated 1715.

Cameronian Rant is a strathspey tune of considerable merit, and admirably adapted for expressing the humorous verses. It is in Bremner's Reels, 1761, 82; in Stewart's Reels, 1761, 6; it is entitled The Cameronian's Reel in McGlashan's Strathspey Reels, 1780, 16; in Campbell's Reels, 1778, 16; and Aird's Airs, 1782, i. No. 107. In Bremner's Reels, 1759, 49, is another spirited reel tune entitled Will ye go to Sheriffmuir. A third, different from either, is in Hogg's Jacobite Relics, 1821, ii. 250, but Cameronian Rant is the best of the three.

No. 281. Ye Jacobites by name. Scots Musical Museum, 1792, No. 371. The MS. is in the British Museum. A pithy ironical satire couched in equivocal terms which may be read by either Whig or Tory.

The tune is a good English specimen inserted in Dufey's Pills, 1719, vi. 251, with a song beginning A young man and a maid. Stenhouse quotes the title of a song, 'You've all heard of Paul Jones have you not, have you not,' sung to the melody in the eighteenth century in Edinburgh. The fame of Paul Jones was extended by means of songs and broadsides from Seven Dials and elsewhere, after the buccaneer's visit to the East coast of Scotland in 1779. In one of his manuscripts Burns quotes an alternative title of the tune Up black-nebs a', evidently as belonging to a song now unknown.

No. 282. O, Kenmure's on and awa', Willie. Scots Musical Museum, 1792, No. 359. This song is in the Edinburgh Edition, 1877 and Centenary Edition, 1897, and although there is no reasonable doubt that Burns contributed these verses to the Museum, the authority for that rests solely on Stenhouse, who, in his Illustrations, says: 'Burns transmitted the ballad to Johnson in his own handwriting, with the melody to which it is adapted.' There is no mark in any edition of the Museum connecting Burns with the song, nor do I know where the manuscript is. Cromek was not aware that Burns wrote the verses, and inserted them in Nithsdale and Galloway Song, 1810, with three stanzas which he pretended were old. With these additions it is reprinted in modern collections of Jacobite song as belonging to the Rebellion of 1715. The confirmation of Stenhouse's assertion is desirable. Neither the words nor the melody can be traced before publication in the Museum. The verses and music in the Appendix of Ritson's Scottish Songs, 1794, are an exact copy from the Museum. Sir Walter Scott, in a letter April 3, 1820, represented Lady Huntley playing Kenmure's on and awa', Willie, in a way enough to raise the whole country side.

Viscount Kenmure, the hero of the song, led the chevalier's army of the South-west of Scotland. He surrendered at Preston, and was marched through the streets of London to the Tower, accompanied by a howling mob with tin kettles and other musical instruments of a like sort. He was condemned and beheaded on February 24, 1716.

*No. 283. When we gaed to the braes o' Mar. Scots Musical Museum, 1788, No. 188. The MS. is in the British Museum. In the Interleaved Museum Burns describes how he obtained the verses, as follows: 'This edition of the song I got from Tom Niel, of facetious fame in Edinburgh. The expression "Up and warn a' Willie" alludes to the Crantara, or warning of a Highland clan to arms. Not understanding this, the Lowlanders of the west and south say, "Up and waur them a'," &c. It is now impossible to discover what alterations or amendments Burns made, but the verses in the text contain many variations from the original song of seven stanzas in The Charming, 1752, i. 61, signed 'B. G.'; of which the following is the first stanza:—

'When we went to the field of war,
And to the weaponshaw, Willy,
With true design to stand our ground,
And chase our faes awa, Willy;
Lairds and lords came there bedeen,
And vow gin they were pra', Willy,
Up and war 'em a', Willy;
War 'em a', war 'em a', Willy.'

The song belongs to the Rebellion of 1715, and is one of the Sheriffmuir satires, in which both sides are treated in an impartial manner.

The tune is in the Caledonian Pocket Companion, 1751, iii. 1; Bremner's Reels, 1759, 60; M^eLean's Scots Tunes, c. 1772, 29; and in Johnson's Museum, 1788, as in the text. It contains the 'Scotch snap' in its best form so inordinately imitated by foreign composers.

No. 284. Here's a health to them that's awa. Partly in Cromek's Reliques, 1808, 429, entitled Song: patriotic-unfinished. MS. in the British Museum. Written when Burns had the Revolutionary fever about the end of 1792, and sent to Captain William Johnston, the editor of the new Edinburgh Gazetteer, who had started the periodical on 'progressive' principles. Johnston was subsequently charged with a treasonable conspiracy, and imprisoned. At this time Burns was suspected of holding opinions hostile to the Constitution, and it was alleged that he had proposed the following toast at a public meeting—'Here's the last verse of the last chapter of the last Book of Kings.'

Here's a health to them that's awa is founded on a Jacobite ballad of which Hogg has a copy in Jacobite Reliques, 1819, i. 50. The tune does not appear to have been printed before being set to a stanza of the ballad contributed by Burns to the Scots Musical Museum, 1796, No. 412. The music resembles that of song No. 282.

No. 285. Wha in a brulzie. Scots Musical Museum, 1796, No. 475. The MS. is in the British Museum. Framed on a seventeenth century ballad which may be seen in Jacobite Relics, 1819, i. 20. Hogg got it probably from Myln's manuscript. It is a trenchant satire on the Whigs and Covenanters, reputedly written by Lord Newbottle in 1688. He was a professional politician, who believed that it was necessary for him to live, and acted on the principle that—

'A merciful Providence fashioned us holler
A purpose that we might our principles swaller.'

He changed from Whig to Tory, was made a Chief Justice, and Lord High Commissioner of the Kirk he had reviled. He died the first Marquis of Lothian. He sketches and satirizes in his ballad about forty of the principal Whigs of his time. I quote two stanzas as a specimen of the verse from Maidment's Scottish Pasquils, 1868, 328.

'Next comes our statesmen, these blessed reformers,
For lying, for drinking, for swearing enormous;
Argyle and brave Morton, and Willie my Lordie—
Bannocks of bear meal, cakes of Crowdly.
My curse on the grain of this hale reformation,
The reproach of mankind, and disgrace of our nation;
Deil hash them, deil smash them, and make them a souidy,
Knead them like bannocks, and steer them like crowdly.'

A satirical song on an Argyle of the eighteenth century with the title Bannocks o' barley meal is in Herd's Scots Songs, 1769, 280; and in Herd MS. is a rhyme of the seventeenth century:—

'Mass David Williamson,
Chosen of twenty,
Gaed up to the pulpit
And sang Killiecrankie.

Saw ye e'er, heard ye e'er
Siccan a soudie?
Bannocks o' bear meal,
Cakes o' crowdie!'

The tune The killogie was kept in use by a rustic song beginning 'A lad and a lassie lay on a killogie.' The verses are neither edifying nor instructive. The tune rejoiced in a variety of names. It is Bonox of bear meal in Sinkler's MS., 1710; as Johnny and Nelly in Orpheus Caledonius, 1725, No. 21; as I'll never leave thee in Watts's Musical Miscellany, 1730, iv. 74; M^cGibbon's Scots Tunes, 1746, 8, to which Burns directed Johnson for the tune; and in the Scots Musical Museum, 1803, No. 507. Two settings are in the Caledonian Pocket Companion, 1751, iii. 6. One entitled Banoks of Bear meal, and the other in vol. vi. 1754, 26, as There was a lad and a lass in a killogie.

No. 286. The small birds rejoice. Thomson's Scottish Airs, 1790, 97. 'From a MS. by Robert Burns. Irish Air, Captain O'Kane.' Currie's Works, 1800, ii. 145. Several MSS. exist. On March 31, 1788, Burns wrote from Mauchline, to his friend James Cleghorn, farmer, as follows: 'Yesterday, as I was riding thro' a track of melancholy, joyless muirs, between Galloway and Ayrshire; it being Sunday, I turned my thoughts to psalms and hymns and spiritual songs; and your favourite air Captain O'Kane coming at length in my head, I tried these words to it. You will see that the first part of the tune must be repeated. I am tolerably pleased with these verses, but as I have only a sketch of the tune, I leave it with you to try if they suit the measure of the music.' Burns adopted Cleghorn's suggestion to complete the song with a Jacobite stanza, which is assumed to be sung by Prince Charles Stuart, after the Battle of Culloden. Some time early in 1793 he sent a complete copy of the song to Thomson.

The Irish tune Captain O'Kane is in M^cGlashan's Reels, 1786, 36; Aird's Airs, 1788, iii. No. 493; and Johnson's Museum, 1803, No. 508.

No. 287. My love was born in Aberdeen. Scots Musical Museum, 1790, No. 272, entitled The white cockade. In Law's MS. List, 'Mr. Burns's old words.' The flying stationers of last century printed the original, which Herd copied into his Scottish Songs, 1776, ii. 179. Burns by a few touches turned it into a decided Jacobite song. Here is the first stanza from Herd:—

'My love was born in Aberdeen,
The bonniest lad that e'er was seen;
O, he is forced from me to gae
Over the hills and far away.'

The words and music in our text are from the Museum. The tune is also in Campbell's Reels, 1778, 7; and in Aird's Airs, 1782, i. No. 1, entitled The ranting highlandman.

No. 288. The noble Maxwells and their powers. Scots Musical Museum, 1792, No. 364, signed 'R,' entitled Nithsdale's welcome home. MS. in the British Museum. Lady Winnifred Maxwell Constable was the granddaughter of the rebel Earl of Nithsdale who escaped from the Tower by his wife's ingenuity and bravery. Lady Winnifred rebuilt in 1788 Terreagles House, the ancient seat of the family, where Burns dined more than once, and was impressed by the number of wax candles used in lighting the house. Sir Walter Scott sent a letter to Lockhart dated July 14, 1828, on Burns's connexion with Jacobitism in which he says: 'I see, by the by, that your life of Burns is going to press again, and therefore send you a few letters, which may be of use to you. In one of them (to that singular old curmudgeon, Lady Winnifred Constable) you will see he plays high Jacobite, and on that account it is curious; though I imagine his Jacobitism, like my own, belonged to the fancy rather than the reason,' &c.

The tune Nithsdale's welcome home is the composition of Robert Riddell of Glenriddell, one of his best melodies. It is in neither of his printed collections of tunes, but the following unpublished Note in the Interleaved Museum is in his handwriting, 'I composed the tune and imparting to my friend Mr. Burns the name I meant to give it, he composed for the tune the words here inserted.'

No. 289. My Harry was a gallant gay. Scots Musical Museum, 1790, No. 209. Tune, Highlander's lament. The MS. copy in the British Museum is not in Burns's handwriting, and it contains two stanzas not in the Scots Musical Museum. The additional stanzas refer to The auld Stewarts back again, a different tune to that in the text. In Law's MS. List, 'Mr. B—'s old words.' This and Nos. 292 and 297 are reminiscences of the Highland tour. 'The oldest title I ever heard to this air was The Highland Watch's farewell to Ireland. The chorus I picked up from an old woman in Dumblane; the rest of the song is mine' (Interleaved Museum). The 42nd regiment, or Black Watch, was quartered in different parts of Ireland for seven years between 1749 and 1756, and the latter year may be taken as the date of the tune which is entitled Highland Watch's farewell to Ireland in Stewart's Reels, 1762, 27, and as Highlander's farewell in Ross's Reels, 1780, 10.

No. 290. An somebody were come again. Scots Musical Museum, 1790, No. 239. Tune, Carl, an the King come. Stenhouse is the sole authority for the statement that Burns wrote only the second stanza, but nothing is known of any early song of the kind. For the tune, Allan Ramsay wrote verses entitled The promised Joy, in the first volume of the Tea-Table Miscellany, 1724. A song in the 'Gentle Shepherd'—Peggy, now the King's come—is on the same page of the Museum as Carl, an the King come. Ritson could throw no light on the words, and on Burns's song in Scottish Songs, 1794, ii. 47, he quotes a fragment thus:—

'When yellow corn grows on the rigs,
And a gibbet's made to hang the Whigs,
O, then we will dance Scottish jigs,
Carle, an the king come.'

The tune was exceedingly popular in the eighteenth century. It is in most of the best collections of Scottish music, including Ramsay's Musick, c. 1726; Oswald's Companion, 1754, vi. 15; and McGibbon's Scots Tunes, 1755, 16. A considerable variation had taken place in the melody since the middle of the eighteenth century. The old form ends on the minor in the last two collections named. In the text the second part of the tune is an octave lower than that of the copy in the Museum.

No. 291. Sir John Cope trode the north right far. This is the first time that Johnie Cope has been inserted in the works of Burns. His name was incidentally connected with it by Stenhouse, and it is necessary to produce the evidence for its insertion here. It is the original of three different ballads, and its anonymous publication in the Scots Musical Museum, 1790, No. 234, preceded the other two by four years. As may be seen in the facsimile of Law's MS., Burns marked it 'Sir John Cope trode the North &c.—Mr. Burns's old words.' The MS. of the song is at present unknown, but it is certain that he contributed it to Johnson's Museum. I was puzzled to reconcile this fact with his note in Cromek's Reliques, 1808, 272, until I discovered from an examination of the Interleaved Museum that the first portion of the note in Cromek was not written by Burns but by Robert Riddell thus: 'This satirical song was composed to commemorate General Cope's defeat at Preston Pans in 1745, when he marched against the Clans.' So far Riddell obviously did not know that Burns had anything to do with the verses; and the poet did not inform him in the studiously vague addition to the note which follows in his own handwriting: 'The air was the tune of an old song, of which I have heard some verses, but now only remember the title, which was Will you go to the coals in the morning?' This forgotten song, consisting of eight stanzas and a chorus very different from that in our text, was published as a foot-note in Ritson's Scottish Songs, 1794, ii. 84, beginning 'Coup sent a challenge frae Dunbar,' the chorus ending with the title quoted by Burns. Ritson on the same page has printed a different song of nine stanzas without chorus, opening with the same line as the other, and he remarks that the version in the Museum 'is a copy differing very much from both.' Stenhouse confused matters by asserting that Adam Skirving, the author of the song Tranent Muir, wrote also Johnie Cope of the Museum; but Ritson, who published his collection nearly thirty years before Stenhouse's Illustrations were issued, and took infinite pains over his works, was ignorant of the author of Johnie Cope, and expressed a wish to know who wrote any of the three songs. On Stenhouse's unverified statement Skirving's name is repeated as the author to this day. Much of Johnie Cope is carelessly written in faulty rhyme, but the sarcastic verses and the rollicking melody have perpetuated the song; and the common-place knight Sir John Cope would long ere this have passed into oblivion but for the song. His circular march through the North of Scotland in 1745 and return voyage to Dunbar; his defeat at Gladsmuir, Preston Pans, or Tranent Muir are better known than the career of more distinguished men. Burns did not admire the air Johnie Cope, and his verses are in evidence as a reason why he did not acknowledge them except in the MS. List for the Museum. The tune is in Oswald's Companion, 1759, ix. 11; McLean's Scots Tunes, c. 1772, 23; Aird's Airs, 1782, ii. No. 52; and in Johnson's Museum as in the text.

No. 292. Loud blow the frosty breezes. Scots Musical Museum, 1788, No. 143, entitled the Young highland rover, signed 'R.' Tune, Morag. The MS. is in the British Museum and the song is in Thomson's Scottish Airs, 1799, 67. On September 7, 1787, Burns and his companion, being in the neighbourhood of Castle Gordon, the poet called on the Duke and Duchess, who received him with the greatest kindness and hospitality. He dined with the company at the Castle, and was pressed to remain, but he was obliged to refuse as he had left Nicol at Fochaber's Inn. The Duke sent a special messenger to invite Nicol to the Castle, but the irascible Schoolmaster had already exhausted his small stock of patience, and bluntly declined the invitation. Burns found him pacing in front of the Inn with a carriage and horses ready to start. The poet subsequently described himself 'as travelling with a blunderbuss at full cock,' and this time it went off. Writing afterwards to the Duke's librarian, he said: 'I shall certainly, among my legacies, leave my latest curse to that unlucky predicament which hurried—tore me from Castle Gordon. May that obstinate son of Latin prose be curst to Scotch-mile periods, and damned to seven-leagued paragraphs; while Declension and Conjugation, Gender, Number, and Tense, under the ragged banners of Dissonance and Disarrangement, eternally rank against him in hostile array.' According to Stenhouse the song was written to commemorate the visit of Prince Charles Stuart to Castle Gordon, before his defeat at Culloden.

The tune Morag is a Celtic air justly admired by Burns. In 1794 he wrote to George Thomson, that this song was not worthy of the air. It is very little known and ought to be popular, if only on account of the melody. When sending a copy of the Museum containing the song to Rose of Kilravock and to the Duke's librarian, Burns spoke of the melody in enthusiastic terms. The tune is in Dow's Scots Music, c. 1776, 46. A bad copy is in Fraser's Highland Airs, No. 119. See No. 98.

No. 293. My heart is wae, and unco wae. Chambers's Edition, 1852. Tune, Mary's Dream. A facsimile is in the Centenary Edition, 1897, iv. 90. It is supposed to have been written immediately after the receipt of the news of the supposed marriage of Miss Walkinshaw with Prince Charles Stuart, who declared the legitimization of his daughter by a formal deed, registered in France in December, 1787. On his death the year following the putative Duchess of Albany was assumed to be his sole heir. The verses are more than a sentimental effusion of Jacobitism. The tune Mary's Dream is the composition of John Lowe, a minor poet, and the author of the song Mary, weep no more for me. Lowe, the son of a gardener to the Earl of Kenmore, was born in Galloway in the year 1750. At the age of fourteen he was apprenticed to a weaver; he educated himself, and entered the University of Edinburgh as a student of Divinity. He is said to have written a tragedy, was a skilful musician, and a player on the violin. He died in America in 1798. Kirkpatrick Sharpe severely censured Allan Cunningham for mutilating Lowe's song. All the mischief done by 'Honest Allan' as a literary forger will never be discovered.

The tune Mary's Dream is from the Perth Musical Miscellany, 1786, 96, where it is printed with Lowe's verses. The music is also in the Museum, 1787, No. 37; Calliope, 1788, 16; and Aird's Airs, 1788, iii. No. 480.

No. 294. Come boat me o'er, come row me o'er. Scots Musical Museum, 1788, ii. No. 187. The MS. is in the British Museum. This is a version which, according to Stenhouse, was revised and corrected by Burns. The refrain slightly varied belongs to the Jacobite events of 1745. The loyalist collections of the period contain several songs of the kind, but no model of this one is known. For note on the tune, see No. 230.

No. 295. O, I am come to the low countrie. Scots Musical Museum, 1796, No. 498, entitled The Highland widow's lament. The MS. is in the British Museum. This, or the germ of it is supposed to have been obtained from the Highlands. The sentiment of the verses is noble, the loss of flocks and herds is not considered of any consequence compared with the defence of the rightful heir to the throne. On a different song, Oh ono chrìo, i.e. Lament for the chief in the Museum, 1787, No. 89, Burns wrote the following note: 'Dr. Blacklock informed me that this song was composed on the infamous massacre of Glencoe' (Interleaved Museum). Burns contributed the melody of his song to the Museum where it was first printed. Schumann was impressed with the simple phrases and took them as the theme of an original composition for the verses of Burns. It is in his Liederkreis, Op. 25.

No. 296. It was a' for our rightfu' king. Scots Musical Museum, 1796, No. 497. These stirring and romantic verses were from the hand of Burns, and Stenhouse first connected his name with them. Cunningham and afterwards Hogg and Motherwell inserted them in the Works of Burns, and finally Scott-Douglas, in the Edinburgh Edition, 1877, iii. 192, produced a facsimile of the Burns MS. A ballad which Motherwell printed in 1834 is the foundation of Burns's verses. But the original is a street ballad, Mally Stuart, supposed to belong to the Rebellion of 1745 (see Centenary Burns, vol. iii.) which was reproduced in Chap books with considerable variations, and was popular in the streets of Edinburgh at the close of the eighteenth century. The only stanza which Burns borrowed is the last one in the ballad from a contemporary Chap book in my possession, as follows:—

‘The trooper turned himself round about
All on the Irish shore;
He has gi'en the bridle reins a shake,
Saying, “Adieu for evermore, my dear”;
Saying, “Adieu for evermore.”’

The rest of Burns's song owes nothing to the original, except the rhythm. The street ballad of Bonny Mally Stuart of ‘bonny Stirling town’ in eleven stanzas, remarkable for its disregard of metre, describes the parting of the trooper with his sweetheart who, however, disguises herself in men's clothes and follows him.

The tune Mally Stuart is a variation of The bailiff's daughter of Islington, an English melody of the seventeenth century. In the black letter copies this ballad is directed to be sung to a North country tune, or I have a good old mother at home.

No. 207. Thickest night, surround my dwelling. Scots Musical Museum, 1788, No. 132, signed ‘B’: to the Tune, Strathallan's lament. The MS. is in the British Museum. Burns passed through Strathallan on August 28, 1787; shortly afterwards he wrote the song. William Drummond, Viscount Strathallan, was killed at Culloden. His son James, Viscount Strathallan, on whom the song was written, was attainted, and after the disastrous rout of the Chevalier's army fled to the hills, where he hid until he found an opportunity of escaping to France. He joined the Court of Prince Charles, remained abroad, and died an exile. From the Rebellion to the end of the eighteenth century almost every poet wrote Jacobite songs more or less sympathetic. Burns made the following memorandum on Strathallan's lament: ‘This air is the composition of one of the worthiest and best-hearted men living—Allan Masterton, School Master in Edinburgh. As he and I were both sprouts of Jacobitism, we agreed to dedicate the words and air to that cause. To tell the matter of fact, except when my passions were heated by some accidental cause, my Jacobitism was merely by way of vive la bagatelle’ (Interleaved Museum). The accidental causes were frequent, and he never wrote anything on the Hanover family to show he had any affection for it.

Another MS. of the song differs from that in the text. The first line is ‘Thickest darkness o'erhang my dwelling,’ and the first half of the second stanza is as follows:—

‘Farewell fleeting, fickle treasure,
Between mishap and folly shar'd;
Farewell peace and farewell pleasure,
Farewell flattering man's regard.’

The melody cannot be mistaken for an old air.

No. 208. There grows a bonie brier-bush in our kail-yard. Scots Musical Museum, 1796, No. 492, marked ‘Z.’ Centenary Burns, 1897, iii. 180. The MS. in Burns's handwriting is in the British Museum. This is supposed to be an old song with alterations, but nothing of it is known prior to Burns's manuscript. Stenhouse, as the earliest commentator, need only be referred to: ‘This song, with the exception of a few lines which are old, was written by Burns for the Museum. . . . Burns likewise communicated the air to which the words are adapted’ (Illust. p. 432). I can find no song of the kind in any of the many collections examined. From the verses of Burns a pungent critic branded the modern school of Scottish sentimental fiction ‘Kail-yard literature.’ Baroness Nairne wrote an imitation of The bonie brier-bush, and in the Scottish Minstrel, 1821, i. 22, is a combination of Burns and Nairne, which is stated in the Index to be by Burns. The original publication of the tune is in the Museum with the verses, but it contains phrases of an older tune.

No. 299. The lovely lass of Inverness. Scots Musical Museum, 1796, No. 401, signed 'B.' Select Melodies, 1823, v. 17. 'Mr. Burns's old words' (Museum M.S. Lists). The M.S. is in the British Museum. All but the opening four lines are by Burns, and form one of his best songs on a subject which deeply interested him. The Battle of Culloden, or Drumossie Moor, fought on April 16, 1746, finished the career of Charles Edward Stuart in Scotland. William, Duke of Cumberland, the Commander of the government army, was the most detested name in Scotland for half a century, and the subject of the strongest invective in prose and verse. Cromek, in Nithsdale and Galloway Song, 1810, published Cumberland and Murray's descent into Hell, reprinted in Hogg's Jacobite Relics, 1821, ii. 199. It is unsurpassed for brutal sarcasm, and I suspect was written either by Hogg or Cunningham. Burns visited the field of Culloden in 1787, and in his diary of the Highland tour he has recorded his reflections on the final disaster of the Stuarts.

It may be remarked here that it was owing to the Rebellion that God save the king was first publicly performed and recognized as a national air. In September, 1745, it was sung in chorus from the stage of the London theatres, and the Duke of Cumberland was honoured with a complete stanza:—

'O, grant that Cumberland
May, by his mighty hand,
 Victory bring;
May he sedition hush,
And like a torrent rush,
Rebellious hearts to crush,
 God save the king.'

The news of the defeat at Culloden arrived at Covent Garden theatre during a performance, which was interrupted while the actors sung the anthem.

The tune The lovely lass of Inverness, originally published in 1740, is the composition of James Oswald, and is in the Caledonian Pocket Companion, 1743, i. 9. Johnson, of the Scots Musical Museum, originally intended it for a song beginning 'Upon the flowery banks of Tweed,' but Burns directed his own song for it, and so it was printed.

No. 300. Whare hae ye been sae braw, lad? Scots Musical Museum, 1790, No. 292, signed 'Z,' entitled Killiecrankie. There is nothing directly connecting Burns with this song. The note in the Interleaved Museum, written by Robert Riddell, is only historical. Stenhouse says, 'The chorus is old. The rest of it, beginning Whare hae ye been sae braw, lad, was written in 1789 by Burns on purpose for the Museum' (Illustrations, p. 287). No one has disputed this statement. In the Highland tour, Burns passed through Killiecrankie on August 31, 1787.

Killiecrankie is represented as a malignant song in Scotch Presbyterian Eloquence Display'd, a contemporary publication. The battle took place on July 27, 1689, in the celebrated pass which Burton, the historian, describes as the most picturesque of Scottish battlefields. Here John Claverhouse, the darling of the Cavaliers and the accursed of the Covenanters, was killed. The Highlanders won, but the loss of Claverhouse ('Clavers got a clankie, O') and Haliburton, of Pitcur, outweighed the gain, and the cause of James VII declined from that time.

The tune An' ye had been where I hae been is a different melody from Killiecrankie, No. 256 supra, to which Burns drew the attention of Johnson. The music is in Mc Gibbon's Scots Tunes, 1755, 34; in the Caledonian Pocket Companion, 1758, ix. 18; Aird's Airs, 1782, ii. No. 57. The title is clearly part of the words of the old song which Burns rewrote or amended. In Leyden's MS., 1692, the tune is styled Killie Crankie; and a phrase of My mistres blush is bonie in the Skene MS., c. 1630, is a part of the air.

No. 301. The bonniest lad that e'er I saw. Scots Musical Museum, 1796, No. 468. Centenary Burns, 1877, iii. 172, is in the British Museum. This sprig of militant Jacobitism is a revised version of a small portion of a long song of the 1745 period with the additional first stanza by Burns. The tune is entitled If thou'lt play me fair play from the first line of a song in Loyal Songs, 1750. The music is earlier than the Rebellion of 1745. It is in Oswald's Curious Scots Tunes, 1742; in the Caledonian Pocket Companion, 1743, i. 36, without a title; in Bremner's Scots Reels, 1759, 47; Campbell's Reels, 1778, 70; Aird's Airs, 1782, i. No. 32. It is corrupted in the Scots Musical Museum, 1796, No. 468.

No. 302. By yon Castle wa' at the close of the day. Scots Musical Museum, 1792, No. 315. The MS. is in the British Museum. A copy was sent to Alexander Cunningham, Edinburgh, on March 12, 1791, in a letter, in which Burns says: 'You must know a beautiful Jacobite air There'll never be peace till Jamie comes hame. When political combustion ceases to be the object of princes and patriots, it then, you know, becomes the lawful prey of historians and poets. If you like the air, and if the stanzas hit your fancy, you cannot imagine, my dear friend, how much you would oblige me if, by the charms of your delightful voice, you would give my honest effusion to "the memory of joys that are past" to the few friends whom you indulge in that pleasure.'

The following note is in the Interleaved Museum by Burns. 'This tune is sometimes called "There's few good fellows when Jamie's awa,"—but I never have been able to meet with anything else of the song than the title.' The song referred to is unknown; it was on the Stuarts, and was probably suppressed.

The tune is in Oswald's Curious Scots Tunes, 1740, 22, and the same publisher's Caledonian Pocket Companion, 1743, i. 20, with the title as in the text; and in M^cGibbon's Scots Tunes, 1742, 30, entitled There'll never be peace till Jamie comes hame. See No. 21 supra.

No. 303. I hae been at Crookieden. Scots Musical Museum, 1792, No. 332, entitled Bonie laddie, highland laddie. The MS. is in the British Museum. This, with Nos. 301 and 306, is representative of a large class common to the eighteenth century which exercised considerable influence on the politics of the country. The present song appeared in Hogg's Jacobite Relics, 1821, ii. 202, considerably enlarged probably by Hogg, who let himself go in very violent language. A very inoffensive model of Burns is in a MS. of the period to which the song refers. 'Willie' and 'the Duke' of the text are the Duke of Cumberland, who is represented in Satan's hall waiting to be roasted and basted.

The tune, according to Mr. Glen, is in Rutherford's Country Dances, 1749, as The new highland laddie; it is in Oswald's Companion, 1754, vi. 1, entitled The old highland laddie as marked by Burns on the MS. of his verses.

No. 304. 'Twas on a Monday morning. Scots Musical Museum, 1796, No. 428, entitled Charlie he's my darling. No signature, initial, or note. 'Written for this work by Robert Burns,' so often attached to songs in the later issues of Johnson's Museum, indicates the source, but there can be no doubt that the holograph of Burns in the British Museum is the original manuscript of the verses. No trace of any such song, not even a title, is in the musical and other Collections of Scottish song, and presumably Charlie he's my darling is a pure original. Stenhouse, in Illustrations, 1839, first connected Burns in these words: 'Twas on a Monday morning' was communicated by Burns to the editor of the Museum. The air was modernized by Clarke. The reader will find a genuine copy of the old air in Hogg's Jacobite Relics, 1821, ii. 92.' On this I may remark that Stenhouse is not known to have had a personal acquaintance with Clarke, the musical editor of the Museum, and that Stenhouse himself communicated to Hogg the 'genuine copy of the air' which consists principally in leaving out the accidental sharps. The modern set of the air differs from that of the original as in our text.

No. 305. Frae the friends and land I love. Scots Musical Museum, 1792, No. 302. Tune, Carron side. The MS. is in the British Museum. The first of a series of Jacobite songs printed in the fourth volume of the Museum. In the Interleaved Museum Burns says of the present verses: 'I added the four last lines by way of giving a turn to the theme of the poem, such as it is.' No other song of the kind has been discovered, and I have failed to find it. The present verses were printed in the Museum with a bad copy of the tune Carron side. The music in the text is taken from the Caledonian Pocket Companion, c. 1756, viii. 10, there designated 'a plaintive air,' which was originally published in 1740.

No. 306. As I came o'er the Cairney mount. Scots Musical Museum, 1796, No. 467, signed 'Z.' Centenary Burns, 1897, iii. 171. The MS. is in the British Museum. The fragment is a much revised version of an old song of four stanzas in the Merry Muses. The tune was first printed as The highland lassie in Oswald's Curious Collection of Scots Tunes, 1740, 37; it is in Caledonian Pocket Companion, 1743, i. 12; in McGibbon's Scots Tunes, 1742, 13 it is entitled The highland laddie, one of the numerous tunes of the name. The editor of the Museum copied the music from Aird's Airs, iii. No. 164 as Burns directed on his manuscript. In the Interleaved Museum the note of Burns is: 'The first and indeed the most beautiful set of this tune was formerly, and in some places is still, known by the name of As I cam o'er the Cairney mount, which is the first line of an excellent but somewhat licentious song still sung to the tune.' This is the whole of the note written by Burns which Cromek has expanded and garbled in Reliques, 1808, pp. 207 and 208.

IX: MISCELLANEOUS.

No. 307. The sun he is sunk in the west. Chambers, Works, 1852, entitled 'Song:—In the character of a ruined farmer. Tune, Go from my window, love, do.' The MS. of this doleful ditty in the handwriting of Burns, refers to the early farming distress, and represents his father as a 'brave man struggling with adversity.' The metre is peculiar and uncommon for Scottish verse, but it was constructed for a tune which Burns however, at a later time, is said to have communicated to the editor of the Scots Musical Museum, accompanied by some traditional verses. See Appendix, 'As I lay on my bed on a night.'

No. 308. There was a lad was born in Kyle. Cromek's Reliques, 1808, 341, entitled 'Fragment. Tune, Dainty Davie.' This is one of the best known and most popular of Burns's songs, and his note on the MS. of the second stanza states 'the date of my Bardship's vital existence.' He sent a parody of it to Mrs. Dunlop, of which the following is the first stanza in the Second Commonplace Book:—

'There was a birkie born in Kyle,
But what na day, o' what na style,
I doubt its hardly worth the while
To be sae nice wi' Davie.
Leeze me on thy curly pow,
Bonie Davie, dainty Davie;
Leeze me on thy curly pow,
Thou'se ay my Dainty Davie.'

Burns obtained the rhythm and style from an old song which he copied into the Merry Muses. The chorus there is almost the same as the last four lines above. Rantin rovin Robin was not printed in the poet's lifetime, nor in either of the musical collections with which he was identified. John Templeton, a tenor of the Italian Opera, and Scottish vocalist, brought the song into public notice; but instead of singing it to the tune for which Burns wrote it, he selected O, an ye were dead, gudeman (see No. 249), to which it is almost always printed and sung. Burns, in discussing the tune elsewhere, particularly states that the chorus of Dainty Davie is to be sung to the low part of the melody, which is in Playford's Dancing Master, 1680, 293, and without title in Sinkler's MS., 1710. In the Tea-Table Miscellany, 1724, Allan Ramsay's song Lucky Nansy is marked for the tune.

The Rev. David Williamson, who died in 1706, is always stated to be the original Dainty Davie, but that is very doubtful, and perhaps it would be more correct to say that he obtained the soubriquet from the tune. In Dr. Pitcaim's comedy The Assembly he is represented as Solomon Cherry-Trees, and in the bitter and indecent pasquils he is styled Stout David, Sweet David, Mr. David, and sometimes bare Davie, but never Dainty Davie except in the ballad The Cardinal's Coach Coup'd, 1710. In the last stanza of this ballad in Maidment's New Book of Old Ballads he is called Dainty Davie, but curiously enough that stanza is not in the copy in a contemporary manuscript by the Rev. W. Traill. In this MS. there is a second part of The Cardinal's Coach Coup'd which has not yet been reprinted. The connexion with the tune seems to have arisen from a crazy man dancing and singing Dainty Davie on the road while Dr. Williamson one Sunday was proceeding to the Church in Aberdeen. The incident is related by Wodrow. The song in the Merry Muses quoted above is founded on the unauthenticated adventure related by Captain Creighton and published by Dean Swift—the well-known chestnut of Mass David Williamson who, flying from his persecutors and being pursued by dragoons, took refuge in the bed of the daughter of the Laird of Cherrytrees, whom he afterwards married. He was a Boanerges of the Kirk: he married and buried six wives, and married a seventh who buried him. For a fragment in the Herd MS. see Note, No. 285. The nationality of the music is disputed. Chappell claimed it as English, but curiously enough did not insert it in his collection, although it is conspicuously a good melody. It has been set only once to English verses that I know of, and the nationality is there settled in A New Song made to a pretty Scotch Tune in Durfey's Pills, 1719, i. 42; Dainty Davie is also in McGibbon's Scots Tunes, 1746, 32; Caledonian Pocket Companion, 1753, v. 22; and in other collections, including the Scots Musical Museum, 1787, No. 34. I understand that it is in the sixth edition of the Dancing Master, and again in the edition of 1701 and also in Sinkler's MS., 1710, without title.

No. 309. Is there for honest poverty? A Chap book, Stewart and Meikle, Glasgow, 1799. Currie, Works, 1800, iv. 216, entitled For a' that an' a' that. Thomson's Scottish Airs, 1805, 163. This has probably won more fame for Burns beyond the seas than any other of his writings, and it has been translated into at least nine different European languages. At the time it was written the Continent was in commotion; the democratic opinions pervading France had extended to other countries, and the mute masses had found a voice. The vulgar opinion of the politics of Burns is far from the truth; he was no believer in universal suffrage nor in any of the cant of the party politician. He despised all mobs, washed or unwashed. He held the same opinion as the great composer Beethoven, who, when challenged as to his title to use the prefix of nobility in his name, declined to discuss the point, but pointed to his head and his heart, saying 'these are my titles of nobility.' The song was sent to Thomson in a letter, January 1, 1795, with this note:

'A great critic (Aikin) on songs says, that love and wine are the exclusive themes for song-writing. This is on neither subject, and consequently is no song; but will be allowed, I think, to be two or three pretty good prose thoughts inverted into rhyme.' He resumes the subject in a later part of the same letter: 'I do not give you the foregoing song for your book, but merely by way of vive la bagatelle; for the piece is not really poetry.'

The tune For a' that an' a' that has been continuously popular since the middle of the eighteenth century. In Loyal Songs, 1750, there is a Jacobite effusion for the tune, beginning 'Though Geordie reign in Jamie's stead,' which is reprinted in Ritson's Scottish Songs, 1794, ii. 102. The chorus is:—

'For a' that, and a' that,
And thrice as muckle's a' that;
He's far beyond the seas the night,
Yet he'll be here for a' that.'

In the Merry Muses is a broad vernacular beginning:—

'Put butter in my Donald's brose,
For weel does Donald fa' that;
I loe my Donald's tartans weel,' &c.

The tune is a close adaptation of Lady Macintosh's Reel, first printed in 1754, and afterwards in Bremner's Scots Reels, 1759, 52, for which see Song No. 252. The music is also in the Scots Musical Museum, 1790, No. 290, and Ritson's Scottish Songs, 1794, ii. 102. In Christie's Traditional Ballad Airs, 1888, ii. 36, is a set to a traditional Jacobite song He wears a bonnet for a hat, a variation of that in Loyal Songs with the same chorus. Christie states that his father got his air from the last representative of three generations of pipers called Jaffray.

No. 310. I dream'd I lay. 'These two stanzas I composed when I was seventeen and are among the oldest of my printed pieces' (Interleaved Museum). The MS. is in the British Museum. The song was originally published, and signed 'X' in Johnson's Museum, 1788, No. 146, with the original melody as in the text. In one of the Gray MSS. it appears that the tune was sent to Burns entitled One night I dream'd I lay most easy, and intended to be set to the words of another song. A marginal note by Johnson, the proprietor of the Museum (who like Chaucer could not spell!), is 'do not loss this, as I have not a nother copy. It is a pritty tune. J. J.' Burns drew his pen through the title, and inserted the first line of his own song. Accordingly, the air was set to his verses I dream'd I lay. The discarded song described by Burns as the second set of the Young man's dream, and written by an eccentric genius known as Balloon Tytler, was printed in the same volume of the Museum with a remodelled set of the tune. Burns's verses with the tune were reprinted in Napier's Scots Songs, 1792, ii. 88. Tom Moore adapted the music for his song 'As a beam o'er the face of the waters.'

No. 311. Farewell, ye dungeons dark and strong. Scots Musical Museum, 1788, No. 114, signed 'Z,' tune M^cPherson's farewell. The MS. is in the British Museum. No country in Europe has more increased in wealth during the last hundred and fifty years than Scotland. Four years prior to the time at which the original of M^cPherson's farewell is supposed to have been written—that is 1705—Scotland was so poor that the Government could not pay a Parliamentary grant of £400 Scots to James Anderson for writing an 'Historical Essay showing that the Crown and Kingdom of Scotland is Imperial and Independent,' Edinburgh 1705, in answer to Dr. Drake's offensive Historia Anglo-Scotica which the Parliament ordered to be burnt by the public hangman. Except between two or three of the principal towns in the Lowlands, there were no roads; that to Inverness for example being simply a footpath scarcely much better than those winding through Central Africa at the present day.

The story of James McPherson indicates the lawlessness and disorder at the time in the Highlands. He was the leader of one of the gangs of cattle-lifters which roamed over the Province of Moray, helping themselves to all the moveables they wanted. They were armed with matchlocks slung behind, and broad swords, or dirks by their sides, and visited fairs to discover who received money or goods, in order to waylay and despoil them. McPherson was a tall, handsome, powerful man, the son of a gentleman by a gipsy mother. His lineage and ability raised him to authority over his associates. He wore an enormous sword which at the time was almost out of date, and which in his hands was a formidable weapon of offence and defence. One of the Highland Chiefs—Duff of Braco—was conspicuously active in trying to root out the depredators, and put an end to brigandage; while on the other hand, the Laird of Grant protected the marauders, and undertook their defence. At the Keith fair, Duff and his assistants tried to seize the raiders, but they made a desperate resistance and Duff had a narrow escape with his life. McPherson and Peter Brown—the two leaders—were caught and locked up with a sentry over them. The Laird of Grant came to the rescue, and released the men, but shortly afterwards they were retaken, and on November 7, 1700, James McPherson, two Browns, and a Gordon were brought before the Sheriff of Banffshire charged with being ‘Egyptian rogues and vagabonds, of keeping the markets in their ordinary manner of thieving and purse-cutting, also, being guilty of masterful bangstrie and oppression.’ Grant, with much legal acumen, applied to have the Browns tried in the Court of his own regality, as they lived within his bounds, and offering Culreach or pledge for their appearance, but the application was refused. The evidence against the prisoners was complete; they had stolen sheep, oxen and horses; they had robbed many men of their purses, tyrannously oppressed poor people, and they spoke a peculiar gipsy language. They also spent their nights in dancing, and singing, and debauchery—McPherson himself being the minstrel at these feasts. Gordon and he were found guilty, and sentenced to be hung at the Market Cross next market-day. McPherson spent his last hours writing verses and composing a tune for them, and as he walked from prison to the place of execution, he played his tune on the violin. At the gallows he offered his instrument to any one who would accept it, but upon every one declining it, he broke it over his knee and threw the pieces among the crowd. His two-handed sword and target were taken from him by Duff at the time of arrest, and are now in the possession of the latter’s family. McPherson was buried at the place of execution, and a considerable time afterwards his bones, proving him to have been a tall powerful man, were found at the gallows hill. The sword is six feet long, including a handle of eighteen inches, and the blade is two and a half inches broad. Such are some of the particulars—partly fact and mostly fiction—of the notorious freebooter, whom Burns has immortalized in ‘a wild stormful song, that dwells in our ear with a strange tenacity.’ The process against McPherson is given in Spalding’s Miscellany, iii. 175.

The original ballad from which Burns modelled his song was printed shortly after the events to which they refer, in a broadside entitled McPherson’s Rant; or the last words of James McPherson, murderer. To its own proper tune. The verses are a good deal above the general level of the ordinary street ballad, and consist of eleven eight-line stanzas in vigorous language of somewhat inferior rhyme. The first stanza is as follows:—

‘I spent my time in rioting, Debauch’d my health and strength; I pillag’d, plunder’d, murdered, But now, alas! at length	I’m brought to punishment condign; Pale death draws near to me, The end I never did project To die upon a tree.’
---	---

An incomplete copy is in Herd’s Scots Songs, 1769, 264: a complete version is in Maidment’s Scottish Songs and Ballads, 1859, 29, with the title above quoted.

On comparing the song in the text with the original ballad, it will be seen where Burns excels. He depicts the audacity of M^cPherson in vigorous nervous language, he puts no apologies into his mouth, but paints him as an enemy to society, hardened and revengeful to the end, disdainful to be a coward, and dying like a man. Of these verses Carlyle says: 'but who except Burns, could have given words to such a soul, words that we never listen to without a strange barbarous, half poetic feeling.' The song made a very strong impression on Carlyle, for many years after he wrote to Edward Fitzgerald: 'One day we had Alfred Tennyson here; an unforgettable day. He stayed with us till late, we dismissed him with M^cPherson's farewell. Alfred's face grew darker and darker and I saw his lips slightly quivering.'

The tune is in Sinkler's MS. 1710, as M^cFarsence's Testament; in the Caledonian Pocket Companion, c. 1755, vii. 14; and in M^cGibbon's Scots Tunes, 1768, 92, it is entitled M^cPherson's farewell, as in later publications.

No. 312. O, raging fortune's withering blast. Commonplace Book; and published in Cromek's Reliques, 1808, 353. This apparently refers to the family misfortunes at the farm of Lochlea. Burns at this time tried to compose a melody for these verses—the only attempt of the kind he made—and remarks: 'Twas at this time I set about composing an air in the old Scotch style. I am not musical scholar enough to prick down my tune properly, so it can never see the light, and perhaps 'tis no great matter. The tune consisted of three parts so that the verses just went through the whole air' (Commonplace Book). The tune here referred to has never been seen and was probably destroyed.

No. 313. The gloomy night is gath'ring fast. Edinburgh Edition, 1787, 330. Tune Roslin Castle. Scots Musical Museum, 1790, No. 284; Thomson's Scottish Airs, 1799, 85. 'I had taken the last farewell of my few friends; my chest was on the road to Greenock; I had composed the last song I should ever measure in Caledonia 'The gloomy night is gathering fast.' (Letter to Dr. Moore.) A somewhat similar note is in Cromek's Reliques, but the leaf in the Interleaved Museum from which Cromek is supposed to have taken the note is now missing. Further details are given by Dr. Walker, who had them from Burns himself. The poet had left Dr. Lawrie's house at Newmilns after a visit which he expected to be the last; to reach his home he had to traverse a stretch of solitary moor some miles long, across the parish of Galston. The night was lowering and dark, cold showers came and went, the wind whistled through the rushes and long grass. The elements were in keeping with the poet's frame of mind, and in discomfort of body and cheerlessness of spirit this splendid effusion was projected. The visit to Dr. Lawrie's took place about the close of September, 1786. At this or some other time Burns presented the following fragment to one of the daughters. The castle referred to is Newmilns, and the river is the Irvine.

'The night was still, and o'er the hill The moon shone on the Castle wa'; The mavis sang, while dewdrops hang Around her in the Castle wa';	Sae merrily they danc'd the ring Frae e'enin till the cock did crow, And ay the o'erword o' the spring Was:—"Irvine's bairns are bonie a"!
--	---

In neither of the musical collections above named was the proper tune printed with The Gloomy night is gath'ring fast, and in the Museum it is set to a worthless melody composed by Allan Masterton. In Scottish Airs the tune is Druimionn dubh (see Song No. 32) which Thomson names Farewell to Ayr. So far as I know the proper tune, Roslin Castle, has never been printed with this song. It is one of the best double tunes in Scottish collections, and admirably suited to express the poetry of Burns. It was first printed in M^cGibbon's Scots Tunes, 1746, 31, with the title House of Glams, and as Roslin Castle in the Caledonian Pocket Companion, 1752, iv. 3. The first time it is set to words is in Bremner's Scots Songs (2nd series) 1757, 27, with Hewitt's song beginning

'Twas in that season of the year' and another 'From Roslin castle's echoing walls,' and the change of title of the tune is probably due to one or other of these songs. The reason why Burns's verses were set to another than the proper tune in Johnson's Museum was because Hewitt's Roslin Castle had been printed with other words in an earlier volume.

No. 314. Raving winds around her blowing. Scots Musical Museum, 1788, No. 173, signed 'B.' Tune, McGrigor of Rora's lament. 'I composed these verses on Miss Isabella McLeod of Raza, alluding to her feelings on the death of her sister, and the still more melancholy death of her sister's husband, the late Earl of Loudon, who shot himself, out of sheer heart-break at some mortifications he suffered, owing to the deranged state of his finances' (Interleaved Museum). Miss Isabella McLeod was one of the first friends Burns made in Edinburgh, and he was on terms of intimacy with her while he remained there. She was a sweet and gentle woman, one of the refined persons who smoothed the rebellious nature of the poet. Dr. Johnson in his tour in the Hebrides, stayed with the family at Raasay and unexpectedly was charmed with the society. The family consisted of three sons and ten daughters, the eldest Flora, described as Queen of the ball, was elegant and remarkable for her beauty. The McLeods were singularly unfortunate. Flora became the beautiful Countess of Loudon, and died in 1780, her husband the Earl shot himself in 1786, the father died the same year and his brother John in 1787. The chief of Raasay, the brother of Burns's friend, died in 1801, in financial trouble; his son and grandson struggled unsuccessfully to redeem the estates, which had been in the family for four hundred years. Burns commemorated John's death in the lines beginning 'Sad thy tale, thou rueful page.' A song by Gay printed in The Hive, 1726, 174, and elsewhere, begins thus:—

'Twas when the seas were roaring,
With hollow blasts of wind,
A damsel lay deploring
All on a rock reclind.'

There is no other suggestion for Burns in the song. The tune is an exquisite Celtic air which he heard during his Highland tour. In a letter to Mrs. Dunlop he describes how the Coronach of McGrigor of Rora was much admired in Patrick Miller's house while he was there.

McGrigor's lament is in Corri's Scots Songs, 1783, ii. 29; as a Perthshire air in McDonald's Highland Airs, 1784, No. 88; and in the Museum as now printed. There is a bad setting in Dow's Scots Music, c. 1776, 16.

No. 315. What will I do gin my hoggie die? Scots Musical Museum, 1788, No. 133. The MS. is in the British Museum with an instruction that 'the music to be set to those words.' A 'hog' or 'hoggie' is a young sheep which has not yet passed beneath the knife of the shearer. After the first fleece is taken off, the 'hoggie' becomes a gimmer or tup until the next fleece. The original of Burns's verses is said to be a song entitled Coxton's hoggie in four stanzas which Buchan, a most untrustworthy authority, furnished to Motherwell and published first in 1834. There is nothing of the antique in the verses, and they may be discredited. Burns did not take the trouble to acknowledge his verses in his Interleaved Museum which however contains a note by Robert Riddell garbled in Cromek's Reliques, 1808, 241, to make it appear that Burns wrote it. If Cromek had printed a verbatim copy beginning in the first person the public would have discovered that there was something wrong in Burns being acquainted with Dr. Walker so early as the year 1772.

The tune, with the title of Burns What will I do gin my hoggie die, is in McGlashan's Scots Measures, 1781, 11, and in Reinagle's Scots Airs, c. 1782, entitled Moss Platt, the name of the hamlet referred to in Riddell's note. The Museum copy with Burns's verses is a bad setting of the air, which Mr. Glen discovered in Young's Original Scotch Tunes, c. 1727, under the unintelligible title of Cocks louns walie hoyn.

No. 316. It was in sweet Senegal. Scots Musical Museum, 1792, No. 384, entitled The slave's lament. The MS. is in the British Museum. According to Stenhouse, Burns communicated the tune with the verses, which Sharpe believed to be a make-up from a street ballad entitled The betrayed maid, popular in the West of Scotland in the eighteenth century, through its overflowing sentiment. The original is a black letter broadside entitled The trepan'd maiden, or the distressed damsel, beginning:—

'Give ear unto a maid
That lately was betrayed
And sent into Virginny O': &c.

Stenhouse circulated the story that the tune is of African origin. The Seven Dials is more likely to have been its birthplace. It is sentimental but by no means a bad tune, and is as well worth reprinting as the verses it illustrates.

No. 317. One night as I did wander. This 'fragment' is in the Glenriddell MS. which Burns sent to one of his friends as a copy of his Commonplace Book. But the stanza is not in the latter collection, and nothing is known as to the origin or object of the verses. Published in Crome's Reliques, 1808, 341, tune, John Anderson my jo. See No. 212.

No. 318. The lazy mist hangs from the brow of the hill. Scots Musical Museum, 1790, No. 232, signed 'B'; entitled The lazy mist. In Thomson's Scottish Airs, 1798, 50, with an unauthorized air. In the Interleaved Museum Burns states 'This song is mine,' and in Law's MS. List—'Mr Burns's words.' The verses are another example of the depressing effect of Autumn on the poet's mind. He sent a copy, on November 15, 1788, to Dr. Blacklock, to whom he describes it as a 'melancholy' thing, and is afraid lest it should too well suit the tone of the doctor's feelings.

The Irish tune, The lazy mist, was printed in the Caledonian Pocket Companion, c. 1759, xii. 20. The subject of the melody is attractive, but it becomes monotonous from continued repetition of one of the phrases.

No. 319. Ken ye ought o' Captain Grose? In Currie's Works, 1800, iv. 399. 'Tune, Sir John Malcolm.' Also in the Glenriddell MS. In the autumn of 1790, Captain Grose the Antiquarian visited the South of Scotland to inspect the ancient ruins there for the purpose of describing them. Burns found him a witty and sympathetic companion, and refers to him in the poem beginning:—

'Hear, Land o' Cakes, and brither Scots,
Frae Maidenkirke to Johnie Groat's;
If there's a hole in a' your coats,
I rede ye tent it:
A chield's amang you takin notes,
And faith he'll print it:'

Burns wrote to Grose—then in Edinburgh—informing him that Professor Dugald Stewart wished to be introduced to him, and requesting him to call at Sorn Castle—where Stewart lived—when he returned to the South. As Burns did not know the address, the rhyme was sent to Cardonnell, another Antiquarian, requesting him to forward the letter. The song is a parody on Sir John Malcolm to be found in The Charmer, 1764, ii. 271, and in Herd's Scots Songs, 1769, 182. This undistinguished Knight and his friend Sandie Don, were two dull prosy blockheads, who bored their friends in company with pointless incoherent stories of their travels. The old song begins:—

'Keep ye weel frae Sir John Malcolm, Igo and Ago,
If he's a wise man, I mistak him, Iram, Coram, dago,
Keep ye weel frae Sandy Don, Igo and ago,
He's ten times dafter than Sir John, Iram, Coram, dago.'

The tune in Walsh's Caledonian Country Dances, c. 1741, is entitled Allister; it is in Bremner's Reels, 1761, 96; and Aird's Airs, 1782, ii. No. 195. This is the first time that this song of Burns has been printed with its melody.

No. 320. O, leeze me on my spinnin'-wheel. Scots Musical Museum, 1792, No. 360, entitled Bess and her spinning wheel. The MS. of this ideal rustic song is in the British Museum. The description of the little islet is charming with the scented birch and white hawthorn uniting the two branches of the stream across the pool. Ramsay's copy of the English song As I sat by my spinning wheel in the Tea-Table Miscellany, 1725, has not even a distant resemblance to the song of Burns.

The characteristic melody Sweet's the lass that loves me is in Playford's Original Scotch Tunes, 1700, entitled Cosen Cole's delight, and in the Caledonian Pocket Companion, 1753, v. 10, but its extended compass has marred its popularity. Martin Parker, the London ballad writer, wrote Love's Solace to a new Court Tune, or, as in some later copies, 'Sweet is the lass that loves me; a young man's resolution to prove constant to his sweetheart,' to the tune Omnia vincit Amor which does not resemble the present tune.

No. 321. Cauld blaws the wind frae east to west. Scots Musical Museum, 1788, No. 140, signed 'Z.' With tune Up in the morning early; otherwise, Cold and raw. 'The chorus of this is old, the two stanzas are mine' (Interleaved Museum). None of the Scottish collections contain any such song. Burns's model is in the Herd MS., but the subject there is entirely different. The following notes will enable the reader to form his own opinion as to the origin of both the poetry and the music. The anecdote related by Sir John Hawkins in his History of Music, 1776, has been often repeated. In the year 1691 the Queen asked Mrs. Hunt to sing 'the old Scots ballad' Cold and Raw, which she did, accompanying herself on the lute. 'For the Queen's next birthday song Purcell composed, in 1692, an air to the words, May her bright example in the Orpheus Britannicus, 1702, ii. 151, the base whereof is the tune Cold and Raw.' The statement of the historian so far as it goes is quite explicit. Hawkins repeats the anecdote in the light of a tradition, and cites no authority, but he quite confidently asserts the Scots nationality of the air.

Now for some facts: the tune was printed under the title of Stingo, or the Oyl of Barley in the first edition of Playford's Dancing Master, London, 1651, and in every subsequent edition up to the eighth published in 1690. The following is a copy from the fourth edition, 1670, 84.

Stingo, or the Oyl of Barley.

It was printed in Hilton's Catch that catch can, 1652, as the third part of a Northern Catch entitled Ise go with ye, my sweet Peggy, the last two lines of which are:—

'We'll sport all night for our delight,
And go home in the morning early.'

In Merry Drollery, 1661, 132 the song is entitled A cup of old stingo, and closes with

'Let's drink the barrel to the dregs
For the Mault-man comes a Munday.'

In the ninth edition of the Dancing Master, 1695, the title of the tune was altered from Stingo to Cold and raw, by which it has since been known. The date of the change approximates to that of the anecdote of Hawkins, and the song performed by Mrs. Hunt was probably A new Scotch Song, which first appeared in Come Amoris, or the companion of Love, 1688, and became so popular that the old title of the tune was abandoned for Cold and raw. According to Chappell (Popular Music, page 306), this new Scotch song was written by Tom Durfey. The following first stanza is taken from Pills to purge melancholy, 1719, ii. 167:—

'Cold and raw the North did blow, Bleak in the morning early; All the trees were hid in snow, Dag'd by winter yearly:	When come riding over a knough, I met with a farmer's daughter; Rosie cheeks and bonny brow, Good faith made my mouth to water.'
--	---

It may be remarked that the next following song in Durfey is entitled 'A new Song to the Scotch tune of Cold and Raw.' In a Collection of old Ballads, 1723—the first of its kind in England—the song is reprinted with the title The Northern Ditty; or the Scotchman outwitted. In a note, the ballad is said to be traditionally assigned to the time of James I of England, which controverts the statement of Chappell.

The tune Stingo in the seventeenth century was also known as The country lass, and numerous ballads were written for the music and printed as broadsides.

The famous revolutionary song of 1688—Lilliburlero—was first printed to be sung to Cold and raw, but it had to give place very quickly to the tune now associated with it.

So much for the English source. The earliest record of the tune I can find in Scotland is in M^cGibbon's Scots Tunes, 1755, 17, with the title Up in the morning early, from which it may be inferred that it was then known and sung to verses in Herd MS., the chorus of which is:—

'Up i' the morning, up i' the morning
Up i' the morning early,
Up i' the morning's no for me
And I canna get up so early.'

The music is also in the Caledonian Pocket Companion, xii. 5, with the same title as in M^cGibbon. No such song is named in the Tea-Table Miscellany, nor in any printed Scottish song-book of the eighteenth century. This melody is an example of the difficulty of ascertaining the origin of folk music. Chappell's test was a very simple one and suited his purpose exactly. Where the earliest record of the music was found there was the origin. He rejected all circumstantial evidence, and in this way practically excluded all Scottish tune prior to the year 1700—the date of the first printed collection of Scottish music. The many references to the peculiarity of Scottish music by Shakespeare, Dryden, Pepys, and other writers of the seventeenth century counted for nothing, and the inrush of Scottish tunes into England in the wake of James I was disregarded. As early as 1688 the tune Cold and raw was designated a Northern or Scotch tune, and by the Queen, in 1691, as an old Scottish Ballad, yet the music was not printed in Scotland before 1755 nor the words before Burns.

No. 322. No cold approach, no alter'd mien. Scots Musical Museum, 1792, No. 310. MS. in which Burns directs how the music is to be set is in the British Museum. Further information is as follows: 'This song composed by a Miss Cranstoun. It wanted four lines to make all the stanzas suit the music, which I added, and are the four first of the last stanza.' (Interleaved Museum.)

Miss Cranstoun became the wife of Professor Dugald Stewart the friend of Burns. She was born in 1765, married in 1790, and died at Warriston House near Edinburgh on July 28, 1838. At the bottom of the MS. for the Museum Burns expressed a wish that the song should appear in the next volume.

The tune is the work of John Barrett, an English musician, the composer of many songs, and a pupil of Dr. Blow, the celebrated organist. Ianthe the lovely is in Durfey's Pills, 1719, v. 300. Gay used the tune in The Beggar's Opera. It is also in the Caledonian Pocket Companion, 1752, iv. 8, and a much corrupted setting is in the Musical Miscellany, Perth, 1786, 112.

No. 323. My father was a farmer. Commonplace Book, 1872, 13. Tune, The weaver and his shuttle, O, and described as 'a wild rhapsody miserably deficient in versification.' Published in Cromek's Reliques, 1808, 330. On February 13, 1784, the worthy father of the poet died. For three years he had been at law with his landlord over the terms of the lease of the farm of Lochlea and 'was saved from the horrors of a jail by a consumption which, after two years' promises, kindly stepped in, and carried him away to where the wicked cease from troubling and where the weary are at rest.' (Letter to Dr. Moore.)

In a note in Cromek's Reliques, 1805, 205, it is stated that the tune The weaver and his shuttle, O is the Irish title of Jockie's gray breaks; but there is no such note in Burns's Interleaved Museum as represented. For the same tune under a different title, see No. 67.

No. 324. When chill November's surly blast. Commonplace Book, 1872, 42, entitled A Song. Tune, Peggy Bawn. Printed in the Kilmarnock edition, 1786, 160, entitled Man was made to mourn. A dirge. Later, he refers to its source in a letter to Mrs. Dunlop dated August 16, 1788. He was then in the same depressed mental state as when he wrote the verses. 'If I thought you had never seen it, I would transcribe for you a stanza of an old Scottish ballad called The life and age of man, beginning

"'Twas in the sixteen hunder year
Of God, and fifty three,
Frae Christ was born, that bought us dear
As writings testifie."

I had a grand-uncle, with whom my mother lived awhile in her girlish years: the good old man, for such he was, was long blind ere he died; during which time his highest enjoyment was to sit down and cry, while my mother would sing the simple old song of The life and age of man. Cromek inserted this old ballad—very poor stuff, which he obtained from the recital of Burns's mother—in the preface to Scottish songs, 1810. According to a stall-copy the full title is 'The life and age of Man: or a short description of his Nature, Rise, and Fall, according to the twelve months of the year.' Tune, Isle of Kell. The year 1653—when the ballad was written—was a sorry time for Scotland, and at no period since Edward I had the independence of the country been more menaced. The General Assembly had met, and were discussing much controversial matter, when a general of Cromwell's army entered, and ordered the Assembly to dissolve and the members to follow him. 'Broad-based' Baillie the Covenanter describes this unheard of atrocity, and how the ministers and elders were conducted a mile out of the town, and forbidden to meet more than three in number, under pain of imprisonment. English Commissioners were appointed to administer public business, and the country for a short time was entirely under English control.

In his Man was made to mourn, Burns made use of the old ballad, a variant of which was known in England. A black letter imprint, issued from London about 1666, is entitled 'The age and life of man, perfectly showing his beginning of Life and the progress of his Dayes from Seaven to Seaventy. To the tune of Jane Shore, known to Shakespeare as Live with me for Marlowe's delightful song Come live with me and be my love.

Peggy Bawn, for which Burns marked his ballad, is an Irish melody. It is written throughout in the major mode, and not in the minor as might be expected from the character of the verses it interprets. It was very popular in Burns's time, but in many musical collections of the period, and subsequently, it is disfigured by tasteless adornments. The present copy is from the Scots Musical Museum, No. 509. The Isle of Kell, the tune of Burns's original ballad, is also known as Hardy Knute. In the Pepysian Library is a black letter ballad—a Scottish version of the Hunting of Chevy Chase—directed to be sung to The Isle of Kyle. The following is a copy of the music from the Caledonian Pocket Companion, 1753, v. 31.

No. 325. The wintry west extends his blast. Commonplace Book, 1872, 12, entitled Song. Tune, M^cPherson's farewell, with the following note: 'I have various sources of pleasure and enjoyment which are, in a manner, peculiar to myself, or some here and there such other out-of-the-way person. Such is the peculiar pleasure I take in the season of winter, more than the rest of the year. This, I believe, may be partly owing to my misfortunes giving my mind a melancholy cast; but there is something even in the "Mighty tempest and the hoary waste Abrupt and deep, stretch'd o'er the buried earth"

which raises the mind to a serious sublimity, favourable to everything great and noble. There is scarcely any earthly object gives me more—I don't know if I should call it pleasure, but something which exalts me, something which enraptures me—than to walk in the sheltered side of a wood, or high plantation, in a cloudy, winter day, and hear a stormy wind howling among the trees, and raving o'er the plain. . . . In one of these seasons just after a tract of misfortunes, I composed The wintry wind extends his blast.' The tune M^cPherson's farewell or rant is noted in Song No. 311.

No. 326. But lately seen in gladsome green. Scots Musical Museum, 1796, No. 486, signed 'B,' entitled The winter of life. Scottish Airs, 1801, 139. The MS. is in the British Museum. On October 19, 1794, a copy was sent to Thomson. The verses illustrate one of the poet's mental phases. His hair was showing a silver streak, and Time told him that the meridian of his days was past. He describes the melody to Thomson in these words: 'I enclose you a musical curiosity—an East Indian air which you would swear was a Scots one. I know the authenticity of it, as the gentleman who brought it over is a particular acquaintance of mine. Clarke has set a bass to it, and I intend putting it into the Musical Museum.' If the tune in our text, which is copied from the Museum, is the East Indian Air referred to, it is very remarkable, because it looks like a make-up of the Scottish Chevy Chase of Song No. 267.

No. 327. Wee Willie Gray and his leather wallet. Scots Musical Museum, 1803, No. 514. 'Written for this work by R. Burns,' for an original tune which, according to Stenhouse, obtained its name from the first line of the following old nursery rhyme:—

‘Wee Totum Fogg sits upon a creepie;
Half an ell o’ gray wad be his coat and breekie.’

It is a gay pipe melody, one of the class common in the eighteenth century in Roxburgh and Northumberland. Dusty Miller, of Song No. 180, belongs to the class.

No. 328. He clench’d his pamphlets in his fist. Cromek’s Reliques, 1808, 418, entitled ‘Extempore in the Court of Session. Tune, Killiecrankie.’ A MS. is in the British Museum. Burns visited the Law Courts in Edinburgh to study man and manners; the above two stanzas were written on the spot while a trial was going on in the Court of Session. The simulated passion of the Counsel on both sides is pure Burns. Lord Advocate Ilay Campbell was for the prosecution, and Burns’s friend Henry Erskine the Dean of Faculty for the defence. There is a fine touch in the concluding lines of the song:—

‘The Bench sae wise lift up their eyes
Half-wauken’d wi’ the din man.’

It suggests a not unusual condition of the Scottish Bench after a stiff encounter with Bacchus the previous night.

The tune is a seventeenth century melody composed not much later than the battle of Killiecrankie, where Claverhouse was killed on July 27, 1689. The Scottish song writers had a peculiar knack of making fun of the battles of their country, and their humour is unrestrained on Killiecrankie, Sheriffmuir, and Preston pans. In the satire Scotch Presbyterian Eloquence, 1694, 78, Killiecrankie is designated ‘a malignant song.’ The music is in Atkinson’s MS., 1694; Playford’s Original Scotch Tunes, 1700; Caledonian Pocket Companion, 1751, iii. 26; M^cGibbon’s Scots Tunes, 1755, 18; Aird’s Airs, 1782, ii. No. 18; the Scots Musical Museum, 1788, No. 102; and Ritson’s Scotch Songs, 1794, ii. 44. For tune, see No. 256.

No. 329. Orthodox! orthodox! wha believe in John Knox. Poems ascribed to Robert Burns, 1801, 20, entitled The kirk’s alarm. A Satire. Scott-Douglas edition, 1877, ii. 236. Tune, Come rouse, brother sportsmen. The origin of the ballad may be briefly told. In the year 1786, Dr. William M^cGill, colleague of Dr. Dalrymple the Parish Minister of Ayr, published a practical essay on the death of Jesus Christ, and the opinions of the writer gave offence to many worthy but narrow-minded people in the parish, and the Kirk Session scented heresy in the work. The doctrines taught were considered unscriptural, and destructive of the principles of Evangelism. At first the author was privately admonished, but a strong undercurrent of enthusiasm agitated the minds of the disaffected, which threatened at any time to break out. With all this highly inflammable material in the air ‘Dalrymple mild with his heart like a child’ unwittingly set the heather on fire. He referred to a book he had written on the same subject, in which the views of his colleague were supported. At this point the fury of the orthodox against the offending brother broke out with fierce denunciation of his opinions. In November, 1788, Dr. William Peebles preached a sermon, in which he denounced heresy in strong language, and stigmatized Dr. M^cGill as one who received the privileges of the Church with one hand, and stabbed her in the back with the other. M^cGill defended himself without convincing the enemy, and matters progressed until a complaint of heresy was lodged with the Synod of Ayr, and remitted to the General Assembly for trial. The case was opened in May, 1789, discussed and sent back to the Synod for a committee to be appointed to draw up specific charges. In July the committee began its work, and at this point Burns steps in on the scene with The Kirk’s alarm. The case dragged on slowly for two years, and in the end Dr. M^cGill was found guilty of the major charge. Worried, and threatened with dismissal, he humbled himself and apologized, declared his adherence to the Confession of Faith, and was purged.

For the style of The Kirk's alarm we must go back to the religions and political pasquils of the seventeenth century, which trampled rough-shod over the reputations of antagonists. He who wrote The Kirk's alarm may not have been a man to be loved, but he clearly was one to be feared and respected. His own opinion of the poem is described in several letters to intimate friends, to whom he sent copies of the verses. He enjoined them to show the poem only to a privileged 'few of us.' Gavin Hamilton received the first unfinished draft with strict injunctions to read it only to intimate friends. On August 7 a complete copy was forwarded to John Logan, a farmer at Glenshinnoch, and the following is an extract from the letter enclosing it: 'I dare not write you a long letter, as I am going to intrude on your time with a long ballad. I have, as you will shortly see, finished The Kirk's alarm; but now that it is done, and that I have laughed once or twice at the conceits in some of the stanzas, I am determined not to let it get into the public; so I send you this copy, the first that I have sent to Ayrshire (except some few of the stanzas which I wrote off in embryo for Gavin Hamilton), under the express provision and request that you will only read it to a few of us, and do not on any account give or permit to be taken any copy of the ballad.' Some time later he sent copies to Graham of Fintry and others, and the nature of the ballad leaked out, for it was too good to be kept secret.

The existing MS. copies nearly all differ from one another, and the stanzas vary from nine to twenty in number. The verses in the text include the whole in all the MSS., and are based on that in the Works of Burns, Edinburgh, 1877. Burns kept the resolution not to print the ballad, but it was published surreptitiously in a broadside in 1789. The fact that The Kirk's alarm is a song, and was written to be sung, has been quite overlooked. It has not until now been printed with a tune. Every copy made by Burns named a tune, but not always the same. Indeed, Burns gave the choice of five different melodies, as if he was not very sure of any of them. In Mrs. Dunlop's copy (Lochryan MS.) the tune is marked Push about the brisk bowl; MS in Edinburgh University, The hounds are all out; MS. in Burns Monument, Edinburgh, Come rouse brother sportsmen; and in a broadside The Ayrshire Garland, 1789, The vicar and Moses. None of these melodies fit the rhythm, and all are English as well as the one here noted, Prepare my dear brethren, which I believe Burns had in his mind but of which he could not recall the name. The political song on Fox referred to in the Centenary edition ii. 329 indicates that the tune is that of the Freemasons' Song already discussed in Song No. 236.

The following notes are partly the poet's own. Stanza 2: 'Dr. M^cGill, Ayr (R. B.)' The hero of the song who was prosecuted for heresy. St. 3: 'John Ballantine, provost of Ayr, a friend of Burns. The magistrates of the town advertised their appreciation of Dr. M^cGill and Robert Aiken, writer, Ayr (R. B.),' who defended the accused and to whom Burns had dedicated The Cottar's Saturday Night. St. 4: 'Dr. Dalrymple, Ayr (R. B.),' who approved the opinions of his colleague, Dr. M^cGill. St. 6: 'John Russell, Kilmarnock (R. B.)'; or Black Jock of The holy fair, who poured out brimstone sermons with a ponderous voice. St. 7: 'James MacKinlay, Kilmarnock (R. B.),' on whom Burns wrote The Ordination beginning 'Kilmarnock wabsters, fidge and claw.' He had a persuasive style of Calvinistic oratory which pleased his flock. St. 8: 'Alexander Moodie of Riccarton (R. B.)' Another terror to evil-doers. No. 330. Peg Nicholson was a good bay mare. Cromeck's Reliques, 1808, 208, entitled Elegy on Willie Nicol's mare. The death of Peg Nicholson was announced by Burns on February 9, 1790 to the owner. Nicol had bought the animal—a bargain as he thought—from a horse couper, who did no discredit to the reputed character of his profession. Nicol sent her to the care of Burns for change of air and diet, and she was named by the farm servants of Ellisland Peg Nicholson, in honour of an insane woman, who attempted the assassination of George III. Peg's death was apparently premature, as the following characteristic extract shows: 'My dear sir, that d—d mare of yours is dead. I would freely have given her price to have saved her: she has vexed me beyond description. Indebted as I was to your goodness beyond what I can ever repay, I eagerly grasped at your offer to have the mare with me. That I might at least show my readiness in wishing to be grateful, I took every care of her in my power. She was never crossed for riding above half a score of times by me or in my keeping. I drew her in the plough, one of three, for one poor week. I refused fifty-five shillings for her, which was the highest bode I could squeeze for her. I fed her up and had her in fine order for Dumfries fair; when four or five days before the fair, she was seized with an unaccountable disorder in the sinews, or somewhere in the bones of the neck; with a weakness or total want of power in her fillets, and in short the whole vertebrae of her spine seemed to be diseased and unhinged, and in eight and forty hours, in spite of the two best farriers in the country, she died, and be d—d to her! The farriers said that she had been quite strained in the fillets beyond cure before you had bought her, and that the poor devil, though she might keep a little flesh, had been jaded and quite worn out with fatigue and oppression.' Further on in same letter Burns says: 'I have likewise strung four or five barbarous stanzas, to the tune of Chevy Chase, by way of elegy on your unfortunate mare.' See music, and Notes on No. 267 or 274, either of which tunes fits the words.

No. 331. There lived a carl in Kellyburn braes. Scots Musical Museum, 1792, No. 379, entitled Kellyburn braes. MS. in the British Museum. Another but indifferent version by Burns is in Aitken's edit. 1893. The Kelly burn is an upland stream separating the northern part of Ayrshire from Renfrew. Who the carl was is not recorded. The representation of a termagant is a very old story in English literature. The Schole-house of women, 1541, and the Cursed Wyfe lapped in Morrelles Skin, c. 1575, are two metrical Gests of this kind. The earliest recorded English ballad entitled The devil and the scold, to the tune of The Seminary Priest, in Collier's Book of Roxburgh Ballads, 1847, 35, is probably of the time of Queen Elizabeth. The kind husband of this shrew permitted the devil to carry her away. She treated Satan so unmercifully that he regretted the choice and returned her to the husband. This ballad was often reprinted in the seventeenth century; and the carl of Kellyburn braes is the same subject treated in a more gay and humorous manner. Cromeck printed a version in Nithsdale and Galloway Songs, 1810, 83, differing materially from Burns and represented to be the Burns original, which I do not believe. A fragment on the subject is in the Herd MS. as follows :—

‘Now take a Cud in ilka hand
And bace her up and down, man
And she’ll be ane o’ the best o’ wives
That ever took the town, man.’

The tune is a variant of the Queen of the Lothians, as it is probably also of Last May a braw wooer, Song No. 201.

No. 332. There was three kings into the east. John Barleycorn—A song to its own tune. ‘I once heard the old song that goes by this name sung, and being very fond of it, and remembering only two or three verses of it, viz., the first, second, and third, with some scraps which I have interwoven here and there’ (Commonplace Book, 1827, 28). It is printed in the Edinburgh edition, 1787, 306. Ballads celebrating the prowess of this redoubtable hero have been known in England and Scotland for more than three centuries. The earliest version is in the Bannatyne MS. 1568, entitled Why should not Allane honorit be, subscribed Allane Matsonis Suddartis, a pseudonym or parody on the title Allane-a-maut; it is in twelve stanzas of five lines, the first in modern orthography being as follows :—

‘When he was young and clad in green,
Having his hair about his een,
Baith men and women did him mene,
When he grew on yon hillis hie;—
Why should not Allane honoured be?’

Another Scottish version, somewhat later, begins :—

‘Gude Allan o’ maun was ance ca’d Bear,
And he was cadged frae wa’ to wear,
And dragglet wi’ muck, and syne wi’ rain,
Till he die’t, and cam to life again.’

A third version from the recollection of Robert Jamieson, the editor of Popular Ballads, 1806, who learnt it in Morayshire when he was a boy, is a variation of that which the poet had heard sung in the south-west of Scotland. The first stanza runs :—

‘There came three merry men from the east,
And three merry men they be;
And they have sworn a solemn oath
John Barleycorn should die.’

In England also there were at least three ballads of the same kind. One, entitled Mr. Mault he is a gentleman, was sung to the tune Triumph and Joy, another name for the Elizabethan melody Green-sleeves; a second called The little barleycorne to the tune Stingo—the early name for Cold and raw; while the third and best known English version is that in the Pepys collection of ballads, entitled; A pleasant new ballad to sing evening and morn, of the bloody murther of Sir John Barleycorn, to the tune Lull me beyond thee, which begins thus :—

‘As I went through the north countrie,
I heard a merry meeting,
A pleasant toy, and full of joy
Two noblemen were greeting.’

The two noblemen were Sir Richard Beer, and Sir William Whitewine who, meeting John Barleycorn, fought with him, but failed to overpower him. All the ballads above referred to are in Jamieson’s Ballads, 1806, ii. 231–260. The tune of the English ballad Lull me beyond thee is a north-country tune first printed in the first edition of Playford’s Dancing Master, 1650. It is uncertain whether Burns intended his ballad for that air, or for Cold and raw (see No. 321). The music of Lull me beyond thee in the text is from Playford's Dancing Master, 1670.

No. 333. When Januar' wind was blawin cauld. Scots Musical Museum, 1796, No. 448 entitled The bonie lass made the bed to me. The MS. is in the British Museum. A new version of an old ballad written for and printed in the Museum. Stenhouse, and Chambers after him, printed a bowdlerized and unauthorized short version which the former said was corrected by Burns. The Note and two stanzas in Cromek's Reliques, p. 256, connecting the original ballad with Charles II is not in the Interleaved Museum, and must in the future not be regarded as the statement of Burns. The ballad was printed as a broadside in London as early as 1670. A copy is in the Douce collection entitled Cumberland Nelly or the North Country Lovers . . . Tune The lass that comes to bed to me. The verses and music are in Pills to purge melancholy, 1719, iv. 133, as The Cumberland Lass. The poetry is very prosaic, and if any one is curious to see how Burns vivified dull verses, he may compare that in our text with the ballad in the Pills. The English tune The Cumberland Lass is not the same as that in the Museum which Stenhouse affirms was communicated by Burns to the editor of that collection. (Illustrations, p. 397.) The first two phrases resemble Johnie Cope, and the whole structure is unlike a Scottish melody. It may be remarked that, although the English ballad has a chorus, the tune of four lines does service for both verse and chorus. Daunev states that there is a tune entitled To bed to me in Blaikie's MS. 1692.

No. 334. O, Lady Mary Ann looks o'er the castle wa'. Scots Musical Museum, 1792, No. 377, entitled Lady Mary Ann. The MS. is in the British Museum. A fragment of eight lines, where the names of Lady Mary Ann and Charlie Cochrane do not occur, is in the Herd MS. A more complete but fashionless version is in Maidment's North Countrie Garland, 1824, and another is in Motherwell's Minstrelsy, 1827, 86. The story of the ballad is related by Spalding, the following being an abstract:—John Urquhart of Craigston died November, 1634, leaving a young grandson as heir. His guardian, the Laird Innes, coveted the estates, and in order to keep the property in the family, married the boy to his uncomely eldest daughter Elizabeth Innes, who willingly accepted him. The marriage was of short duration, for the young husband died while he was still at school. The last stanza of Maidment's copy explains all that is necessary to be said here:—

'In his twelfth year he was a married man,
In his thirteenth year then he got a son;
In his fourteenth year his grave grew green,
And that was the end of his growing.'

The verses in the text bear the mark of Burns's hand, and are all his own except the first two stanzas which he very much improved. He took very little interest in historical and romantic ballads. The incidents in them were too far removed from actual life. In sending to Mr. Tytler copies of those he recovered, he expresses the listless feeling which he had for them.

The tune was printed for the first time in the Museum. A tune entitled Long a growing is said to be in Guthrie's MS. of the seventeenth century.

* No. 335. There liv'd a man in yonder glen. Scots Musical Museum, 1792, No. 365. The MS. in Burns's handwriting is in the British Museum. Another holograph version with variations, and not so good, was sold by Mr. Quaritch in August, 1900. This is the first time that the song is printed as the work of Burns. It has all the national Scottish colour, but the legend is widely extended, and is known in France, Italy, Turkey, and Arabia. Who the Scottish original was is obscure, but the name of Johnie Blunt is on record four hundred years ago, and he is referred to in William Dunbar's Twa marieit women, published in 1508: 'For all the buddis of Johne Blunt when he abone clymis.' Laing's Dunbar, i. 66. The details of the tale differ in the various countries. That in Straparolo's Eighth Day describes a traveller seeking lodgings; and arriving at an open house he enters and finds a man lying on a bench, apparently alive but speechless. He next addresses the wife, who is in bed with a like result, and being tired he gets into bed. In the morning when the traveller has risen, the wife, no longer able to remain silent, furiously enquires of the husband what sort of a man he is to permit a stranger to occupy his bed. 'Fool, fool!' the man replies; 'get up and shut the door.' Blunt in the old Scots language meant stripped, bare, naked; and equivocally that meaning may be attached to the quotation of Dunbar.

The ballad of Burns correctly states that Johnie Blunt 'bears a wondrous fame, O,' and it can scarcely be doubted that the legend on which he wrote is very old. The more modern Scottish version of the tale entitled The barrin o' the door, and written for general use, was first published in Herd's Scots Songs, 1769, 330, and is still very popular. It begins as follows:—

'It fell about the Martinmas time,
And a gay time it was then;
When our guidwife had puddings to make
And she boiled them in the pan.'

One of the 'two gentlemen' in this case proposes to shave the man with the pudding soup, and the other is to kiss the wife. The man, like Johnie Blunt, first breaks into speech.

I see no reason to doubt the assertion of Stenhouse that Burns communicated the tune Johnie Blunt, which was with the verses originally published anonymously in the Museum, and have so remained until now.

* No. 336. Upon the Lomonds I lay, I lay. This very well-known song, with its gay melody, is reproduced in nearly every miscellaneous collection of Scottish Songs, but Burns is never connected with it, and this is the first time the verses are published as his work. They were originally published anonymously in the Scots Musical Museum, 1790, No. 299, from Burns's MS. now in the British Museum, and Burns styles them 'Mr. Burns's old words' in Law's MS. List. A note in the index of the Museum gravely states that the song 'is said to be composed on the imprisonment of Mary, Queen of Scots, in Lochleven Castle.'

The music is at least as early as the first rebellion. In the year 1716, when Argyle's Highlanders entered Perth and Dundee, the three companies had distinct pipers who respectively played The Campbells are coming Oho, Oho!; Will thou play me fair play, Highland ladie; and Stay and take the breiks with thee (Wodrow Correspondence, vol. xi. No. 96). No verses for the tune are found earlier than those entitled The Clans in Loyal Songs, 1750, the first stanza of which is:—

'Here's a health to all brave English lads,
Both lords and squires of high renown,
That will put to their helping hand
To pull the vile usurper down;
For our brave Scots are all on foot,
Proclaiming loud where'er they go
With sound of trumpet, pipe and drum;
The Clans are coming, Oho, Oho!'

This may have been the parody of an earlier popular song, but none is known, and Burns's verses in the text are the original on the Campbells. The instrumental tune Campbells are coming Oho! is in Bremner's Reels, 1761, 83; and the Caledonian Pocket Companion, 1751, iii. 12. It is one of the irresistible melodies of Scotland which Mr. Glen says is in Walsh's Caledonian Country Dances, c. 1745, entitled Hob or Nob.

*No. 337. Twa bonie lads were Sandy and Jockie. Scots Musical Museum, 1790, No. 283, anonymous. In Gray's MS. List marked by Burns, 'Mr. B— words,' and in Law's MS. List, 'Mr. Burns sent words to this beginning "Twa bonie lads were Sandy and Jockie."' The original of Unfortunate Jockey is a song of ten stanzas by Durfey in The Royalist, and which, according to Chappell, was printed on a broadside with music in 1682. The verses alone are in 180 Loyal Songs, 1685, 282. Of the words of Burns in one stanza in eight lines, as in our text, only the first two lines are borrowed from Durfey, the rest are original. The tune in the Museum, a variation of the English melody, can be seen in Bickham's Musical Entertainer, 1737, i. 59, as in our text; and in Calliope, 1739, i. 128; both with an embellished design representing the lovers fighting a duel. The rapier of Sawney has pierced Jockey's unfortunate body fore and aft.

*No. 338. Its up wi' the Souters o' Selkirk. Scots Musical Museum, 1796, No. 438. The MS. is in the British Museum with a note, also by Burns, 'This tune can be found anywhere.' Tytler is his Dissertation regarded the song of the Sutors o' Selkirk as coeval with The flowers of the forest, and stated that it was founded on the story of the Town Clerk of Selkirk conducting a band of eighty souters to fight for the king at the battle of Flodden. Ritson cynically replied that all the shoemakers of Scotland could scarcely have produced such an army at a time when shoes were so little worn there. Sir Walter Scott, sheriff-depute of Selkirk and a member of the honourable fraternity of Souters, wrote a long note in his Minstrrelsy (ed. 1873, iii. 317) to prove that the 'souters' were an old body, but that the connexion of the song with Flodden is altogether improbable. The fragment communicated by Burns was originally published in the Museum. He probably obtained the first four lines from Herd. The following addition is the middle stanza of the version in Scott's Minstrrelsy:—

'Fye upon yellow and yellow,
And fye upon yellow and green
And up wi' the true blue and scarlet,
And up wi' the single-soled shen.'

Stenhouse quotes (Illust. page 390) two double stanzas which he heard sung 'in his younger days,' containing a variation of the above verse of Scott.

Although the Burns fragment was the earliest publication in 1796, the tune with the title was printed in Craig's Scots Tunes, 1730, 28. A variation of the music is in Apollo's Banquet, 1687, entitled a Scotch hornpipe, and also in the edition of 1690 as a dance tune in nine-four time. The tune is also in McGibbon's Scots Tunes, 1746, 31; Caledonian Pocket Companion, 1743, i. 34; McLean's Scots Tunes, c. 1772, 19; Aird's Airs, 1782, ii. 197; and in the Museum with Burns's words. His name is never mentioned as the original contributor of the verses of the Souters o' Selkirk.

*No. 339. Our lords are to the mountains gane. This, the earliest and the best Scottish version of the vigorous border ballad Hughie Graham, is from Burns's MS. in the British Museum. It was originally published in the Scots Musical Museum, 1792, No. 303, with a variation (noted in the text) of two lines in the tenth stanza. The following is in the Interleaved Museum:— 'There are several editions of this ballad.—This is from oral tradition in Ayrshire, where, when I was a boy, it was a popular song.—It originally had a simple, old tune, which I have forgotten.' According to Cromek the third and eighth stanzas are original by Burns, while the rest was corrected by him, but there is no evidence for the statement. The eleventh and twelfth stanzas are obscure. Since Burns, several versions have been printed and all more or less altered by collectors. Ritson, Scott, Chambers, and others all differ from one another, and two traditional versions of the Burns set are at Abbotsford. The best selections can be seen in Child's Ballads, 1890, iv. 8. The English version, entitled Life and death of Sir Hugh of the Grime, is in the Roxburgh Ballads; and in Durley's Pills, 1720, vi. 289, marked to be sung to Chevy Chase. The basis of the tale is the same, but verbally the difference is very considerable, and no comparison can be made. The scene of Burns's tale is Carlisle; some of the others place it in Stirling. It is alleged that the 'wanton bishop' was Robert Aldridge, Lord Bishop of Carlisle, to whom was issued bills of complaint in 1553 against four hundred borderers for burnings, murders, mutilations, &c. Hughie Graham may have been one of the number, but there is no historical evidence for connecting the legend with this bishop. The melody being unknown to Burns, the editor of the Museum set the verses to Druimionn Dubh, see No. 32, a Celtic air.

*No. 340. As I cam down by yon Castle wa'. Scots Musical Museum, 1792, No. 326. The MS. is in the British Museum, and his note in the Interleaved Museum is: 'This is a very popular Ayrshire song.' Stenhouse knew the source of the verses published in the Museum, and records that 'both the words and music were transmitted by Burns to Johnson.' (Illust. page 311.) The earliest symptom of the ballad is a short fragment in Herd's MS. and printed in Scottish Songs, 1776, ii. 6. It begins:—

'O, my bonny bonny May, will ye not rue upon me
A sound sound sleep I'll never get, until I lye ayont thee.'

but Burns's version gave the first intelligible account which ultimately expanded into the numerous stanzas of the Laird of Drum where a brisk dialogue takes place between the Laird and a saucy 'bonny May,' whom he found shearing barley. At first she would not wed him at any price, but ultimately consented, and he won 'Peggy Coutts' without money or education. As the Laird had for his first wife in 1643 the fourth daughter of the powerful Marquis of Huntley, he got into disgrace with his kin. The ballad with a note is in Kinloch's Ballads, 1827, 199. (See No. 342.) The tune as in the text was originally printed in the Museum with the verses. If it bears a somewhat distant resemblance to another Scottish melody, it is nevertheless an excellent variant.

*No. 341. O, where hae ye been Lord Ronald, my son? In the Scots Musical Museum, 1792, No. 327, from Burns's MS. in the British Museum, entitled Lord Ronald, my son. 'The fragment of this ancient ballad, with the beautiful air to which it is sung, were both recovered by Burns and placed in the Museum': (Stenhouse, Illust. 311). Later versions appear in Scott's Minstrelsy, 1803, iii. 292; Kinloch's Scottish Ballads, 1827, 110, entitled Lord Donald, where the young man's sweetheart poisons him, with 'a dish of sma' fishes.' The legacy he leaves with his mother is described in the last two lines:—

'The tow and the halter for to hang on yon tree,
And lat her hang there for the poysoning o' me.'

A selection of versions entitled Lord Randal is in Child's Ballads, 1882, i. 151. The legend is dispersed over the continent of Europe, and Child states that it is current in German, Dutch, Magyar, Slavonic, Italian and other languages.

Burns refers to the tune as follows: 'This air, a very favourite one in Ayrshire, is evidently the original of Lochaber:' (Interleaved Museum). The air Lord Ronald is derived from Lochaber, which in its turn comes from King James March in Ireland, appearing for the first time in Leyden's MS. 1692, and again in Atkinson's MS. 1694. The tune obtained the title Lochaber for the first time from Ramsay's well-known song in the Tea-Table Miscellany, 1724, and the music is in Craig's Scots Tunes, 1730, 26; the Orpheus Caledonius, 1733, No. 20; and later collections. The three melodies differ in detail from one another, and the assumption that the King James March is de facto the original is founded on its prior appearance; but the Lord Ronald air in the text which Burns communicated to Johnson's Museum, having only one movement, and the others being double tunes, goes to confirm the theory of Burns that the simpler air, although last printed, may be the earliest of the three.

*No. 342. As I went out ae May morning. Originally published in the Scots Musical Museum, 1792, No. 397, from Burns's MS. now in the British Museum. The verses in a large measure are his work. 'The words and music of this old ballad were communicated to Johnson by Burns in the poet's handwriting': (Stenhouse Illust. 359). A short fragment is in the Herd MS.; and three stanzas in Herd's Scottish Songs, 1776, 6, with only a trace of the Burns version, ends thus:—

'I hae nae houses, I hae nae land,
I hae nae gowd or fee, Sir;
I am o'er low to be your bryde
Your lown I'll never be, Sir.'

The ballad is related to 'As I came down by yon castle wa', No. 340, which see. The tune is somewhat irregular in construction and chiefly in the major mode, closing on the relative minor, not an unfrequent disposition of Scottish melody.

*No. 343. There was a battle in the north. Scots Musical Museum, 1792, No. 346, entitled 'Geordie, an old ballad.' On the MS. of A Country lass in the British Museum Burns wrote the following note concerning the ballad now under consideration: 'Put likewise after this song the inclosed old ballad, as it sings to the same tune. It is rather too long, but it is very pretty, and never that I know of was printed before.' A later version is in Kinloch's Ballads, 1827, 192, with the following chorus:—

'My Geordie O, my Geordie O,
O, the love I bear to Geordie;
The very stars in the firmament
Bear tokens I lo'e Geordie.'

Several versions of the same kind are in Child's Ballads, 1890, iv. 123, but the Burns contribution is a complete tale. According to Kinloch, Geordie was George Gordon, fourth Earl of Huntley whom the Queen Regent sent on an expedition into the Highlands to arrest a robber. Having failed in his mission, he was suspected of complicity with the marauders, and put into prison, but released on a money payment. But the ballad fits George, fifth Earl of Huntley, still better. He was apprehended for treason on February 8, 1562-3, his estates forfeited, and he was sentenced for execution. The latter part of the sentence was delayed, and he remained a prisoner in Dunbar Castle until August, 1565, when he was restored to favour by Queen Mary who made him Chancellor in 1566. After several changes of fortune he died in 1576, when James was king.

Ritson, in the Northumberland Garland, 1793, 33, printed 'A lamentable Ditty' to a delicate Scottish Tune on George Stoole, a horse stealer, who lived in Newcastle. The original broadside was printed by Henry Gosson, c. 1630, and the legend does not differ materially from Geordie and the other variants 'The laird of Gight,' 'George Lukely,' &c., in the ballad collections.

The tune was recovered by Burns. A close copy entitled Oscar's ghost is in Corri's Scots Songs, 1783, ii. 21.

*No. 344. O, I forbid you maidens a'. From Burns's MS. in the British Museum, collated with the original publication entitled Tam Lin in the Scots Musical Museum, 1796, No. 411. Stenhouse first connected Burns with the publication as follows: 'The ballad in the Museum, as well as the original air, were communicated by Burns, in his handwriting, to the editor of that work': (Illust. p. 370). A fragment of forty lines, differing considerably from

Tam Lin, and not even naming him, was previously printed in Herd's Scots Songs, 1769, 300, under the title of Kertonha'; or the fairy Court. It begins:—

'She's prickt hersell and prin'd hersell
By the ae light o' the moon,
And she's awa to Kertonha'
As fast as she can gang.
'What gars ye pu' the rose, Jennet?
What gars ye break the tree?
What gars ye gang to Kertonha'
Without the leave o' me?'

Few of our ballads have earlier or more historical references. The tale of the young Tamline, and a dance Thom of Lyn are named in the Complaynt of Scotland, 1549. In 1558 a licence to print A ballet of Thomalyn was granted to Master John Wallye and Mistress Toye, but no copy is known. Drayton, in Nymphidia, or the Court of Fairy, 1627, introduces Oberon king of the fairies and Tomalin, his relation, as fighting with Tom Thumb. The Queen having given to both combatants a cup of Lethe water; this occurs:—

'Tom Thumb had got a little sup,
And Tomalin scarce kiss'd the cup,
Yet had their brains so sure lock'd up
That they remembered nothing.'

The popularity of Tom Lin caused it to be parodied, for in Wager's Commedia, c. 1575, we have:—

'Tom a lin and his wife, and wife's mother,
They went over a bridge all three together,
The bridge was broken, and they fell in,—
"The devil go with all," quoth Tom-a-lin.'

a further development occurs in the modern song—'Tommy Lin is a Scotchman born.' In Forbes's Cantus, 1666, is a reminiscence of the ballad, thus:—

'The pyper's drone was out of tune,
Sing, Young Thomlin:
Be merrie, be merrie, and twice so merrie,
With the light of the moon.'

These verses were interpolated about 1620 into Wood's Musical MS. of the sixteenth century.

For the long period of nearly 250 years, between the first notice in the Complaynt of Scotland, 1549, and 1796, when Burns's original version was published, nothing was known, except by oral tradition, of the story of Tam Lin. The few stanzas in Herd's collection do not even name the hero; and the corrupted Kertonha', and the omission of Miles-cross tend to conceal any connexion. At what time Tam Lin of the text was composed must be left to the imagination, and from its character it is one of the oldest of its kind. It is specifically Scottish, no counterpart of it is known abroad and no legend outside of the island has been discovered. The earliest copy is in the Glenriddell MS. 1789, and again in 1791. Burns went to Ellisland in the summer of 1788, and immediately formed a close friendship with Robert Riddell of Glenriddell, a noted and enthusiastic antiquarian. I have not ascertained whether Burns communicated to Riddell the ballad of Tam Lin, or vice versa. The fact that the Museum copy was not in print before 1796 goes for nothing, because many of Burns's songs sent before 1789 to Johnson were not published until 1796 and 1803. Professor Child remarks that both Burns and Riddell may have obtained the ballad from the same source. The first twenty-two stanzas of Glenriddell's copy differ from the corresponding Burns (one to twenty-three, omitting stanza sixteen) by only a few words; after that there are considerable verbal differences, including two stanzas in Burns entirely new. These are the eight lines beginning—

‘Gloomy, gloomy was the night,’

The ballad has been often reprinted: Mat Lewis, in Tales of Wonder, altered Burns; and Sir Walter Scott’s version is compounded of the Museum, Riddell, and Herd copies, with several recitals from tradition. Scott subsequently expunged some modern additions which he previously had made. The minute differences in the various versions can be seen in Child’s Ballads, 1884, No. 39. The scene of Tam Lin’s adventures, Carterhaugh, on the river Ettrick near its junction with the Yarrow, is the centre of Scottish ballad minstrelsy. The belief in Elves and Elf-land permeated the whole Teutonic race, and furnishes a large selection of interesting tales of the unsubstantial beings antagonistic to the human family. At the close of the eighteenth century three rings on Carterhaugh were shown where it is said the milk cans of the fairies stood and upon which grass never grew.

The tune named in the Complaynt has not been identified, if it now exists. That in the text was communicated by Burns, and is not found in any earlier collection. Leyden, in the Preliminary to the Complaynt of Scotland, 1801, 274, states that the tune of Tamlene is extremely similar to that of The Jew’s daughter. The present air does not resemble The Jew’s daughter in Rimbault’s Musical Reliques, 1850, 46, taken from Smith’s Musica Antiqua from tradition, and it will not fit the rhythm of any of the known versions of Tam Lin.

* No. 345. Aften hae I play’d at the cards and the dice. Scots Musical Museum, 1796, No. 462. The original MS. of Burns is in the British Museum. Stenhouse states that Burns sent the air with the verses to the editor of the Museum, and Scott-Douglas conjectures that the ballad was picked up in the Highlands during his tour with Nicol. Since that time it has been known as The bonie rantin laddie, Lord Aboyne, &c. Another set of the verses is in The Thistle, 1823, 7; and the two lines in brackets in the eighth stanza of the text are taken from that work to complete the hiatus in Burns. See Child’s Ballads, 1892, iv. No. 240.

According to Buchan, who printed a poor version, the hero was Viscount Aboyne, ultimately created Earl in 1661. He appears to have married the daughter of the Laird of Drum (see above, No. 340), but whether the plebian Maggy Coutts was the mother I have not ascertained.

The tune was afterwards printed in Gow’s Repository, 1802, under the title Lord Aboyne. The melody is captivating, and a distinct acquisition to the folk music of Scotland. There is a tune entitled Rantin ladie in Guthrie’s MS. c. 1670, but I have no account of it.

* No. 346. Our young lady’s a huntin gane. From Burns’s MS. in the British Museum compared with the original publication in the Scots Musical Museum, 1796, No. 424. Stenhouse, in Illustrations, p. 379, states that ‘This ancient fragment, with its original air, were recovered by Burns.’ The ‘lords’ of the ballad were the noble Maxwells, whose castle of Terreagles stood on the banks of the Nith near its confluence with the Cluden. Burns knew Lady Winnifred, the representative of the house, to whom he sent copies of some of his Jacobite songs. No exact prototype of the present ballad is known. Stenhouse erred when he stated that the melody was recovered by Burns. As a North Highland Air it is in M^cDonald’s Airs, 1784, No. 57, entitled My love is fixed on Donald.

* No. 347. ‘O, for my ain king,’ quo’ gude Wallace. From a holograph in the British Museum, compared with the Scots Musical Museum, 1796, No. 484. Stenhouse stated in Illustrations, p. 426, that he was in possession of the manuscript at the time he wrote. The incidents related in the ballad are derived from an Edinburgh Chap-book about 1745, entitled On an honourable achievement of Sir William Wallace, near Falkirk, containing some constructive and many verbal alterations, and in a different metre from that of our text. The source of the tale is in Henry the Minstrel's Wallace, close of book five (edition, 1869, 99). Burns's version and that of the Chap-book curiously enough are almost the only existing specimens of numerous popular songs on Wallace once current in Scotland. Wynton, born about fifty years after Wallace was executed, records that the exploits of Wallace were celebrated in popular song which in his day were traditional. He says (modernized)

'Of his good deeds and manhood
Great gestes I heard say are made;
But so many I trow nought
As he into his days wrought.'

Bower, the historian, about the middle of the fifteenth century, says that after the battle of Roslyn, Wallace went to France, and distinguished himself in suppressing piracy and the English on the continent, as ballads both in France and Scotland testify. The mythical and other astounding deeds of Wallace were orally evident in the time of Henry the Minstrel, circa 1470, and the inevitable fate of popularity is furnished in a parody of two fragments in Constable's MS. of the middle of the seventeenth century:—

'Now will ye hear a jollie gest,
How Robin Hood was pope of Rome
And Wallace king of France.

Wallace parted his men in three
And sindrie gaites are gane.'

Bishop Nicolson, 1696, says that Wallace had his exploits recorded by several hands. (Burton's Scotland, chap. xx.) An English ballad, written in the autumn of 1306, contains some interesting particulars about Wallace and his friend Simon Fraser, and is curious, as repeating the nickname of Edward:—

'Tprot Scot, for thi strif
Hang up thyn hatchet and thi knyf
Whil him lasteth the lyf
With the longe shonkes.' (Ritson's Anc. Bal. 1790.)

The active public career of Wallace in Scotland may be counted by months in the years 1297-8. He has been designated by the Scots an heroic patriot, and by his enemies as a pestilent ruffian. Edward decapitated Wallace on August 23, 1305, and fixed his head on London Bridge. To quench his wounded vanity or pride, Edward paid unpardonable honour to the memory of his implacable enemy by ferociously cutting his dead body in pieces for public exhibition in different parts of the two countries.

The verses in the text are virtually those of all the recent ballads preserved, e. g. Finlay's Ballads, 1807, i. 97; Maidment's Scottish Ballads, 1859, 83, and others; and the reader may be referred to Child's Ballads, 1889, No. 157, for further information. The incidents partake of the marvellous and mythical. Wallace, meeting a 'gay ladye' washing at the well, is told that there are fifteen men in 'yon wee ostler house' who are seeking Wallace, who, disguising himself as an 'auld crookit carl' leaning on a stick, presents himself to the officer disguised in liquor, who, after insulting Wallace, announces that he will give fifteen shillings to any 'crookit carl' who will tell him where Wallace is. The hero replies by breaking the officer's jaw and sticking the rest at the table where they sat. Another fifteen appeared at the gate, and with the help of the host he killed these also.

The tune is only interesting as an archaic example of a melody gathered from the ruins of time. Two melodies, Wallace's March and Wallace's Lament, are in the Caledonian Pocket Companion, c. 1755, but neither has any resemblance to Gude Wallace in the text.

[The four numbers following were sent by Burns in a letter to his friend William Tytler of Woodhouselee, as 'a sample of old pieces' of which he said: 'I had once a great many of these fragments and some of them here entire; but as I had no idea that anybody cared for them, I have forgotten them.' Burns here, as elsewhere, indicated how little he was affected by the historical or narrative ballad, and he paid little attention to the metrical tales which Percy and Ritson edited—a subject so much developed a little later by Sir Walter Scott. The budget collected by Tytler was subsequently utilized by Scott, Jamieson, Motherwell, and others. The four fragments of Burns are here reprinted from the text of Cromek, the originals from Tytler being missing.]

*No. 348. Near Edinburgh was a young son born. Cromek's Scottish Songs, 1810, ii. 204, entitled 'Young Hynhorn, to its own tune.' This is the earliest version of a vernacular ballad founded on the most ancient metrical tale connected with the South of Scotland or the kingdom of Northumberland. Whether Burns added anything of his own when he sent the fragment to Tytler in 1787 is immaterial from a literary point of view, but at any rate he was the first to discover the popular version. The tale exists in three English and three French MSS. of the thirteenth century, all more or less differing in detail from one another. A seventh version in one of the Auchinleck MSS. is a Northumberland legend in Scottish orthography, of which the following is an outline:—Hutheolf, king of Northumbria, fought and defeated the invading Danes on 'Allerton more' in Cleveland, gave a feast at Pickering, afterwards went to York and proclaimed his son Horn his successor. Nine months later, three Irish kings with an army invaded his country, his forces were victorious, but Hutheolf was slain. Taking advantage of Horn's youth and inexperience, an 'erl of Northumbria' seized the kingdom, and compelled Horn to fly 'fer South in Ingland' to the court of king Houlac, who educated him for apparently the space of seven years. His beauty fascinated the king's daughter Rimineld, but the father was obdurate and offensive, and Horn fled under an assumed name; not however before receiving a gold ring from Rimineld, which she said would change its colour when she became unfaithful to his memory. Seven years afterwards when sailing the seas, or on Sarascenic land fighting the infidels, the ring of priceless virtue and value 'grew pale and wan,' and compelled him to come back: meeting a palmer he exchanged dresses, and in this disguise was hospitably received by King Houlac. Rimineld served the guests with wine, and when she came to the palmer he dropped into the cup the ring which she recognized. In due time she discovered her long lost lover, to whom she related her unwilling betrothal to a knight of her father's choice. Horn, having recovered his kingdom of Northumbria, was wedded to Rimineld with Houlac's consent, 'and they all lived happily ever after.'

Chaucer refers as follows to this tale in 'the second fit' of his satirical ballad 'Sir Thopas':—

'Men speke of romances of prys,
Of Horn child and of Ypotys,
Of Bevis and Sir Gy,
Of Sir Libeux and Pleyn-damour,
But Sir Thopas, he bereth the flour
Of loyal chivalry.' (Skeat's Chaucer, iv. 196.)

The verses in the text, like those of Tam Lin, are remarkable examples of the vitality of popular poetry. Burns could not possibly have got the ballad in a modern Scottish dress except from tradition, for the metrical tale of King Horn had not then been printed, and was not known except to a very few literary antiquarians. Until 1827, when Motherwell published the 'complete' ballad made up from the Burns version and 'from recitation,' nothing but the Burns was in print. In Kinloch's Scottish Ballads, 1827, 135, is the most complete version. One of the imaginative editors closes with the following:—

‘He stood up erect, let his beggar weed fall,
And shone there the foremost and noblest of all;
Then the bridegrooms were chang'd and the lady re-wed
To Hynde Horn thus come back, like one from the dead.’

A complete analysis of Young Hyn Horn will be found in Child's Ballads, 1882, i. No. 17. The legend of King Horn is known in all European countries.

I have failed to discover in any English or Scottish collection of music the tune of Hynd Horn, and the music in the text is taken from Motherwell's Minstrelsy, 1827, App. No. 13, which there is said to be the traditional air of the ballad.

*No. 349. What merriment has taen the Whigs? From Burns's MS. in the British Museum, entitled The German lairdie, which is referred to in Gray's MS. Lists. The verses were sent to Johnson, but were not inserted in his Museum. In Hogg's Jacobite Relics, 1819, i. 146, is a song of twelve stanzas, without a chorus, beginning:—

‘What murrain now has taen the Whigs?
I think they're all gone mad, Sir,
By dancing one-and-forty jigs,
Our dancing may be bad, Sir.’

The second stanza is a variation of that of Burns, but neither is an improvement. The Ettrick Shepherd obtained his verses from the collection of Sir Walter Scott. The present well-known popular song The wee, wee German lairdie, partly if not entirely written by Allan Cunningham for Cromek's spurious antique Nithsdale and Galloway Songs, 1810, has no resemblance to Burns's words, which are probably the remnant of Jacobite verses. The tune from the MS. of Burns, now in the possession of John Adamson, Esq., of Brooklands, Dumfries, is not in any printed collection, is quite unknown, and is now printed for the first time. The music in the MS. is obviously imperfect, and wants two bars in each of the two sections to complete the rhythm. These I have added by repeating the fifth bar and doubling the measure of the sixth in each of the two sections.

*No. 350. O, that I were where Helen lies. Scots Musical Museum, 1788, ii. No. 155, from Burns's MS. now in the British Museum. Hitherto Burns's name has not been coupled with this well-known ballad, and his connexion with its appearance in literature may properly be described here. Writing to George Thomson in July, 1793, he says: ‘The old ballad, “I wish I were where Helen lies,” is silly to contemptibility. My alteration in Johnson is not much better. Mr. Pinkerton, in his what he calls Ancient Ballads, has the best set. It is full of his own interpolations.’

The earliest notice is the title of an air Where Helen lies, in lute tablature in Blaikie's MS., 1692, without words. The music fits the verses in the text, and incidentally confirms the existence of the ballad in its present rhythm before the close of the seventeenth century.

The ballad, or at least the melody, was known to Allan Ramsay, who wrote for it a song entitled, ‘To — in mourning’ beginning, ‘Ah! why those tears in Nelly's eyes,’ printed in the Tea-Table Miscellany, 1724. The verses were in honour of one of Ramsay's patrons, and have nothing in common with the legend of the tragic ballad, which was told by Pennant in Tour of Scotland, 1774, 88, often reprinted, and too well known to require repetition. The ‘ballad’ was not quoted by Pennant, but in ‘Poetical Legends [John Tait] London: printed and sold by John Donaldson, 1776,’ is the original publication in thirteen stanzas. Tait, the editor, takes care to state that he collected it before Pennant's Tour was published. Pinkerton's version in six stanzas referred to by Burns is in Tragic Ballads, 1781, 79, and it is in the same incorrect metre as Ramsay's verses, the last stanza of which is:—

'Take, take me to thy lovely side,
Of my lost youth, thou only bride!
O take me to thy tomb!
I hear, I hear the welcome sound,
Yes, life can fly at sorrow's wound,
I come, I come, I come.'

In the Gentleman's Magazine, July, 1783, there are four stanzas—quoted by Ritson—written by 'Thomas Poynter, a pauper,' the first being:—

'T' other day as she worked at her wheel,
She sang of fair Eleanor's fate,
Who fell by stern jealousy's steel
As on Kirtle's smooth margin she sate.'

The next publication in order of time is that of Burns in the text, to which I will refer farther on.

In Lawrie's Scottish Songs, 1791, i. 257, there are four stanzas, being the first, third, sixth, and seventh of Burns.

Ritson, who states that he obtained his version from Tytler the historian (the friend and correspondent of Burns), printed it in Scottish Songs, 1794, i. 146, as the first, sixth, and seventh verses in the text, with a fourth made up from the rest.

In Sinclair's Stat. Account of Scotland, 1794, xiii. 275 (footnote), is a version of fourteen stanzas, chiefly founded on that of the Poetical Legend version. It is only remarkable for an interpolated stanza which has never been reprinted. A note supplementary to that of Pennant states that the ballad 'is said to have been written by Adam Fleming when in Spain.'

Sir Walter Scott, in Minstrelsy, 1802, appropriated almost the whole of the Statistical version, dividing it into two parts: the first, consisting of six stanzas (now disregarded) beginning, 'O, sweetest sweet, and fairest fair,' and the second part of ten stanzas containing the whole of that in the text, with the following new verse which Scott got from the Glenriddell MS.:—

'As I went down the water-side
None but my foe to be my guide;
None but my foe to be my guide
On fair Kirkconnel Lee.'

The second part of Scott's version is that which is now reprinted in all modern collections, including Child's Ballads and Palgrave's Golden Treasury. In the Glenriddell MS., 1791, or three years subsequent to the publication in Johnson's Museum, is a version of sixteen stanzas, the most comprehensive discovered, and which Riddell states that he got from 'Mr. Henderson's MS.' At the time the ballad was collected Burns was on terms of close intimacy with Riddell, and the poet may have been instrumental in procuring the version. To the Poetical Legends of 1776 we must undoubtedly return for the original publication; and Burns's version agrees closest with it. The eight stanzas in our text are Nos. 13, 5, 8-12, and again the 13th of the Legend copy more or less varied. Of Burns, the third, fourth, and fifth are nearly identical; the first, sixth, seventh, and eighth contain verbal alterations and amendments; and the second is considerably varied and improved, as may be seen on comparing it with the original, as follows:—

'O Helen fair, beyond compare,
I'll wear a garland of thy hair,
Shall cover me for evermair,
Until the day I die.'

The tune attached to the ballad in Johnson's Museum is a masterpiece of musical dullness, and it retarded the vocal popularity of the verses for more than half a century. The music in Barsanti's Scots Tunes, 1742, and in McGibbon's Scots Tunes, 1768, iv. 93, is evidently a remote and unsingable translation of the tablature tune of 1692. Where Helen lies now given in the text is from Mr. John Glen, who favoured me with a copy. Various traditional melodies of the ballad are in use, but the simplest is that in Graham's Songs of Scotland, 1849, iii. 104.

*No. 351. O, heard ye of a silly harper? The title of this ballad The Lochmaben harper is in Burns's handwriting in Gray's MS. Lists before the year 1790, as an instruction for the insertion of the verses in the Scots Musical Museum, which however were not published until 1803. Several songs of Burns named on the same sheet were not published in the Museum before 1796 and 1803. It is necessary to make this statement because Professor Child does not appear to have known that Burns contributed the ballad to the Museum, where it was originally published with its melody, and because very nearly the same copy is in the Glenriddell MS. 1791. Burns's connexion with Riddell is described in the note on No. 344 supra, and the same remark is applicable to the Lochmaben harper as to Tam Lin. Stenhouse says: 'This fine old ballad with its original melody was recovered by Burns and transmitted to Johnson for his Museum.' (Illust., p. 497). The manuscript has disappeared. None of the original Burns papers belonging to the sixth volume of the Museum are in the British Museum. They seem to have been dispersed in Edinburgh shortly after publication, and some have not yet been recovered. The Lochmaben harper was originally published in Scott's Minstrelsy, 1802, considerably varied and altered, but I have no doubt that the Museum MS. was in Burns's handwriting. The last unnecessary stanza in Scott is a modern interpolation, as follows:—

'Then aye he harped, and aye he carped,
Sae sweet were the harpings he let them hear;
He was paid for the foal he had never lost
And three times ower for the gude gray mare.'

Both the versions of Burns and of Scott can be seen in Child's Ballads. The Lochmaben harper is an excellent humorous specimen of Scottish ballad literature, and is notable as containing one of the very few references to the harp in Scotland. Since the end of the fifteenth century the use of the instrument has ceased, and even then it was little used. The harp of Mary Queen of Scots is said to be preserved, but at no time for many centuries has the harp been a national instrument. Its introduction and cultivation were Celtic.

The tune in the text is from the Glenriddell MS. 1791, and, with the exception of a clerical error in the MS. here corrected, is the same as that printed in the Museum, No. 579, with the verses.

*No. 352. Nae birdies sang the mirky hour. Cromek's Scottish Songs, 1810, ii. 196. This fragment sent to Tytler belongs probably to more than one song, and refers to events occurring at least as early as the seventeenth century. Sir Walter Scott supposed that one of the characters might be John Scott, the sixth son of the Laird of Harden, murdered in Ettrick Forest by his kinsmen the Scotts of Gilmanclough. There is also a tradition that the hero was murdered by the brother either of his wife or betrothed bride. The first printed 'Yarrow' verses are not the oldest. From some tradition similar to that in the text, both Ramsay and Hamilton of Bangour wrote ballads with almost the same opening line 'Busk ye, busk ye, my bonny bonny bride'; both published in the Tea-Table Miscellany, 1725. Hamilton's song was reprinted in a small unauthorized edition of his Poems in 1748, remarkable for a preface attributed to Adam Smith, the celebrated author of the Wealth of Nations. The well-known 'Willy's rare and Willy's fair' was first printed in the Orpheus

Caledonius, 1733, No. 49. The subject of all these is the same as the verses in the text, but there is no verbal or metrical connexion. In the Herd MS. is a variation of the eighth stanza in a different metre, as follows, marked for the tune Mary Scott:—

'O, when I look east, my heart is sair,
But when I look west it's mair and mair;
For then I see the braes of Yarrow,
And there I lost for aye my marrow.'

This fragment is all that was known of the traditional ballad until Burns sent his contribution to Tytler. What alteration or variation he made it is now impossible to say.

The tune Willy's rare was first printed in the Orpheus Caledonius, 1733, No. 49, and the copy there is that now printed in all collections of Scottish song. The music Sweet Willy, as in the text, is a translation from Blaikie's MS. 1692, and, if anything, is a better set than that usually printed.

*No. 353. Bob Roy from the Highlands cam. Cromeck's Scottish Songs, 1810, ii. 199. It is stated in Motherwell's Minstrelsy, 1827, p. xciii, that this ballad first appeared in The Thistle, 1823, which of course is incorrect. In Maidment's North Countrie Garland, 1824, 44, there is a complete version from the MS. of R. Pitcairn, 'who took it from the recitation of Widow Stevenson.' This version, like that of Burns, is distributed between two melodies, but not the same as those in the text. Young Rob Roy, son of the celebrated cateran, was a chip of the old block. At twelve years of age he shot a man, and was outlawed, fled to the continent, enlisted in the British army, was wounded and taken prisoner, was exchanged and returned to Scotland, where he married a respectable woman who lived only a few weeks. Thus Professor Child, in Ballads, 1890, iv. No. 225, out of Maclaurin's Criminal Trials. For the crime of abducting Jane Key, aged 19, heiress of Edinbelly, Stirlingshire, and compelling her to go through a sham marriage ceremony, Robert Oig was tried, convicted, and executed in 1753 at the age of thirty-one. Abductions of various kinds were not uncommon in Scotland, and illustrate marriage by capture as late as the middle of the eighteenth century. The tune is that of Song No. 266.

*No. 354. Rob Roy was my father ca'd. The tune in the text was known in Scotland up to the year 1733 as Jenny beguil'd the webster, its title in the Orpheus Caledonius, 1733, No. 37, as in the text. It is so named for a song in Ramsay's Miscellany, 1725. Afterwards it becomes Jenny dang the weaver, as in Bremner's Reels, 1759, 54; Stewart's Reels, 1761, 13; Campbell's Reels, 1778, 23; and the Scots Musical Museum, 1788, No. 127.

APPENDIX.

UNCERTAIN.

*No. 355. O, Donald Couper and his man. Scots Musical Museum, 1792, No. 334, entitled Donald Couper. On the authority of Stenhouse alone this is inserted as an amended fragment by Burns from Herd's Scottish Songs, 1776, ii. 229, and further evidence is desirable. The verses are a reminiscence of an English ballad printed without music entitled A nosegay of pleasure growing in Venus's garden, in 180 Loyal Songs, 1685, 354, marked for 'the tune Daniel Cooper,' and beginning:—

'A bony lad came to the Court,
His name was Donald Couper;
And he petitioned to the king
That he might be a Trowper.'

The tune is in the Dancing Master, 1697, and both words and music in Durfey's Pills, 1719, v. 88. The hero obviously was one of the many soldiers of fortune whom Scotland shed, and a trooper in the army of Montrose, who was executed in Edinburgh in 1650. The licentious and satirical ballad relates the adventures of Donald in London, where he went to seek his fortune. The music was sufficiently well known to attract the attention of the writer of the Highland Host, 1697, where it is named as a dance tune. The music in our text (not the same as the English tune) was printed originally in the Museum. In Aird's Airs, 1782, ii. No. 12, is a much corrupted copy of that in Durfey's Pills.

*No. 356. O'er the moor among the heather. The only excuse for inserting here this fine song is the fact that it was entirely unknown until it was printed in the Scots Musical Museum, 1792, No. 328, from Burns's MS. The explicit account of the authoress by Burns in the Interleaved Museum forbids its entrance among his works. How much or how little is his own cannot be ascertained; but as the discoverer, at least, he will always be associated with it. His extraordinary statement is as follows: 'This song is the composition of a Jean Glover, a girl who was not only a w— but also a thief; and in one or other character has visited most of the correction houses in the west. She was born, I believe, in Kilmarnock. I took the song down from her singing as she was strolling the country with a slight-of-hand blackguard.' Some previous verses with the title must have existed, because the tune O'er the muir among the heather is in Bremner's Reels, 1760, 77, published, according to C. K. Sharpe, when Glover was only two years old. The tune was well known, for it is repeated in Stewart's Reels, 1761, 9; Campbell's Reels, 1778, 15, and elsewhere. A tune We'll all go pull the hadder is named in Gedde's Saints Recreation, 1683.

*No. 357. As I lay on my bed on a night. Scots Musical Museum, 1803, No. 581. Stenhouse remarks: 'This fragment of an ancient ballad, with its melody, was recovered by Burns, and transmitted to Johnson for the Museum.' (Illust. p. 498.) There is no Burns MS. to confirm this statement. It is quite certain that Burns knew the melody Go from my window, love, do, for when he was comparatively young he wrote for it one of his earliest songs; see No. 307. More than three hundred and fifty years ago a popular song with a similar title was parodied in The gude and godlie Ballads, and the imitation begins:—

'Quho is at my windo? quho, quho?
Go from my windo, go, go!
Quho callis thair sa lyke a strangair?
Go from my windo, go.'

(Reprint Scottish Text Soc.)

The 'profane' song was not confined to Scotland, for there were several versions and at least two different melodies of the song current in England for nearly a century. In 1588 a licence was granted to print a black-letter ballad Goe from the Window. In Beaumont's The Knight of the Burning Pestle, 1611, Old Merrythought sings:—

'Begone, begone, my juggy, my puggy;
Begone, my love, my dear;
The weather is warm,
'Twill do thee no harm,
Thou canst not be lodgèd here.'

Different songs of the same rhythm were sung in the dramas of the close of the sixteenth and early part of the seventeenth centuries. The English tune 'Goe from my window' is in A new book of Tablature, 1596; and as follows without words in the Fitzwilliam MS. c. 1650 (1895, i. 153). The words are from Beaumont's burlesque:—

Go from my win-dow, love, go; Go from my win-dow, my dear;

The wind and the rain will drive you back a-gain, You can-not be lodged here.

The melody is repeated on page 42 of the same collection with variations by Thomas Morley, proving its popularity. It will be observed that this English set is not the same as the tune in the text originally published in Johnson's Museum.

*No. 358. The auld man's mare's dead. Johnson's Museum, 1796, No. 485. In a letter to Johnson about March, 1795, Burns refers to this song as follows: 'See the air in Aird's Selection and the words in the Scots Nightingale.' The song is such an excellent specimen of the Scots vernacular, with a very characteristic Scottish melody, that I give here Burns's recension of the verses, and the melody. He rewrote the second stanza, and verbally altered the rest. The author of the original is stated by Allan Ramsay to have been Pate Birney, an itinerant fiddler in Fife; but the verses in the Scots Nightingale, 1779, 336, are stated to be 'By Mr. Watt,' and the earliest record of the tune is in Aird's Airs, 1782, ii. No. 158. From these two facts it may be inferred that the song referred to by Ramsay is not that which Burns amended, but some earlier and now unknown song.

*No. 359. She sat down below a thorn. Scots Musical Museum, 1792, No. 320. No MS. of these verses is known, and Stenhouse is the authority: 'This ancient and beautiful air with the fragment of the old ballad were both transmitted by Burns to Johnson for the Museum.' (Illust. p. 308.) A smaller fragment of four disconnected stanzas on a similar subject, but more obscure, is in Herd's Scottish Songs, 1776, ii. 237. Since the time of Burns five or six different and expanded versions have been published. Under the head of Lady Anne it is in Scott's Minstrelsy, 1803, iii. 259; and more completely as The Cruel Mother in Motherwell's Minstrelsy, 1827, 161. In Child's Ballads, 1882, No. 20, the whole tale is evolved. The fragment in our text contains descriptive touches, but there is no means of ascertaining what is original. In one of the recensions the child's nurse is described as the murderer. A Scottish Act of Parliament in 1690 prescribed that a mother in certain circumstances was guilty of murder if she concealed a birth, or did not call in assistance in child-bed. The chief point of the tale is dispersed over Europe.

The sweet simple tune is from the original in the Museum. Another and inferior melody is in the Appendix to Kinloch's Ballads, 1827.

*No. 360. It's whisper'd in parlour. This is the fragment of a ballad here reprinted, simply because Burns was the medium by which the verses and the melody were originally published in the Scots Musical Museum, 1796, No. 461. The original MS. has been lost, and Stenhouse is the authority, as follows: 'This fragment of an ancient song, together with the elegant original little air of one strain, to which the words are adapted, were recovered by Burns.' (Illust. p. 404.) The complete tale—mad and revolting—in Motherwell's Minstrelsy, 1727, 189, describes how 'Lady Marget' was killed by her brother, and how—

'He has howkit a grave that was lang and was deep,
The broom blooms bonnie and says it is fair,
And he has buried his sister wi' her babie at her feet,
And they'll never gang down to the broom onie mair.'

Sheath and Knife, as the ballad is now known in Child's Ballads, 1882, No. 16, is a specimen of several gruesome metrical tales which mark antiquity, and with no particular locality attached to them, as the legends are dispersed throughout Europe.

The tune is rather commonplace, with no particular Scottish flavour.

*No. 361. A nobleman liv'd in a village of late. Scots Musical Museum, 1792, No. 372, entitled The poor thresher, which Burns transmitted to the editor with the following note: 'It is rather too long, but it is very pretty, and never that I know of was printed before.' The MS. of this poor sentimental ballad in the handwriting of Burns is in the British Museum, and it appealed to him as a tiller of the soil out of which he could not extract a living. In sixteen stanzas it describes the work and life of an honest hardworking peasant who, when out walking, casually met a nobleman. The result was a gift of 'forty good acres of land,' and the penultimate stanza is:—

'Because thou art loving and kind to thy wife,
I'll make thy days easy the rest of thy life;
I give it for ever to thee and thy heirs,
So hold thy industry with diligent cares.'

The luck of this peasant was better than 'the three acres and a cow' of the modern politician. I have not thought it necessary to print the sixteen stanzas of the original, which is of English ancestry. A different version is The nobleman and the thresherman in Bell's Songs of the Peasantry. As The thresher and the squire another Oxford traditional set of verses has recently been published in English County Songs, 1893, 68, with a tune quite different from that in our text, which was originally published in the Museum with the verses of Burns.

SONGS UNKNOWN.

Cockabandy. This title is in the handwriting of Burns in Gray's MS. Lists with the note 'Mr. B— words.'

Wha's fou now, my jo is in the same list marked 'Mr. B— words.'

Fair Emma. The note here is 'Fair Emma follows Charlotte a song, the original name unknown'; with the remark from Burns's hand 'Mr. B. next, Dr. B[lacklock].'

Can ye leave me so, laddie? This is the title, with the note in Burns's handwriting 'Mr. Burns's old words,' contained in Law's MS. List. The following fragment in Herd's MS. is most probably the material on which Burns based his verses:—

'Can ye leave me so, laddie,
Can ye leave me so;
Can ye leave me comfortless
For anither jo?'

GLOSSARY

THE Scottish vernacular, commonly known as Broad Scots, is the direct descendant of Anglo-Saxon or Old English, with a mixture of Erse from the Highlands and a sprinkling of French due to the close political and social alliance which subsisted between Scotland and France for several centuries. Most old native Scottish words are to be found in English literature; syne or sine, for example, so well known with a more intense meaning in the present day, is used by Chaucer and other English writers before his time. All the evidence of comparative philology proves that the people of the North of England and of Central and Southern Scotland have best preserved the ancient tongue, and that the language of Wynton, Barbour, Henry the Minstrel, William Dunbar, Gavin Douglas, and Lyndsay is the same (dialectal variations apart) as that of Robert de Brunne, Hampole, Chaucer, and Lydgate. The Scottish dialect is rich in vowel sounds, and it has a smoothness and flexibility which adapts itself to poetry and musical expression. Without taking into account the finer shades, there are at least twelve different vowel sounds in the language of the Songs of Burns, and some of these have no English equivalent. For example, the open a is a much favoured substitute for the more close o, which, as compared with a, is neglected in Scottish orthography. It is remarkable how little the single o followed by a consonant is used in the vernacular of Burns. Except in the combinations such as oo, ou, or ow the absence of the o is striking, and the genius of the language seems to avoid it as much as possible. Decidedly a is the favourite vowel. Another peculiarity is the elision and non-pronunciation of some of the terminal consonants, particularly d and g. The Note prefixed to the Glossary in the first edition of the Works of Burns, 1786, refers only to the terminations in ing and ed. But Burns cancelled this Note, and the following orthoepic instructions appear in all the later editions of his works which he personally revised: 'The ch and gh have always the guttural sound. The sound of the English diphthong oo is commonly spelled ou. The French u, a sound which often occurs in the Scotch language, is marked oo, or ui. The a in genuine Scotch words, except when forming a diphthong or followed by an e mute after a single consonant, sounds generally like the broad English a in wall. The Scotch diphthongs ae always, and ea very often, sound like the French é masculine. The Scotch diphthong ey sounds like the Latin ei.' Burns wrote for the Ayrshire dialect, and his remarks apply to that district. The difficulty of symbolizing the speaking voice is obvious. In speech the quantity, quality, accent, and stress of the different letters, and particularly of the vowels, form a combination difficult to convey in writing, and therefore any illustration here of the actual sounds can only be approximate. Besides, the fact that no two persons hear exactly alike complicates matters still more. Much of the orthography of the so-called Scotch of the modern school of fiction is unauthorized, and the pronunciation is probably intended for the outlander.

The following short and imperfect sketch of the construction and pronunciation of the dialect of Burns is submitted with diffidence as an introduction to those who are not familiar with the subject.

a, a', au, aw, like a in wall, are as ba', ca', lan', gaun, bauld, rauckle, daut, jawpish; the long a in words with an e mute, as in bathe, is exemplified in hame, bane, lane, lave; and the diphthongs ai, ay, as in train, are exemplified in maist, naig, craigie, staig. The ae, and sometimes ea, like the é in French café, are as in nae, brae, wean, teat, healsome. The following with a are the corresponding English words in o; they need no explanation, and are excluded from the glossary: aff, aft, amang, ance, awe, banes, bannet, craft, crap, crawl, drap, fae, gane, gat, haly, hame, lang, langer, law, nane, na, rade, raw, sab, saft, sang, saul, shaw, slae, slaw, snaw, strang, tae, tap, thraw, thrang, twa, wae, wan, warld, warldly, wat, wha, wham, whase, wrang.

ea and e, with a short sound of e as in etch, are found in a large number of words for which it is difficult to give a rule; these for example—brechan, hether (heather), hecht, wecht, heart. Again there are others containing the diphthong and such further combinations, as ee, e'e, ee, the sound of which nearly corresponds to the English in heed, such as bread, breast, swear, head, dread, beet, wee, e'e, ne'er, deip, deil. The dialectic ea is the most uncertain of the vocal compounds, as it is in English. Hugh Miller, in giving evidence, spoke of 'the beer, the wulf, and the baiver' for 'the bear, the wolf, and the beaver.'

I and y in such words as clinkin, bellys, fyfteen are nearly as i in bit. Ie, longer than the long sound of ea, is exemplified in skiegh, prief, rief, pronounced nearly as the English field. The terminal ie is often a diminutive, and in this case is generally a term of endearment or of derision. The Scottish vernacular has cumulative diminutives: thus, a priest, a priestie, a wee priestie, a wee bit priestie, which latter the speaker would hold in very little esteem. Iu, as in French reluire, like kiulte, has no English representative.

O, the common sound in folk, is in fock, bodle, hog, thorn; and o and oa, as in oak, are in jo, rozet, gloamin. Oe and ow like the ou in our, as o'er, o'erlay, o'ercome, owsen, rowte, sowens, bowk, howk, stowp. The discredited o, and sometimes u, is changed into i, as in brither, nither, anither, simmer, hiney.

The diphthongs oo and eu have no equivalent sound in English; but the eu in the French peur are represented in toom, cootie, dewk, beuk, neuk. U and ou are as oo in boot, such as through, clour, stoure, fou, fu', mou', pou, pu', sough, drouth.

There are two sounds of u, the English as in but, found in dunt, lunt, fud, cud, lug, rush, push; and the French u interchangeable with ui, in mul, is found in puir, pure, guid, gude, muir, yule.

The long y with the terminal e mute sounds like the English y in style, as in flyte, gyte, belyve.

The zie or ylie interchangeable is pronounced ye.

B is rarely sounded after m: this clamb, lamb, thimble, timber, chamber are written and pronounced clam, lam, thimle, timmer, chammer or chaumer.

Initial c is like k except when followed by h, when it is as in the English chin, as chiel, chirp, chap, chuckie; otherwise ch and gh are gutturals like the German ach, and both pronounced alike, such are nicht, nicht, bright, bricht, light, licht, sight, sicht, &c. Nch, rch, tch are not gutturals. Of the double gutturals leuch, teuch, spleuchan, cranreuch the English reader must imagine them. Other examples of c are given below.

D is generally dropped after n, as in thunner, thunder; spynnle, spindle; an', and; ban', bond; lan', land; grun, ground; and before g, as in brig, bridge; rig, ridge; pairrick, partridge. Th is substituted for d in such words as shoulder, shoulder; pouther, powder; rither, rudder; ether, adder.

Initial g is nearly always the same as in English. It is usually omitted in writing and always in speaking the terminations ing, as herrin, stockin, snorin, waukin, gangin. Fashionable society at present imitates the Scottish peasant in dropping the final g.

H is never misused in Scotland, and where it is printed it is sounded. Hus (pronounced huz) for us is perhaps, says Dr. Murray, 'the only Scotch word which aspirates an originally simple vowel; and this is not a modern corruption but an ancient form.' Hil for it is still used sometimes. H with c and g combines to form the large collection of Scottish gutturals.

K in a great many cases represents the English ch, thus birk, kirk, theik, kirn, kist, dyke, maikless, whilk for birch, church, thatch, churn, chest, ditch, matchless, which; and k is occasionally substituted for h as in skelf, skriegh, for shelf, shriek.

L is often absent, and is mute after a and u, as in ba', ca', fa', sma', fu', pu', wi'ha', amaist (almost), &c. It changes to a, w, or u after o or a; and is frequently absent before another consonant: thus bawm, stoun, hause, bouk, bow, cow, cauf, faut, fause, gowd, hauf, maut for balm, stolen, hals (the neck), bulk, boll, coll, calf, fault, false, gold, half, malt; but after e and i, l is written and sounded, as for example—

‘That ilka melder wi’ the miller
Thou drank as lang as thou had siller.’

In Scotland the nasals are severely left alone. In England ng in the middle of a word is more than sounded, as in finger, linger, jingle, tingle, Ang-gus. In the Scots vernacular these are pronounced fiŋ'g'r, liŋ'g'r, jiŋ'g'le, tiŋ'g'le, Ang-us. Dr. Murray says that ‘the Northern tongue has a repugnance to the combinations of the nasals m, n, ng with their cognate mutes b, d, and g.’

R is neither glided nor rolled. It is hard in such words as carle, airle, parle, tirl, barn, farm, bairn, girn, dirt, gart, and changes places with the vowel in many words, such as thretty, thirty; dirl, thrill; girn, grin; brod, board; brunt, burnt; warste, wrestle, &c.

The s has the usual English sound, unless influenced by the Erse or French, when it takes sh, as in shneezin, shnuff, pushion (poison), ashet (assiette), gushet (guischet). Followed by u it takes the French sound of eu as sug, succar (sugar), sune, sud.

T is generally mute between particular consonants, and such words as the following: whistle, thistle, fasten, soften, perfect, corrupted, neglected, act, fact are pronounced whussle, thrissle, fassen, saffen, perfeck, corruppit, negleckit, ack, fack.

Probably in the time of Burns w before r was sounded in some words, such as wrang, wright, wrack, but the custom has nearly disappeared.

Adieu! a heart-warm, fond adieu	214	442
Adown winding Nith I did wander	52	369
Ae fond kiss, and then we sever	81	379
A fig for those by law protected	229	447
*Aften hae I play'd at the cards	330	494
Again rejoicing Nature sees	68	375
Ah, Chloris, since it may not be	89	382
A Highland lad my love was born	224	446
A lassie all alone	238	452
Altho' my back be at the wa'	65	374
Altho' my bed were in yon muir	3	351
Altho' thou maun never be mine	15	356
Amang the trees, where humming bees	230	447
Ance crowdie, twice crowdie	195	428
Ance mair I hail thee	80	379
An' Charlie, he's my darling	285	472
And for auld lang syne, my jo	208	433
And I'll kiss thee yet, yet	55	370
And maun I still on Menie doat	68	375
Anna, thy charms my bosom fire	21	357
An' O, for ane-and-twenty, Tam	169	415
An' O my Eppie	115	394
*A nobleman liv'd	349	503
An somebody were come again	273	407
An ye had been where I hae been	282	471
A roscbud by my early walk	30	362
As down the burn they took their way	132	400
*As I cam down by yon castle wa'	323	491
As I cam down the banks o' Nith	240	453
As I came o'er the Cairney mount	287	473
As I gaed down the water-side	105	389
As I gaed up by yon gate-end	23	358
*As I lay on my bed on a night	345	501
As I stood by yon roofless tower	238	452
As I was walking up the street	146	407
*As I went out ae May morning	325	492
*As late by a sodger I chanced to pass	148	408
A slave to love's unbounded sway	47	367
A' the lads o' Thomie-bank	203	431
Awa, Whigs, awa	260	461
Awa wi' your belles and your beauties	52	369
Awa wi' your witchcraft	177	418
Ay, waukin, O.	133	401
Bannocks o' bear meal	269	465
Behind yon hills where Lugar flows	12	354
Behold, my love, how green the groves	94	383

Behold the honr, the boat arrive	77	378
Blythe, blythe and merry was she	29	361
Blythe hae I been on yon hill	39	364
Bonie lassie, will ye go	104	389
Bonie wee thing, cannie wee thing	41	365
Braw, braw lads on Yarrow braes	125	397
But lately seen in gladsome green	306	483
But warily tent when ye come to court me	170	415
Buy braw troggin	255	459
By Allan stream I chanc'd to rove	130	400
By Oughtertyre grows the aik	29	361
By love and by beauty	115	394
By yon castle wa'	283	472
Ca' the yowes to the knowes	105	389
Ca' the yowes to the knowes	108	390
Can I cease to care	87	381
Canst thou leave me thus	146	407
Can ye leave me so, laddie	—	503
Carl, an the king come	273	467
Cauld blaws the wind	301	480
Cauld is the e'enin blast	174	416
Clarinda, mistress of my soul	78	378
Cockabandy	—	503
Come boat me o'er	277	469
Come, bumpers high! express your joy	216	443
Come, let me take thee to my breast	97	385
*Comin thro' the craigs o' Kyle	344	501
Comin thro' the rye, poor body	140	406
Contented wi' little and cantie wi' mair	217	444
Corn rigs, and barley rigs	6	352
Deluded swain, the pleasure	207	432
Dire was the hate at old Harlaw	258	460
Does haughty Gaul invasion threat	236	452
Duncan Gray cam here to woo	160	412
Fair Emma	—	503
Fairest maid on Devon banks	11	354
Farewell, thou fair day	254	458
Farewell, thou stream that winding flows	46	367
Farewell to a' our Scottish fame	242	454
Farewell to the Highlands	240	453
Farewell, ye dungeons dark and strong	292	475
Fate gave the word, the arrow sped	35	363
First when Maggie was my care	187	421
Flow gently, sweet Afton	60	372
For a' that, an' a' that	228	447
For a' that, an' a' that	290	474
For a' that, an' a' that	69	375
For a' the joys that gowd can gie	51	368
For auld lang syne, my dear	209	438
For auld lang syne, my jo	208	433
Forlorn my love, no comfort near	97	385
For thee is laughing Nature gay	75	377

For weel he kend the way, O	174	417
Frae the friends and land I love	286	473
From thee Eliza, I must go	26	359
From the white-blossom'd sloe	82	380
Full well thou know'st I love thee, dear	11	354
Fy, let us a' to Kirkcudbright	250	457
Gane is the day	216	443
Gat ye me, O gat ye me	179	418
Go, fetch to me a pint o' wine	134	402
Green grow the rashes, O	102	388
Guide'en to you, kimmer	200	430
Had I a cave	5	352
Had I the wyte	178	418
Hark the mavis' e'ening sang	108	390
He clenched his pamphlets in his fist	307	484
Hee balon, my sweet wee Donald	136	493
Her daddie forbad, her minnie forbad	160	411
Here awa, there awa, wandering Willie	128	398
Her flowing locks the raven's wing	5	352
Here is the glen, and here the bower	53	309
Here's a bottle and an honest friend	212	442
Here's a health to aye I lo'e dear	15	356
Here's a health to them that's awa	268	465
Here's to thy health, my bonie lass	150	408

Burns and Music.—Writes for a favourite reel, 351. A tune which he could not get out of his head, 352. The measure so difficult, 354. Recommends an air, 356; many beautiful airs wanting words, 356. Verses to suit a favourite air, 357; describes a tune, 357. Notation from the voice, 358. Refers tune to musical editor, 361. Encloses a tune, 365. A cramp'd out-of-the-way measure, 366. Old titles in the spirit of the air, 367. Describes a Gaelic air, 368. A favourite air, 369; Lady Heron's air 'pretty enough,' 369. Ancient song to Ewe-bughts, 371. His song suits the air, 373. MS. of a tune, 374. An English song to the air, 378. Composing for different tunes, 379. One of his best songs for The sutor's dochter, 380; rhythm of an air peculiar and difficult, 380. Better mediocre verses for an air than none at all, 381; favourite air for which he wrote, 381. The rhythm of the music puzzled him, 382; instructs Thomson how air should be printed, 382; does not consider that his song fits the air, 382; refers to the best set of the air, 382. Until he is master of a tune he cannot compose for it, 383.
